Supreme Court Majority Called Hostile, State Rights Opposition Assailed at Hearing of Senate

McReynolds Neutrality Act Is Supported By Roosevelt

Vide Discretion Power Favored Over 'Must' in Pittman Bill.

Measure in House Sure of Passage

Sponsor Calls at White House; Congress Parley to Mold Final Plan.

By Sidney Olson.

The Administration, desiring to obtain wider discretionary powers in permanent neutrality legislation than those outlined in the Pittman cash-and-carry bill, which has passed the Senate, will give unlimited support to the McReynolds measure, which comes before the House today, it was learned last night.

The plan is to pass the McReynolds bill and then to adjust in conference of committees from each chamber more significant differences.

While the President is known to favor an even broader grant of discretion than the McReynolds bill offers, the State Department holds that the latter is superior to the Pittman measure in its grant of discretion.

Calls at White House.

The Pittman bill, in brief, is discretionary as to carry and mandatory as to cash. Thus, the President may decide when and to what extent to invoke the provision banning shipments of war materials to other countries, but, when he so decides, no shipments may be made without transfer of title to a shipment to a foreign country.

The McReynolds bill is discretionary in each case.

The proponent of the later measure, Representative Sam D. McReynolds (Democrat), Tennessee, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, was a visitor at the White House yesterday. His visit was believed to have been concerned with the strategy outlined above, in line with the new Administration position that there are no "must" bills, only "ought" bills.

Conference Fight Seen.

A vigorous fight is expected in conference between the committees from the two chambers if the McReynolds bill is passed substantially in its present form. Senator Key Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, was originally in favor of allowing the President discretion in both cash and carry, but bowed to wishes of the Senate "Munitions Committee bloc"—Senators Gerald Nye, North Dakota; Arthur Vandenberg, Michigan, both Republicans, and Homer Bone, Washington, and Bennett Clark, Missouri, both Democrats. This group, insistent on mandatory legislation requiring that the President do certain things instead of allowing him to exercise a power of choice, is deemed certain to battle to preserve mandatory sections of the bill.

Senator Pittman has been careful to emphasize that his measure is not an Administration bill, but, according to observers, the overwhelming vote by which it finally carried in the Senate, 62 to 6, demonstrated the belief of many Senators that it was a measure approved by the White House. Then even Senator Elbert D. Thomas (Democrat), Utah, who fought consistently in committee and on the floor for very broad discretionary legislation, voted for the Pittman bill.

Moore's Plan Cited.

The hearings of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, as published in full, show that Assistant Secretary of State R. Walton Moore, in his appearances before the committee, advocated permanent neutrality legislation patterned along the lines of the Supreme Court's Chaco decision last December, which held that the President's broad powers in foreign relations should not be subjected to Congressional interference.

In the report which Pittman gave the Senate, Moore is quoted only once in relation to the department's view on the legislation. This is a paragraph in which he said:

"Being a practical man, and my understanding being that in all human probability the Congress is going to retain the mandatory provision, I say the Pittman joint resolution would, as I understand it, be fairly satisfactory." That quotation was regarded in the Senate as a "green light" to go ahead, it is held in some quarters.

However, many other statements Moore made at the hearings, which

U. Va. Roosevelt Royalists Dub Franklin, Jr., Duke of Virginia

Seek Monticello as Home for 'Heir Apparent' While in College.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, March 11.—Militant Virginia royalists, hinting at sabotage, acted swiftly today to plug a crippling gap in their Roosevelt-for-King program.

Stormy scenes marked an emergency session of the University of Virginia chapter, called here upon discovery no heir-apparent had been named to follow "Franklin I" upon the throne.

In an atmosphere electric with excitement the chapter, by overwhelming vote, approved the designation of the president's son, Franklin, jr. as Duke of Virginia and next in line to rule.

Broad hints of a thorough-going party purge were heard in the wake of unconfirmed reports Republican lobbyists had influenced the original legislative report which momentarily threatened permanency of the plan.

By happy coincidence, it was learned, the new archduke already had made definite plans to enter the University of Virginia law school in the fall.

Friends of the President's son revealed he had leased for three years a six-room Colonial home in Charlottesville. They expressed the belief young Roosevelt and Ethel DuPont, whom he intends to marry in June, would occupy the house, a low whitewashed dwelling on Fendall avenue September 1.

The monarchists, however, feeling that an ordinary dwelling perhaps would be beneath the dignity of the archduke and the realm, adopted the following resolution:

"We propose that Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., upon his arrival in Charlottesville, be inducted into the office of Duke of Virginia, Albemarle County, Charlottesville and Crozet, and instead of the modest home which he has leased, that 'Monticello,' the home of Thomas Jefferson, be given to him for his residence during his stay in Charlottesville."

The motion was proposed by George L. Gullette of Blacksburg, recently elected chief monarchy advocate of the university organization, and seconded by Herman Langworthy, jr., of Kansas City, vice monarchy advocate.

Kenrick Sparrow, of South Orleans, Mass., purveyor of monarchial information for the organization, suggested that plans go forward "now" for a pageant of regal pomp and splendor to occur at the time of F. D. R. jr.'s induction into office, and proposed that "Franklin I" compel every citizen of the State to attend. Sparrow's suggestion was adopted by unanimous vote.

French Envoy Denies Need Of U. S. Loan

Bonnet Says Country Can Raise Defense Fund for Itself.

Makes Statement After Treasury Forbids Flotation Here.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Suspicions that the French government was seeking an American loan to finance armaments or for any other reason were dispelled last night by Georges Bonnet, French Ambassador to the United States, when he declared in a Nation-wide broadcast that "France is not asking for any financial aid from any country."

At the same time, Bonnet asserted that neither was his country "trying in the political field to influence the free decisions of others." He said France's only aim on the international stage today is to maintain peace and he asserted that his government was ready to "accept a general reduction and control of armaments."

He cited the present close cooperation between Great Britain and France as a good omen for peace and contended that his appointment as the French envoy here was evidence of French sympathy for the liberal trade policies which Secretary of State Cordell Hull has been advocating. Bonnet signed on behalf of France the riciprocal trade agreement recently negotiated between that country and the United States.

Working for Peace.

The French Ambassador declared that for the maintenance of peace in the world "France believes that the best course to follow is the improvement of economic relations between nations." He added that "she is ready to work unreservedly toward this goal."

Bonnet's radio broadcast was his first public expression of his country's attitude on current problems. His remarks disavowing any intention of seeking financial aid here were regarded as particularly significant in view of the action of Secretary of the Treasury Henry W. Morgenthau earlier this week in denying to the French permission to designate J. P. Morgan & Co., as an agent in this county to pay coupons of the proposed $1,000,000,000 "defense loan" "in cases where payment is requested in dollars."

The outstanding point of the Bonnet broadcast appeared to be his desire to reassure Americans that his country was not contemplating floating a loan in this country. He asserted that "I feel confident that France will be able to straighten out her finances and do it with her own resources."

Appeal to Patriotism.

"For centuries," he continued, "at times equally as dark as the present, she gave proof of her self-confidence and of her patriotism. Today the government is appealing to that patriotism, and I am sure that the French people will respond to it, bringing to the treasury the money which is required.

"France is not asking for any financial aid from this country, nor is she trying in the political field to influence the free decisions of others. Her only aim is peace."

Although in his radio speech, the French Ambassador went no further than these veiled references to the Treasury action in regard to the French "defense loan," it is understood in other quarters that the French government feels that its purpose in seeking the appointment of an agent in New York was generally misunderstood on Capitol Hill, where the suggestion was met with protests.

To Protect France.

It is pointed out that there never was the slightest intention of either soliciting or accepting American subscriptions to the "defense loan," which the French maintain is designed primarily to defend the stability of the franc. The main purpose of the loan, it is asserted, was not for armament purposes.

The reason for making the loan a dollar and pound financial operation, as well as one based on francs—that is it is payable in dollars and pounds, as well as francs—was twofold. The Blum government, first, wished to reassure French investors that they would not suffer through any further devaluation of the franc; secondly, it wished to provide an expeditious manner for the repatriation of French funds in this country.

These French funds comprise part of the foreign funds which recently have flowed into this country from abroad and have been termed by President Roosevelt "hot money." The latter has been a source of in-

2 U. S. Firms Will Expand Canada Plants

To Spend $10,000,000, Transfer Exports as Strike Result.

By the Associated Press.

Toronto, March 11.—Premier Mitchell Hepburn said today two big United States manufacturers had indicated to the Ontario government their intention to spend $10,000,000 in expanding Canadian plants.

The companies, recently harassed by strikes and other labor troubles, the premier said, would manufacture for export goods that now are being manufactured in the United States.

The premier did not announce the name of the companies.

"There is no reason why these United States subsidiary plants in Canada cannot take care of the export trade now being handled by United States plants," Hepburn asserted. "Several manufacturers with international institutions have assured the government of their intention to expand Canadian plants for this purpose."

The premier made his statement after a conference with representatives of the Canadian Manufacturers Association, who indorsed in principle a new minimum wage bill for men, now before the legislature.

G. M. C. Pact Delayed.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, March 11.—Union demands for revised wording sidetracked final settlement of General Motors strike differences tonight just as conferees were reported on the verge of signing an agreement.

As stalemates persisted in three other automotive disputes leaving 75,000 Michigan wage-earners idle, representatives of General Motors and the United Automobile Workers of America delayed approval of a final pact at least until tomorrow.

Both denied the delay had serious significance.

C. E. Wilson, General Motors vice president, said "there are still several things to iron out."

Wyndham Mortimer, U. A. W. A. vice president, insisted that changes had been made by General Motors in a final draft of tentative agreements previously reached, and that "original phraseology" must be restored.

Union and corporation charged violations of the truce that ended the Nation-wide General Motors striges a month ago today.

Don't Like Sit-Downs.

"We don't like these 18 sit-down strikes we've had in 20 days," Wilson asserted. "We already have an agreement of February 11, and if the union doesn't live up to that one, will it live up to another?"

Ed Hall, union conferee, said General Motors also made an agreement February 11, and added, "if they don't live up to this one any better, they will have a lot of sit-downs. Let them put that in their pipe and smoke it."

Hall charged there had been discrimination and discharge of union members for alleged union activity in General Motors plants. The corporation objected to interruptions of production which have occurred in several cities, among them Janesville, Wis.; St. Louis, Mo., and Flint, Mich., because of union sit-downs. The U. A. W. A. have denied they ordered any of the strikes, all of which were settled after brief negotiation.

Conferences between the Chrysler Corporation, whose Detroit area plants employing more than 55,000 are in the hands of sit-down strikers, and the union remained deadlocked today on the union's demand for exclusive bargaining rights. Nor was any progress reported toward settlement of two other automobile industry sit-downs—the Hudson Motor Car Co. in Detroit with more than 10,000 idle, and the Reo Motor Car Co. at Lansing, where 2,200 are without work.

B. E. Hutchinson, finance committee chairman of the Chrysler Corporation, which has instituted injunction proceedings against the strike leaders, said the union seized its plants and offices and excluded officers and employes, adding:

"The extent to which this seizure was organized and carried out is almost too fantastic to believe. * * * One of the largest corporations in the country with the country at peace and under lawfully consti-

'Insult' to American Women In Nazi Press to Be Protested

Hull Orders Dodd to Act After Rabbi's Wife Remonstrates.

By William V. Nessly.

After thrice apologizing to the Hitler government in Germany for anti-Nazi incidents in New York, the United States yesterday sent strong representations to Berlin against bitter German newspaper attacks on American citizens and institutions.

Secretary of State Hull instructed Ambassador William E. Dodd, at Berlin, to make "emphatic comment" to the German foreign office against the wave of articles. Berlin dispatches of the Associated Press last night said the Ambassador had attempted in vain to reach Baron Konstantin von Neurath, the foreign minister, to make the verbal representations called for. It was expected he would be able to arrange the conference today.

The diplomatic disturbance came simultaneously with assertions by Representative Dickstein (Democrat), New York, that "Mr. Hitler is trying to create a world war" and that men in this country are drilling in uniform under the swastika.

The American "comment" to Berlin which does not constitute a for-

SECRETARY CORDELL HULL.

Jackson Says Congress Now Is Responsible for Judiciary.

Wheeler Will Speak For Foes Monday

By Robert C. Albright.

Striking at States' rights opposition to the President's judiciary program and the "frank hostility" of the Supreme Court majority to Administration policies, Assistant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson yesterday told the Senate Judiciary Committee the States' rights argument is heard sympathetically by the court "only when pleaded by private interests in support of laissez faire economics."

Second Administration witness in the intra-party struggle to enlarge the court by six justices, the 45-year-old Justice Department lawyer, who himself has been mentioned for one of the judgeships, sought tactfully to persuade Senators that theirs is the "responsibility for the proper functioning of the Supreme Court."

Open clashes which marked Attorney General Cummings' Wednesday brush with the opposition were lacking, as the witness, adopting a conciliatory attitude, parried questioning lightly, admitted the success of the President's plan hinged on the "judicial complexion" of the new men proposed for the bench, but insisted "the present situation is far more dangerous than any that could be brought about by bringing the court into line with the people."

Wheeler Talks Monday.

Once again, it was the Administration's day in court, the court in this instance the Judiciary Committee. Testimony for the plan will be continued today, and on Monday the opposition will open its statement, placing the liberal Senator Burton K. Wheeler on the stand as first witness. Opposition Senators, meanwhile, planned a three-way presentation of their case tonight in New York's Carnegie Hall. Senators David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts; Edward R. Burke, of Nebraska, and Royal S. Copeland, of New York, all Democrats, will be speakers.

Ceremoniously welcomed to the stand by Chairman Henry F. Ashurst, Jackson opened his testimony yesterday with a 32-page prepared statement, charging the court is now "impaired" in its functioning by serious division in its own ranks, and asserting that the "burden of constitutional responsibility is on Congress."

He said the views of the Supreme Court majority, as expressed in decisions, indicate "an implacable, although unquestionably sincere, opposition to the use of national power to accomplish the powers so overwhelmingly indorsed by the voters."

And he sought persistently to destroy the arguments of States rights opposition to the President's court plan that the Supreme Court is a "protector of the States." He insisted instead "the States rights have become private privileges."

"Few decisions of the Supreme Court can be cited in which any State of the Union has been able to obtain any protection of its own constitutional rights, upon its own demand from the court," he argued.

Assails "State Rights" Plea.

"The States rights argument is heard sympathetically only when pleaded by private interests in support of laissez faire economics to create a 'no-man's land' beyond the reach of both Federal and State power."

Jackson was challenged on this argument by Senators Burke and William H. King, of Utah, members of the Democratic opposition.

Contending there is "a vast power" that has been reserved to the people themselves, and which they have not been willing to turn over to any government, Burke asked:

"Do you believe that we should be able to find any and all power in either the Federal or the State governments, and that if we don't there is a 'no man's land,' in which these powers wander about like spirits of the night?"

"The only powers not given to one or the other are those expressly denied in the Constitution," replied Jackson.

"How about the tenth amendment?" pressed Burke.

"I don't think the tenth amendment ever intended that powers

Italian Force In Spain Is Put At 30,000 Men

Madrid Says Rome Has Made Land Scene of International War.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, March 11.—High government authorities, charging 30,000 Italian soldiers were driving toward Madrid with the insurgent army in Guadalajara, accused Italy tonight of waging an "undeclared war" on Spain.

Foreign Minister Julio Alvarez del Vayo, on behalf of civil officials, and Gen. Jose Miaja, speaking for the government's military command, said the time had come to drop talk of a civil conflict in Spain and brand the war an international one.

Gen. Miaja, commander of all government troops in central Spain, returned from a tour of the warfront and declared his troops were holding their line today, the fourth of intense fighting in the Guadalajara sector northeast of Madrid.

Insurgent forces attacked repeatedly during the day in an effort to extend their advances of the first three days.

The government, digging in strongly, pitted the best units of its air force against the insurgent offensive, sending squadrons on bombing forays over opposing entrenchments and communications while Madrid's most seasoned infantry blocked the highway.

Insurgents Bombarded.

Government artillery, meanwhile, bombarded insurgent concentrations in the El Pardo, northwest of Madrid. A serious blow to Gen. Francisco Franco's forces was struck in University City, where barricaded positions in the agricultural school were blasted to bits by a mine.

In the Jarama Valley, southeast of the capital, defense troops were reported to have improved their lines as the result of a successful day's fighting.

Four Italian officers and 37 soldiers from the ranks, said to have been captured in the Guadalajara fighting, were exhibited by the government as proof of Italian support in the insurgent onslaught against the Aragon high road.

Officials said information disclosed by the captives left no doubt of the presence of a veritable army of Italians on that front. After the hostages, with four others who had been captured the day before, were shown publicly, the defense junta issued the following statement:

"Last night our forces in the Guadalajara sector took by sur-

3 Escape Explosion 2 Miles From Mouth of W. Va. Shaft.

By the Associated Press.

Logan, W. Va., March 11.—Two men died tonight and 17 miners were missing after an explosion far back in the workings of the Mac-Beth Mine of the Hutchinson Coal Co.

Searchers found the bodies of Joe Frye, a motorman, and Troy McCoy, his brakeman.

Company executives declined to express an opinion on the fate of the missing men. Three of the 22 known to have been in the explosion area escaped. A member of a rescue crew said later, however, that there was "no hope" for the trapped men.

Mine officials said the blast occurred at 8 p. m. Less than an hour later rescue crews were entering the mouth, feeling their way cautiously toward the center of the blast.

They made their way through a crowd about the opening, many of them relatives of the missing men. The explosion occurred 2 miles inside.

The men reported in the mine, 8 miles from Logan and in the heart of this bituminous mining country, in the southern West Virginia field, were: Frye and McCoy, Jack Tuschak and his brother, August; Mike G. Imo, Leonard Forbes, Ira Adkins, Lucian Hamilton, Fred McCrockery, colored; Sam French, Gazel Bankovitch, Tuphon Zodalasks, Roland Carnes, Tom Brodocke, Hubert Fleming, George McCormick Columbus Raleigh, Jimmie Wiley, Earl Gearhard, R. B. Kimble, Floyd Field, John Butler and Dow Chamber.

An explosion in the same mine last September killed 10 men.

Veteran Wearing Curls Till South Is Freed Is Dead

Atlanta, March 11 (AP).—James R. "Uncle Jimmy" Jordan, 94-year-old Civil War veteran who swore he would never cut his long white curls "until the Confederacy is free," died today of pneumonia.

Twice wounded, he fought in the battles of Seven Pines, Chancellorsville and Petersburg.

Cincinnatian Chosen to Head Wisconsin U.

Post as Frank Successor to Be Offered to City Manager Dykstra.

By the Associated Press.

Madison, Wis., March 11.—The executive committee of University of Wisconsin regents, the Associated Press learned authoritatively today, will offer the university presidency to Clarence A. Dykstra, Cincinnati city manager.

Dean George Sellery has been acting president since Dr. Glenn Frank was ousted in January, climaxing a bitter fight within the board of regents over charges of administrative incompetence.

A member of the executive committee, who would not allow his name to be used, said the group has selected Dykstra from a long list of prospects, but that the deal had not been closed.

Dykstra, at Cincinnati, would not comment beyond saying no offer had been received from the regents.

The executive committeeman said his group would meet probably Saturday or Sunday to discuss terms with the 54-year-old public official and former professor.

When the committee's choice is presented to the board March 18 and 19, the committee member said, it is "practically certain" it will be approved.

The committee was reported to have set $15,000 as the maximum salary to be paid the new president. Dykstra receives $25,000 a year at Cincinnati. Dr. Glenn Frank was paid $20,000 and expenses for the upkeep of the presidential mansion when he took office in 1921, but the sum gradually was pared to $15,000 by the time he was dismissed.

Before reaching its decision, the committee investigated a score or more prospects. The member said

Co-ops No Road To Utopia, Say Investigators

Federal Agency to Inform Consumers Urged by Investigators.

Holding that "consumer co-operation is not a highway to Utopia," the long-overdue report of the President's Committee of Inquiry on Co-operative Enterprise in Europe, released by the President yesterday, made three specific recommendations:

That a survey be made of consumer and service co-operatives in this country;

That a Government agency be established to give information and advice to consumers' co-operatives;

And that "steps be taken to assure consumer co-operatives credit parity."

The last of the three recommended steps was unexplained in the report as a whole, which was devoted to a factual resume of conditions found by the committee on a ten-week trip through Europe, checked with data collated since their return last autumn.

The committee members include Jacob Baker, Assistant Works Progress Administrator; Robin Hood, secretary-treasurer of the National Co-operative Council; Leland Olds, of the New York power authority; Charles Steuart, of the Export-Import Bank; Clifford Gregory, editor of the Prairie Farmer, and Miss Emily Bates, in charge of data.

The countries covered by the survey were Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Finland, France, Great Britain and Ireland, Norway, Sweden and Switzerland.

In the 400-page volume, which concludes with the individual opinions of committee members on the advantages and disadvantages of the co-operative movement as found in this country as well as Europe, the committee found as a whole that

Campaign to Cut Traffic Toll Spurs Public to Sign Pledges

By Howard F. Wentworth.

(Winner of first prize in the Nation-wide C. I. T. Safety Contest with his 1936 series appearing in The Post.)

Public interest in Washington's current efforts to save lives by traffic control and regulation is showing an encouraging trend toward safety promotion, officials revealed last night.

Traffic and police authorities have received safe driving pledges from scores of District motorists. Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer daily receives communications offering support in his campaign to reduced accident deaths.

"Until we receive 100 per cent support and co-operation," Van Duzer said yesterday, "our efforts are useless. We are gratified that many citizens have recognized our problem. We hope eventually to have everyone lend his support."

Pedestrian Control.

A resolution urging legislation for pedestrian control was adopted at a recent meeting of Internal Revenue Lodge, No. 47, American Federation of Government Employes. Members of the group were admonished to drive and walk with careful regard for the safety of themselves and others.

And this was just one of numerous Governmental groups which have issued traffic warnings to Federal workers.

A safety circular was distributed to 8,000 employes of the Treasury Department. Calling attention to traffic stories appearing in The Post, the circulars were issued by H. G. Kaiser, president of the Treasury Department Beneficial Association.

Today, at 11:30 a. m., a coroner's jury will hear testimony in the death of Frank L. Perry, 49, 465 H street northwest, the city's thirty-fifth traffic victim.

Hit by 2 Autos.

Perry was struck by one auto and crushed beneath the wheels of a second car while crossing Massachusetts avenue on a crosswalk at Fourth street northwest Tuesday night.

An Army Reserve officer—Capt. John C. Meadows, 31—stationed at Fort Belvoir, Va., was being held as driver of the striking vehicle. It was believed at first Perry was hit by the car of Joseph L. Avery, 22, 210 Webster street northwest, but later developments indicated Avery's machine ran over the in-

Thaw Calls Waiter a Liar, Denies Assault; Plaintiff Tells of Dance With War Whoops

Harry K. Thaw, central figure in the most sensational murder trial of the early twentieth century, the notorious Stanford White case, shouted at a District court jury yesterday afternoon:

"The plaintiff lied!"

He was referring to Paul Jaeck, Shoreham head waiter, who earlier testified that Thaw assaulted him at a dinner party at the Shoreham Hotel on January 3, 1935. Jaeck is suing Thaw for $10,000, charging Thaw struck him in the eye with his fist in which he held a lighted cigarette.

"I did nothing of the sort!" thundered Thaw upon cross-examination by the plaintiff's attorney, John L. Sirica.

According to the story the defendant told on the stand, his party for eight guests at the Shoreham came to an unpleasant climax because a bottle of champagne he rejected at the beginning of the dinner was charged on his bill. An argument ensued, he said, which resulted in his being ejected from the Shoreham dining room.

Thaw denied that at any time during the evening he touched Jaeck at all.

Accounts of Thaw's behavior on the occasion in question varied widely, according to which side had a witness on the stand. Mrs. Spencer Sladdin, of New York, wife of a former editor of the NRA Digest, testified in Thaw's behalf. She and her husband were members of his party at the Shoreham. She said the only argument she heard during the evening was precipitated by the charge for the bottle of champagne that Thaw had said was spoiled.

She testified further that the defendant asked her to examine the bill when it was presented to see if he had been charged for the wine.

"Why did he ask you to examine it?" she was asked.

"He had left his reading glasses at home," she replied. "I looked at the bill carefully," she continued. "It was, as well as I remember, about $80. The bottle of wine that could not be used was charged on the bill."

After she informed Thaw of this, she and her husband left the dining room and went to get their wraps. The waiters looked as if they were going to cause a disturbance, she said, "and because of my husband's position, I thought it would be better if we left."

She had known Thaw for about 16 years, she states. The dinner party was arranged in honor of her husband and her. Thaw did

'Nice Boy' Type's Excess Deplored By College Head

Boston, March 11 (AP).—President Tyler Dennett of Williams College, declared today his fears that Williams was growing less and less representative of the American people because its students run "almost uniformly to the 'nice boy' type."

"My idea of a college community is that it should be a cross-section of American life," Dennett told the Williams Alumni Association of Boston, explaining that Williams' "nice boys" came almost exclusively from "good" schools like Hotchkiss, Kent and Deerfield.

tuted civil authorities has been literally captured."

Sheriff's deputies started the service of "show cause" order from the circuit court in the injunction suit against the sit-down strikers. Union shop stewards escorted them into the Dodge plant to read the notice of a court hearing set for Saturday morning. The same order also was taken to union headquarters.

Douglas Grants Demands.

Los Angeles, March 11 (AP).—Strking employes of the Douglas Aircraft Co. voted tonight to return to work after Donald W. Douglas, president of the company, agreed to reinstate 297 men.

President Douglas, of the Santa Monica airplane factory, told a mass meeting of some 3,000 employes the company will accept the United Automobile Workers Union, affiliate of the Committee for Industrial Organization, as collective bargaining agent for its members.

Meanwhile, the John L. Lewis unionization drive continued to dominate Nation-wide labor developments.

The steel workers organizing committee was summoned to Pittsburgh tomorrow by Philip Murray, director of the group, an affiliate of Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization. The parley was called for a review of recent activities and to plan the future.

C. I. O. Gains Reported.

The call coincided with reports of gains for the C. I. O. in two traditional non-union strongholds in the Pittsburgh area—McKeesport, Pa., and the Kiski Valley. Philip Clowes, subregional director, said 8 of 22 employe representatives of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation's Vandergrift plant had swung allegiance to Lewis' group.

Owens Jones, leader of the employe representatives grievance committee, which has been negotiating with Carnegie-Illinois officials, countered that claim with one that steel employes had an awakened interest in the representation plan since the firm signed a contract with the C. I. O. last week.

"The C. I. O. will flop under the uprising," Jones said.

Lewis' "home" union, the twelfth district of the United Mine Workers, announced at Chicago they would push with "every agency at our command" a demand for recognition as the sole bargaining agent for Illinois coal miners.

C. I. O. officials disclosed a vigorous campaign was under way to enroll from 10,000 to 12,000 chemical, tile and gas workers in the Kanawha Valley in West Virginia.

New Faces in Congress

A Tyro in the Nation's Affairs, Rep. Keogh Hastens to Admit

REPRESENTATIVE EUGENE J. KEOGH.

29-Year-Old Brooklynite, Youngest New Yorker in House, Brushes Aside Ideas of Saving the Country.

By Liam Lenihan.

Eugene J. Keogh admits he is a tyro in national affairs and spurns harboring quixotic ideas about saving the country.

"I will try to do what I can for the people I represent," he said yesterday. "Outside of that my main interest will center around democratic legislation."

The 29-year-old Congressman from Brooklyn, who has the distinction of being the youngest Representative from New York State, is tall, fair-haired, reserved. Blue eyes look out at one from behind rimless pince-nez, intensifying the impression of cold austerity and aloofness.

He is unmarried. "These wrinkles (pointing to his forehead) come from business worries, not wife-badgering," he said with an imperceptible twinkle in his appraising blue eyes.

The Democratic Congressman from New York's Ninth District was born in Brooklyn, attended public schools there and in 1927 was graduated from New York University School of Commerce. He then entered Fordham University Law School and rounded out his legal studies in 1930. Two years later he was admitted to the bar and went into private practice with his brother.

Last year, Keogh served in the New York State Assembly and was elected to the Seventy-fifth Congress in November.

He has few hobbies but his work; still retains his practice, but is now leaving "the headaches of the business" to his brother.

Of Washington, he said: "I like it so much I try to get away to New York over each week-end."

Emphasizing the importance of tax legislation, Keogh feels that we cannot spend our way indefinitely into prosperity. At the same time, he does not think that this country should be run on a pay-as-you-go basis.

Two Killers Denied Clemency; Must Go To Chair March 19

Failing to obtain executive clemency, two colored men, John Homer Cummings and Willet J. Marcus, both of Washington, must die March 19 for the murder on January 4, 1935, of Joseph R. Wushnak, meat wagon driver.

President Roosevelt, yesterday making known his decision to take no action in their behalf said he followed the recommendation of Attorney General Homer Cummings.

Synagogue Plans Dr. Gordon Rites

Religious services tonight at the Adas Israel Synagogue will be dedicated as a memorial to Mr. Charles Gordon, prominent Jewish welfare and Zionist worker, who died here February 13. Various local Jewish organizations will participate.

Those participating in the memorial exercises include Joseph A. Wilner, president of the synagogue; Rabbi Solomon H. Metz, Abe Shefferman, president of Grand Lodge, No. 5, of B'nai B'rith; Maurice Bisgyer, director of the Jewish center; Lester Levy, Samuel Bugatch, Mrs. Sol Taishoff and Cantor Louis Novick.

Alabama Judge Rules Reno-Given Divorce Invalid

Birmingham, Ala., March 11 (AP).—A Reno divorce decree was held invalid today in Jefferson County (Birmingham) Circuit Court by Judge E. C. Creel, who ruled that Alabama courts were not bound to recognize a decree issued in the Nevada City.

The jurist said that under Alabama law a Reno divorce is not valid unless a person goes to the Nevada city with intention of making that a permanent residence, and that the full faith and credit clause of the Federal Constitution does not bind a court to recognize a divorce granted in any other State except in the State of marital domicile.

mal protest, was another development from the recent attack by Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York on Hitler, to whom the mayor referred as "a brown-shirted fanatic."

Some of the articles were called to the attention of Secretary Hull by Mrs. Stephen S. Wise, wife of the noted rabbi, herself head of the Woman's Section of the American Jewish Congress.

Mrs. Wise's formal letter said the German press, including Der Angriff, "organ of the minister of propaganda and Enlightenment of the Nazi government," had printed statements to the effect that 1,200 women attending the woman section's luncheon were "women of the streets," and called Mayor LaGuardia "a procurer."

"Surely the State Department," Mrs. Wise wrote, "will insist upon a disavowal of this deliberately insulting and false utterance and an expression of regret from the Nazi government which is responsible for everything that appears in Nazi publications."

Dodd, it was reported from Berlin, is prepared to call to the attention of the German foreign office assertions in the German press that the State Department has handled the LaGuardia case in "shilly shally" fashion, as well as criticisms of social conditions in America.

Dickstein, chairman of the Immigration Committee, told the House Rules Committee he could name 100 spies who are trying to set up a "fascist government" here.

"Two hundred thousand are organized in 14 States now, and there will be a million before the end of the year," he said.

He charged Fritz Kuhn, chemist for the Ford Motor Co., is leader of the Nazi forces here. He said the Nazi organizers had a fund of $20,000,000 at their disposal.

Democrat Deficit Climbs $175,020 In First 2 Months

The Democratic National Committee reported yesterday it took in $174,005 in the first two months of the year and spent $349,025.

The Republican National Committee cut down its deficit by around $47,000, receiving $100,415 and disbursing $42,979.

The reports were filed with South Trimble, clerk of the House, in accordance with the corrupt practices act.

Alf M. Landon, of Topeka, the Republican Presidential candidate, contributed $1,000.

D. C. Father Gets Assault Sentence

Justice James M. Proctor in District Court yesterday gave Edward J. McGee, 23-year-old gas station attendant and the father of three children, a sentence of from 6 to 30 years in the penitentiary following his conviction on a charge of criminally assaulting a 14-year-old Langley Junior High School student.

The girl, it was testified, was on her way home after a school play. As she passed an alley, McGee seized her, beat her and then criminally attacked her. The jury could have recommended capital punishment under District law.

86 Are Graduated From WPA Course

Eighty-six women and girls who completed training courses at two units of the WPA Household Workers Training School last night received graduation certificates at commencement exercises at 1114 O street northwest.

The certificates were presented by Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, president of Bethune Cookman College, Daytona Beach, Fla., and director of Negro work in the National Youth Administration. Mrs. Mercedes S. Wilson, head teacher, was in charge of the exercises.

Miss Perkins Asks Rand to Meeting

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins last night, through news channels, summoned to her office on March 18 James H. Rand, jr., head of Remington Rand Inc., to discuss protracted labor difficulties in the company's plants in three States.

Adopting the unusual procedure because of repeated failure of her representatives to contact Rand, Miss Perkins wrote that "I am making this letter public because I know that it should reach you through news channels". She explained Assistant Secretary Edward F. McGrady and Commissioner of Conciliation P. W. Campbell "have made repeated unsuccessful efforts for several weeks" to get in touch with Rand.

Diplomats Hear Sayre Attack 'Dollar Politics'

Federal Official Praises Reciprocal Accords at Trade Celebration.

Before a gathering of diplomats from South and Central American countries, Francis B. Sayre, Assistant Secretary of State, last night indicted "dollar diplomacy" and praised recent trade agreements which have cut down tariff barriers between this country and its southern neighbors.

Speaking at the Pan-American Night celebration of the Washington Board of Trade at the Mayflower Hotel, the Aissistant Secretary condemned the influence of pressure groups upon American diplomacy in the past and deplored the former policy of military intervention in Latin-American civil wars.

Sayre, son-in-law of Woodrow Wilson, quoted a speech in which the war-time President asked that the United States be a friend and champion of Latin-American countries "upon terms of equality and honor." This attitude, Sayre said, had been developed further by President Roosevelt in his Good Neighbor policy.

He said our exports to Cuba had increased from $35,000,000 in the year preceding the effective date of our trade agreement to $55,000,000 for the first year afterward and to $64,000,000 in the second year. United States trade with other Latin-American countries affected by the trade agreements has also showed "gratifying increases," Sayre stated.

The Assistant Secretary of State warned that "we are still fighting the same kind of special interests and pressure groups making intensive drives upon Washington to gain immediate profit for limited sections of our population at the ultimate cost to our Nation as a whole."

House Passes Guffey's Coal Control Bill

Revised Version of Act Which Supreme Court Killed Goes to Senate.

By the Associated Press.

Legislation to permit Government price-fixing in the $11,000,000,000 soft coal industry rolled through the House of Representatives yesterday for the third time in two years.

Without a record vote, the chamber stamped its approval on the Guffey-Vinson control bill, a revised version of the original Guffey coal act invalidated by the Supreme Court.

In rapid succession, the Democratic majority beat back every attempt at amendment and sent the measure to the Senate in exactly the form in which it reached the floor.

The bill closely parallels both the invalidated act and its substitute which was hurried through the House last session, but which died in a Senate filibuster.

Labor provisions of the invalidated act were eliminated from the revised bill, however, because the Supreme Court objected to them.

Before the present bill reached the floor the powerful House Ways and Means Committee had put new and bigger teeth in it. A penalty tax for producers who fail to comply with the code of fair competition prescribed by the law was increased from 13½ per cent to 19½ per cent.

At the same time, the committee lowered a tax to be levied on all products to finance administration of the law. This levy was cut from 1½ per cent to ½ per cent. Representative Vinson (Democrat), Kentucky, co-author of the bill, said the reduction would save the industry approximately $8,000,000 annually and still produce about $4,000,000 revenue.

Inquiry Urged After Tip-Off Cripples Raids

Judge Instructs Garnett to Investigate Leak at Courthouse.

Striking at courthouse tipsters in alliance with Capital racketeers, Presiding Police Court Judge John P. McMahon late yesterday called upon District Attorney Leslie C. Garnett to investigate the "leak" which resulted in several bookmakers receiving warning prior to wholesale raids staged here Wednesday.

It was learned that Judge McMahon's bailiff, Paul McGee, was the courthouse employe who let slip the news that U. S. marshals were planning citywide raids. McGee freely admitted yesterday that it was he who called the U. S. marshal's office and learned of the impending raids, and that it was he who mentioned the raids in courthouse corridors.

"I thought it was common knowledge to everyone," McGee stated.

"I didn't know there was any secret about it. I merely telephoned the marshal's office to have them send a man over for court duty. I was told all the marshals were out on raids. I mentioned it to some of the other bailiffs."

The district attorney told Judge McMahon he was satisfied the tip was "inadvertently" given out and was not premeditated. "It was an unfortunate slip," Garnett said.

Warrants Issued

The tip resulted in loss of some wanted men. Police were seeking them on warrants yesterday. The warrants had been sworn for use in the raids, but police found "nobody home" at 4 of 18 places they struck, Wednesday.

Who the person or persons were who relayed McGee's confidential information to Washington's underworld will be the subject of further inquiry, police said last night. It may have been court hangers-on who overheard McGee's remarks, or it may have been court employes, police indicated. They questioned court workers yesterday.

The "leak" caused considerable confusion among the generals commanding an army of 85 patrolmen and detectives who had assembled at Camps Simms before attacking. Garnett, learning of the leak, countermanded his orders for the raid, but most of the army was already in action and could not be called back.

The confusion which attended the citywide raids Wednesday was still flourishing yesterday. Police spent the day untangling and classifying tons of evidence which they confiscated, including blackboards, betting slips, large quantities of private telephone wires, and other equipment, which filled a moving van.

Avoid Photographers.

At the same time some of the 29 finally sifted out of the 83 men arrested, and held for arraignment, were busily engaged in "ducking" photographers. Henry Cabell Adams, charged with operating a book, attacked a photographer and broke the window in Commisioner Turnage's office. Adams later smashed the camera of another photographer.

Meanwhile, an attempt by the district attorney's office to strengthen its case against William Dietz's Telecast radio system was evident yesterday in Wednesday's spectacular raids which netted 83 alleged gamblers.

Headquarters of the Telecast system which broadcast race track information to a large Washington clientele were raided by police and Federal agents Saturday.

As 29 men taken in Washington's raids were arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham Turnage yesterday it was noted that most of the 14 places raided were equipped with Telecast radio boxes.

Police said that many of the addresses of the places searched were obtained by tapping wires leading into Telecast offices in the Albee Building. The Telecast broadcasting headquarters was raided by district attorney officers last Saturday.

With headquarters and outlets of the service raided, United States District Attorney Garnett had rounded out the evidence which he will present to the grand jury next week.

Of the 83 arrested, only 29 were held for trial to the United States commisioner yesterday. The remainder were released as "small fry" who were not immediately in the business of bookmaking or its allied affairs.

Bond was fixed at $2,000 for most of those arraigned. They probably will never face preliminary hearing before the commissioner. Continuances of two weeks were asked by the district attorney and during that time he will present his evidence directly to the grand jury.

jured man after he was struck by Meadows' car, police reported.

Capt. Meadows, police said, struck the man and continued down the street. Avery was directly behind the Meadows car and the injured man was hit again.

Avery appeared at the First Precinct station to report the accident. He said he ran over the man, but didn't believe he struck him first. Avery told Lieut. Harvey Callahan, of the First Precinct, that he failed to see Perry until he stopped his car and saw him lying in the street street near the rear wheels.

Held for Jury.

Avery was ordered held for action of the coroner. Later Capt. Meadows appeared with a taxi driver, Marshall Oliver, 38, 908 G street northwest.

Questioned yesterday by Detective Sergt. William Liverman, of the Homicide Squad, Capt. Meadows said he did not see Perry and did not realize he had struck him. Both he and Oliver will appear at today's inquest.

The system of suspending drivers' permits for speed offenses was upheld yesterday by a committee of city officials recently appointed by the Commissioners to study the question.

Describing the suspension practice as "one of the most effective weapons yet found to combat highway dangers," the committee urged drastic enforcement of speed laws and an augmented board of review and revocation.

Increase Proposed.

It had been proposed to raise the range of speeds for which permits are revoked or suspended. This, officials pointed out, would tend to increase speeds on Washington streets.

At present permits are suspended for speeding over 35 and up to 39 miles an hour. The suspension limit is 15 days. Those convicted of speeding between 40 and 49 miles an hour face 30-day suspensions. Above these speeds the rule requires automatic revocation.

Proposals were to raise the suspension limit to 45 miles an hour or more in 30-mile speed zones. The committee, however, urged continuation of the present system.

It also was suggested that an additional board of review and revocations of operators' permits be established. The present board, it was pointed out, is swamped with current cases and appeals. The two boards would meet on alternate days, under committee suggestions.

An assistant corporation counsel, the committee said, should sit with each board to determine all questions of law and make specific findings in each case.

Members of the special traffic committee include Assistant Corporation Counsel Edward W. Thomas, Policeman Henry C. Nestor, aid to Commissioner Hazen, and W. H. Murphy, secretary to the board of review and revocation.

Post as Frank Successor to Be Offered to City Manager Dykstra.

Long recognized as an authority in the field of public administration, Dykstra has served with several organizations and universities since his graduation from the University of Iowa in 1903.

He served as an assistant in political science at the University of Chicago, instructor in history and government at Ohio State University from 1907 to 1909, head of the department of political science at the University of Kansas from 1909 to 1918, and professor of municipal administration at the University of California from 1923 to 1930.

Before going to Cincinnati in 1930, he also had been secretary of the Chicago City Club, the Los Angeles City Club and commissioner of the Los Angeles Water and Power Department. He was president of the International Association of City Managers for one year.

Members of the regents' executive committee are John Callahan, Madison, chairman; Harold Wilkie, Madison, president of the board of regents, and Clough Gates, superior.

Senator Edwin Carl Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado, will speak at an assembly of Strayer College students today at 9 a. m. in the Masonic Temple, Thirteenth street and New York avenue. Franklin T. Chace, accounting instructor, will preside. L. B. Conner will introduce Senator Johnson.

co-operative enterprise was a major force in encouraging family budgeting, thrift and saving, in reducing retail prices, in stabilizing industry with its known production demands and with spreading economic knowledge.

Olds concluded the co-operative movement will expand considerably in this country in the next generation. He pictured it as very possibly "the next step in the natural evolution of the true pattern of American life."

Steuart, after pointing out that much of the material published in the United States on consumer co-operation "has been written from a biased point of view," held that "it cannot provide an overnight ride to prosperity, nor has it destroyed private trade." Steuart scouted the belief that "European consumer co-operatives are always hot-beds of radicalism." With others of the committee he held that co-operatives tended to spread democratic doctrines, and added later that "co-operative leaders in Europe are almost unanimously opposed to special favor on the part of their government."

Fears Stimulation.

Steuart concluded that co-operatives should not be feared in this country, but fostered; but coupled this with the view that artificially stimulated co-operative movements "are likely to be highly destructive."

Hood held that co-operatives developed in Europe to serve an economic need, and will develop similarly here.

Gregory, noting that co-operatives have "not ruined private business," but have made the latter more efficient, added that they have been instrumental in eliminating "financial racketeering; have added to national stability by educating members on economic questions; and have raised living standards by competing with monopolies."

Miss Bates, studying the place of co-operation in American life, held their growth in this country to be particularly essential to women.

Significantly, no recommendations were made for adoption of European types of co-operatives into the American retail economy, and no suggestions were listed for methods to dovetail Government-subsidized co-operatives into the present retail set-up. Both of these suggestions were made by partisan groups when the President sent the committee out last spring.

were not printed in the Pittman report, argue for permissive legislation and against mandatory legislation.

Hinders Lake Shipping.

As one official said yetserday:

"That procedure reminds me of the theater business. When a critic writes that a new play is, say, 'a lovely example of a completely lousy play,' the theater puts in its advertising merely the words 'a lovely example.'"

The first major flaw apparently exposed in the recent analysis of the Pittman measure is its action in mandatorily cutting off all Canadian trade, halting Great Lakes shipping, if Great Britain becomes involved in a war. Growing concern is felt about such a possibility, apparently unforeseen in the Senate.

The McReynolds bill leaves such action entirely in the President's discretion.

Debate in the House on the neutrality measure is limited to 10 hours, and will begin today at 11 a. m. Half of this time, possibly, will be used today, with the remainder consumed Tuesday, followed by almost certain passage of the bill. The groups then will line up for the finish fight in conference.

Floridian Will Speak.

"The Threat of the Klan to Organized Labor in Florida" will be the subject of a talk by Frank McCallister, of Tampa, Fla., before a luncheon of the League for Industrial Democracy tomorrow at 1:30 p. m. at the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K streets northwest.

Navy Warrant Officers Testify at Inquiry

By the Associated Press.

A. L. Frelinger, chief pay clerk in the disbursing office of the Norfolk Navy Yard, and F. M. Hendricks, chief machinist mate, formerly of the Norfolk Naval Base and now on the U. S. S. Yorktown, testified before the House Naval Affairs Committee today in support of the Boland Bill to adjust pay of navy warrant officers.

In their testimony, they contended that while the immediate effect of the legislation would be a slight increase in costs, savings would be made in the long run.

States Rights Opposition to Court Plan Hit

lopped off from the Federal Government were denied to the States."

King asked if he conceded that the people have reserved rights that they have not delegated either to the State or Federal Governments.

"I would not only concede that, I would assert it," said Jackson. "I grant the right of the people to create a 'no man's land,' but I doubt the right to create it by judicial construction."

Early in the hearings, Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, generally viewed as a friend of the President's court plan, surprised spectators by taking the center of the committee table and expressing fears that the "confidence of the people" might be shaken by six additions to the court.

"The serious situation is, is it not," asked McCarran, "that the Supreme Court is a department of the Government whose mandates are carried into effect by the fact that it enjoys the good will and respect of the people of the United States? It has no army to enforce its orders. Its power depends upon confidence and respect of the people.

"Don't you fear that by reason of the atmosphere that has been created, the confidence of the people in the six new judges will have been so lost that the mandate of the court will have no force or effect, coming from that power which gives these new judges."

Jackson replied that he had no such fear.

"Of course," added Jackson, "if the President makes unwise appointments or the Senate confirms unwise appointments, or these men entrusted with this duty do not by their intelligence and their high sense of duty justify public confidence, it would be lost. I think that the court would gain prestige if the people felt that the court had not let them down. When President Grant appointed additional men to sustain the legal tender act, the court gained confidence."

In Wake of War.

McCarran observed that the Grant incident took place in the wake of the Civil War, when "the successful side stood beside the President."

The Nevadan pressed his point.

"Don't you think," he said, "that if the six new judges went on the bench now, the people would say they were six new justices selected by the New Deal—to use a harsh word, they would be 'stultified' before they went on the bench, even though they might hold against the New Deal to show their independence."

Jackson said he couldn't "feel that way," and would hate to see standing and prestige of the court injured in any such manner.

"I believe this country can produce six men in whom the public would have confidence," said the Assistant Attorney General. "If not, the situation is pretty bad and then we are pretty nearly over the dam, anyway."

Asks of Dangers.

McCarran—Either the six would go with the New Deal or, realizing they were under critical observation, would, so to speak, take the reverse English and go just the opposite. Do you think there is any danger of that?

Jackson—I don't • • • As for prestige, it's just as bad to have certain interests depending on them to go against the New Deal as to have men inclined to be sympathetic with the New Deal.

Quiet through the early proceedings, Senator Tom Connally, Texas Democrat, once again rounded off the opposition's cross-examination.

The Texan wanted to know if "the whole thesis for the success of this plan doesn't depend on the kind of justices you appoint."

"If you get the kind of justices who decide right, you are all right, but if not, you are all wrong," said Connally.

Jackson disagreed. Chief Justice Hughes and Justices Brandeis, Stone and Cardozo all had decided cases against the Government, and like the Attorney General, Jackson said he would be satisfied to take an adverse decision from "an open minded" judge. Cummings had included only Brandeis, Stone and Cardozo. Jackson added the name of Hughes.

Questioned by Connally.

"But you want to determine whether he is open-minded or not," Connally went on. "Doesn't the whole working of this plan depend on the judicial complexion of the men appointed?"

"I would say that is very largely true," replied Jackson.

Connally—Well, isn't it absolutely true?

Jackson—Yes, I think I may say it is absolutely true.

Connally—So we don't change the Constitution, but if you change justices you get a favorable construction of the Constitution, where formerly you got an unfavorable construction.

Jackson—The purpose is to change the conditions I have outlined to you.

Connally—That is that this court doesn't construe the law like you think it ought to construe it?

Jackson—If this measure is passed, one or two things will happen. Either the judges will decide the cases as I think they should be decided, or I'll know that some fair-minded men of my generation think I am wrong and I'll accept that.

At one point, Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, Wyoming Democrat, proponent of a constitutional amendment requiring two-thirds Supreme Court majorities on invalidation, seized on Jackson's objections to 5-to-4 decisions, and asked:

"Do you think the bill meets that objection?"

"The bill gives no assurance that there will be no division of the court," Jackson admitted. "Every justice will be just as independent as he is today. It will not interfere in any way with the independence of the justices, but will bring into the court justices who have a viewpoint closer to current events."

Is Opposed to Delay.

O'Mahoney—Does the act provide in any way for taking away the court's power to overrule acts of Congress?

Jackson—If you desire to take away the power of the court to overcome acts of Congress you must use some other method.

O'Mahoney—The decision in the AAA case was written by a justice who is not affected by this bill.

Jackson—Oh, yes; there's no guarantee against things like that.

In answer to a question by Senator Carl A. Hatch (Democrat), New Mexico, Jackson said he was not opposed to the constitutional amendment method, "' but I don't want to see this bill delayed."

Burke asked the witness if he favored appointment of laymen in addition to lawyers to the court, and Jackson said he had never advocated that method, but it was constitutional, and it might be well to have an engineer on the bench for certain technical cases.

Burke said he believed the appointment of laymen would be "just as abhorrent to the traditions of the country" as the enlargement of the court by six justices. Then the Nebraskan asked another question:

"Would it be perfectly proper for Congress and the President acting together at any time that they are thoroughly dissatisfied with the decisions of the Supreme Court to add members to the court who might be depended upon to give favorable decisions?"

"I think it is entirely within their power, but the propriety of its exercise is up to Congress," replied Jackson.

The Justice Department assistant said he wanted to give his answer to a question asked Cummings—on whether a conservative President might not similarly change the court, when Administrations change.

"If the conservatives have a President and a Congress, they have all they need, because their policy is to maintain the status quo," said Jackson. "It is a do-nothing policy, and the court cannot veto a do-nothing policy. When a conservative Administration is in power you don't have a moving policy and one body is enough. They just don't pass the laws."

Early in his testimony, Jackson said the increasing tendency of the court to nullify acts of Congress has thrown a "legal cloud" about every newly organized Government institution, and warned that the "whole program" is in "danger of being lost in a maze of constitutional metaphors." He said the court's "self restraints are proving no restraints, and the power is in constant process of extension."

He called on Congress to exercise its "constitutional checks" on the courts, and pointed out that "the court is powerless to make its decisions effective unless Congress or the executive provides for carrying out its judgments and decrees."

"It is a responsibility of Congress to see that the court is an instrumentality in the maintenance of a just and constitutional government and that it does not become an instrumentality for the defeat of constitutional government," he said. "The duty of co-operation is not cast upon Congress and the Executive alone."

Text of Assistant Attorney General Jackson's Statement for Court Change

Excerpted text of statement by Assistant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson to Senate Judiciary Committee in hearing yesterday on President's court program:

When a situation exists in the Supreme Court which the President feels he can not continue to ignore, it is to the Congress that he may properly bring the problem.

The responsibility upon Congress for seeing that the American people have a workable, harmonious and co-operative judicial system is so usually overlooked by those engaged in building up the tradition of judicial supremacy that the burden of constitutional responsibility on Congress deserves examination.

A sentiment has developed that sole responsibility for the functioning of the Supreme Court as an institution is upon the justices, and that their independence requires that a majority of them be let alone to shape the institution as they will. In short, it is urged that the court belongs exclusively to the justices and that the President and the Congress must keep hands off.

The fact is that the Supreme Court can not function without the periodic aid of the Congress and that Congress, by its inactivity, may be assuming responsibilities for the Supreme Court's acts as great as any responsibility it may assume by exerting its power.

Where Responsibility Lies

The Constitution leaves with Congress and the Executive the whole responsibility for the personnel of the Court. The Senate must share responsibility for the selection of the justices and is the sole judge of their "good behavior." The court is without means to house itself, or to obtain its clerks, secretaries and marshals unless the House of Representatives takes the responsibility of initiating appropriations for the purpose. The House of Representatives is the only accuser to which the justices must answer. Moreover, the court is powerless to make its decisions effective unless Congress or the Executive provides for carrying out its judgments and decrees.

Moreover, the jurisdiction of the court, except as to cases affecting foreign representatives and states, is left to Congress to decide.

This power to reduce the Supreme Court to a mere phantom court was not an accident. Our forebears knew the story of judicial abuse and tyrrany as well as the story of legislaitve and executive abuses. These checks and balances were therefore embodied in the Constitution to enable Congress to check judicial abuses and usurpations, if the same should occur. If there are abuses in the court, with which I will deal later, their continuance can only be due to default in the exercise of checks and balances placed in the hands of Congress and the Executive.

Congress Exercises Checks.

The power of Congress to exercise checks against the overreaching of the court is so generally overlooked or minimized that the alternatives that faced the Constitution writers deserve examination in detail.

1. The Constitution might have made the Supreme Court the sole custodian of judicial power. It did not. The judicial power is vested in the Supreme Court "and in such inferior courts as the Congress may from time to time ordain and establish."

2. The Constitution might have determined, or left to the Supreme Court to fix, its own jurisdiction. It did not. It has only a limited original jurisdiction and except in cases affecting Ambassadors, Ministers and Consuls and those in which a State shall be a party, the Supreme Court has Appellate jurisdiction only "with such exceptions and under such regulations as the Congress shall make."

3. The Constitution might have fixed the size of the Supreme Court or left the court to determine its own size, but the Constitution deliberately left the number of justices to be fixed from time to time by Congress.

4. The Constitution might have named the original members of the court or might have given the court power to fill its own vacancies. It did not. The Constitution placed the continuing power of appointment in the President and in the Senate.

Congress Decides Pay.

5. The Constitution left the amount of compensation of the justices entirely to Congress, with no restriction except in the provision that whatever compensation Congress may once give them shall not be diminished during their continuance in office.

6. The Constitution could have provided some source of revenue for the court, its justices, marshal, clerk and appointees. But it leaves it entirely to appropriations to be initiated in the House of Representatives.

7. The Constitution could have authorized the court itself to appoint the personnel necessary to execute and enforce court decrees. But it did not. For the enforcement of the court's decrees, the Congress and the Executive branch of the Government must be relied upon.

8. The Constitution could have given to the court the power to judge the conduct of its own members. The power to judge the qualifications and to discipline its own members was given to each house of Congress. But the Supreme Court was entrusted with no such power to either accuse or judge its members. Impeachment can be only by the House and trial by the Senate. • • • It is clear that Congress has the power to see that the personnel of the judicial system is adequate, both with respect to number and to neutrality of attitude. It is a responsibility of Congress to see that the court is an instrumentality in the maintenance of a just and constitutional government and that it does not become an instrumentality for the defeat of constitutional government. The duty of co-operation is not cast upon Congress and the Executive alone.

Power Seldom Used.

Congress, throughout our history, has made sparing use of its checks and balances against the court. It made one abortive attempt to use impeachment as a check. It once withdrew jurisdiction of the court to hear and determine a case that had already been submitted, and its power to do so was recognized. Three times the device of constitutional amendment has been used to correct the court. Six times we have effected changes in the size of the court, with resulting changes in the court's attitudes. • • •

Legislation creating or abolishing vacancies in the court is authorized by the Constitution and validated by historical practice as a method of bringing the elective and non-elective branches of the Government back into a proper co-ordination.

Its frequent use has avoided amendments which would make the Constitution a document of patches and details. It does not change the constitutional powers of the Congress, or the distribution of powers between the legislative and judicial branches. It does not eliminate any check or balance of the constitutional system.

Changing the size of the court has never deprived it of independence or prestige. It was obvious at the founding of the Government that the court would not always remain of the same size, and that changes in its size would be made, as they have been made, at those times when its decisions caused dissatisfaction. It is just as constitutional to add members to keep the court up with the country as it is to add members to keep the court up with its business. The power of the Congress to avert constitutional stagnation is as great as its power to prevent congested dockets.

And whatever other motives have influenced the changes that have been made in the composition of the court, the dominant one has always been to keep the divergence between the court and the elective branches from becoming so wide as to threaten the stability of the Government.

Method Used Thrice.

The amendment method to correct the court has been used three times: the eleventh amendment was adopted to correct the court on suits against the States; the thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth amendments to eradicate the philosophy of the Dred Scott decision and effectuate the policy of reconstruction; and the sixteenth to alter the result produced by the court's ruling on income taxes.

I am not urging that amendment method shall not now be tried. But I do point out certain problems which draftsmen and advocates of amendment will need to consider. • • •

The outstanding development in recent constitutional history is the growing frequency with which the Supreme Court refuses to enforce acts of the Congress on the ground that such acts are beyond the constitutional powers of the Congress.

While we see no limits upon the power to nullify acts of the Congress, we can see that, as each instance becomes a precedent for more, self-restraints are proving no restraints, and the power is in constant process of extension.

In the 71 years from the adoption of the Constitution to the War between the States the Supreme Court so nullified only two acts of Congress. One of these two nullifications was the Dred Scott case which precipitated the war.

In the 72 years from the beginning of that war down to the close of the October (1932) term, the Supreme Court refused to recognize the power of Congress in approximately 60 cases, and it is significant that one-third of these occurred during the decade before the New Deal, when the country as a whole was supposed to be content with a period of normalcy. • • •

12 Cases Cited.

But in just the last three years from the October (1933) term on, the court has refused to recognize the power of Congress in 12 cases. And five of these 12 decisions have occurred during a single year, i.e., the October (1935) term, four of the five by a sharply divided court.

The outstanding constitutional development of the Roosevelt Administration has been the increasing tendency of the Supreme Court to judge legislation according to the majority view of the wisdom of the legislation. • • •

Each success in thwarting Congressional power, or each effort that comes so near success as to lack but a vote or two, stimulates competing lawyers and aggrieved interests to new attack.

Nearly every newly organized institution of the Government rests under a legal cloud. This is true of the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Social Security Board, the Public Works Administration, the Tennessee Valley Authority and the Labor Relations Board.

The acts of Congress involving the hopes and fears of a great proportion of the American people are likewise clouded in legal doubt. Old age benefits, old age assistance, unemployment compensation, the securities act, the relief acts, the labor relations act, the public utility holding company act, the Tennessee Valley acts—as well as many taxing acts—are involved in litigation, and there is no definite assurance what their fate will be. The whole program overwhelmingly approved by the people in 1932, 1934 and 1936 is in danger of being lost in a maze of constitutional metaphors.

State Protection Assumed.

It is often assumed that the powers which the court denies to the Federal Government fall to the State governments and that the Supreme Court is therefore a protector of the States.

Few decisions of the Supreme Court can be cited in which any State of the Union has been able to obtain any protection of its own constitutional rights, upon its own demand from that court. Instead, States have met little success attempting to assert their own rights before the court.

The two outstanding cases in which a State asked the Supreme Court to stop invasions of their rights, arose, not against this administration, but against Secretary Mellon, the defendant in both cases. • • •

The decisions are Massachusetts vs. Mellon, 262 U. S. 447 and Florida vs. Mellon, 273 U. S. 12. Their effect is that the States will not be heard in Supreme Court to assert against the Federal Government, its own rights, or the collective rights of its citizens based on the Federal Constitution.

Coal Case Is Example.

In the Carter coal case seven States appeared and joined with the Federal Government in support of the Guffey coal act—no State appeared against it. Nevertheless, the court struck down the Guffey law on the plea by the owners of the Carter Coal Co. that the law invaded States rights. The court spoke of the danger of the States being "despoiled of their powers" and being reduced to "little more than geographic subdivisions of the national domain." This enthusiasm for States rights when urged by the Carter Coal Co. owners is in contrast with the refusal of the court to hear such plea when urged by the State itself. When the State makes the plea, it is told that it presents a political question. When the owners of the Carter Coal Co, make the plea, it is transmitted into a judicial question.

The same thing happened in U. S. v. Butler, 297 U. S. 1, in which the farm relief program was struck down as coercing the States although Mr. Justice Stone points out that no such contention was made by the taxpayer and hence could not have been answered by the Government. Here again no State complained that its rights were being injured by aid to the farmers. The packers, processors and manufacturers were the beneficiaries of any rights the States may have had.

State legislation inaugurating conservative reforms has with increasing frequency been set aside by a majority of the Supreme Court ever since 1920, even though these State reforms did not encroach upon the powers of the Federal Government, but simply failed in the opinion of a majority of the court to come within the vague contours of the fourteenth amendment. • • •

Experiments by the States with laws to settle industrial disputes, minimum wage acts and acts to regulate public utility and other business enterprises were frequently stopped by the Federal courts. Had they been allowed to proceed, demands for the exercise of Federal power later would have been less imperative. • • •

Right Denied Congress.

The Supreme Court has even denied the Congress the right to make enactments in aid of States rights. • • •

The tenth amendment, as to power reserved to the States, has not been used to assure the power of the States. It has been used to cut down the power of the Federal Government. Then, when those same powers are asserted by the States, the "due process clause" is used to cut down the State power. The States have no rights which the courts have been bound to respect. The States rights argument is heard sympathetically only when pleaded by private interests in support of laissez-faire economics to create a "no man's land" beyond the reach of both Federal and State power. The States rights have become private privileges.

Is it any wonder that Justice Holmes said the sky is the limit?

The present controversy over the court reflects a controversy within the court. Neither the Congress nor the Executive has sought the present dissension. Neither the Congress nor the Executive has in any manner sought to interfere with the judicial function, and neither has failed to obey any decision of the court.

A majority of the justices have made it apparent that the great objectives of this Administration and this Congress offend their deep convictions and that the methods of this day violate their conceptions of good government.

• • • •

Hostility Is Frank.

This frank hostility of these justices has been openly counted on by interested groups to defeat much impotrant legislation.

On the other hand a minority of the justices, whose patriotism and competence no one questions, have made it apparent that they feel that justice to their own records with posterity requires them to protest publicly and sharply against the overriding decisions of the majority. Included among those who have seen fit to protect their place in judicial history by recorded protests are Chief Justice Hughes, Justices Holmes, Brandeis, Stone and Cardozo.

When the decision of crucial constitutional issues may turn on the death or illness of a single justice, it would seem that our constiutional progress is governed by a blind fate instead of by human reason. For a justice of the court to know that even a temporary indisposition may turn the course of his Nation's history must add to the ordinary anxieties about health. Nobody, no matter where his sympathies lie or what his views of constitutional doctrine may be, can view this situation with composure.

Even Government victories by 5-4 decisions are unsatisfactory. A state of the law which depends upon the continuance of a single life or upon the assumption that no justice will change his mind is not a satisfactory basis on which the Government may enter into new fields for the exercise of its power.

Interpretation Is Key.

Conflict between Congress and the courts is in large part due to the refusal of the courts to permit Congress to have any share in defining the present day application of such indefinite terms as "general welfare," "due process," "commerce among the several States," and the things which directly affect it. The court majority insists on a rigid, permanent and legalistic definition. All that is needed is the same attitude of mind on economic questions that the court had on the liquor question. When it came to defining "intoxicating liquor" as used in the eighteenth amendment the court was ready to leave it to Congress. There is no reason why similar deference should not be paid to Congressional definitions of other constitutional terms.

If this split were decisively resolved by the addition of new members, the court could proceed to mark out a less ambitious course for itself and bring about greater harmony within the Government.

The industrialization of society and the movement toward city dwelling, foreign political and economic dislocations, together with depression and distress, have generated an unrest which has put the whole complicated Federal system under severe strain. The ability of a federated form of government to withstand these pressures is greatly impaired by any dissension between branches that were intended to be co-operating and co-ordinate.

The Supreme Court's power over legislation is not defined or bounded, or even mentioned in the Constitution, but was left to lurk in inference. As Mr. Justice Stone has well said, "The only check upon our own exercise of power is our own sense of self-restraint."

Two Bandits Chased By Angry Cab Driver

Angered by the attempts of two colored bandits to rob him yesterday morning, Jeff Smith, of 645 Morton street northwest, a cab driver, chased his assailants nearly four blocks before they finally escaped.

Although the bandits got nothing from Smith, they forced him to drive them from Seventh and Q streets northwest to the 800 block of Barry place northwest, where they threatened him with a revolver. After he convinced the men he had no money, he jumped from the cab and chased them. They disappeared in an alley, he said.

Nation Favors Some Change In Court Set-up

Poll Shows, However, That Majority Do Not Like President's Plan.

By Dr. George Gallup.

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, March 10.—That some kind of change is necessary regarding the Supreme Court is the decision of a majority of American voters in a new Nation-wide poll conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

First complete returns in the Institute's scientific survey show 59 per cent of the voters throughout the United States in favor of "some change" to 41 per cent opposed to changes.

The poll draws special significance from the discussion now raging both in and out of Congress over President Roosevelt's proposal to reorganize the high court.

It is worth pointing out, however, that although a majority of Americans believe some change is necessary regarding the court, the majority do not approve the plan put forward by the President. In the Institute's continuous check-up of sentiment on the White House plan, opponents of the President still lead by a vote of 53 per cent to 47 per cent throughout the country.

Eagerly Awaited.

Additional balloting will be eagerly watched, however, following the President's recent radio talks and those of his opponents.

Today's poll asks, "Do you think some kind of change is necessary regarding the Supreme Court?" It is a question that cuts across party lines, dividing those who are satisfied with the court as it stands from those who are not satisfied. There are many varieties of the latter—those who favor the White House plan, those who favor a Congressional veto of Supreme Court decisions, those who want a Constitutional amendment, those who merely want to get rid of 5-4 decisions, and others.

In Congress some of these alternative proposals are upheld by "Progressive Senators, like Norris, Wheeler and Nye, who have shown various degrees of hostility toward the President's plan. They include both Democrats and Republicans.

Party Vote Today.

Today's poll shows how the question of "some change" in the Supreme Court divides rank and file party voters. Roughly speaking, one Landon voter in every four or five believes that some change is necessary, while one Roosevelt voter in five believes that no change is required. In actual percentages the vote is as follows:

Democrats favoring "some change"	78%
Republicans favoring "some change"	23%

This is in contrast with current balloting in the Institute's poll on the President's plan for changing the court. In this poll—already reported in The Washington Post—only 8 per cent of the Republicans favor the President's solution, along with 70 per cent of the Democrats.

It may well be, however, that the President's plan is one which unites more court critics than any other single proposal which the White House could have devised.

Certainly there would have been less approval had the President proposed to curb the court's power of reviewing the acts of Congress altogether. This alternative issue was the basis of successive Institute polls in 1935 and again in December, 1936. The Institute found majorities of about 6 to 4 against limiting the court's power in that way.

All sections favor some change, however. Section by section, the demand is greatest in the three Pacific Coast States—California, Oregon and Washington. Here the vote averages 66 per cent to 34 per cent in favor of a change.

The South votes for "some change," 61 to 39, while the Rocky Mountain States eaverage 59 to 41.

Other sectional percentages are: Middle Atlantic States, 62 to 38; East Central States, 54 to 46, and West Central States, 55 to 45.

Recites History With Gusto

Robert H. Jackson, trim and youthful-appearing Assistant Attorney General, appeared before the Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday and bulwarked his defense of President Roosevelt's court re-organization program with specific examples from history. He mentioned six changes in the size of the court in the past.

Senate Judiciary Unit Decides—Office Acoustics Are Very Poor

The Senate Judiciary Committee, working with unusual speed, already has reached one conclusion in its hearings on the President's program for reform of the judiciary.

This conclusion is that, in the entire four floors of the Senate Office Building, there isn't a single hearing room in which anyone can hear.

Finally annoyed by the inaudible mumblings that echoed hollowly from the marble walls of the caucus room, Chairman Henry F. Ashurst, of Arizona, yesterday raised his voice and bellowed:

"The architect of the Senate did a remarkably good job in preventing audition.

The Only Recourse.

"The Senators on my left can't hear what the Senators on my right say. The Senators on my right can't hear what the Senators on my left say. Neither side can hear the witness.

"The only recourse of the Senators will be to use that which procured your elections—your voices."

Yesterday's audience, prepared for living drama and set for a high-tension session, once more found itself listening to a good-natured round-table discussion of court packing. Good-looking Robert H. Jackson, the 45-year-old Assistant Attorney General, sat in place of his chief, Homer Cummings, and Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, was significantly absent, but otherwise everything went along in the quiet good humor that characterized the first day.

A hasty count showed only five lorgnette-users, but 17 wearers of pince-nez on either black ribbons or gold chains. On the other hand there was present only one spectator who took off his shoes, and only one who was wearing a beard in preference to a necktie.

Hack Squad Chief Hunts for Parrot Mislaid in Taxicab

Lieut. Tom Mason, grizzled chief of the hack inspectors' squad, scratched his head and sighed.

"I've looked for burglars and thieves and lots of other things in my time, but I'm darned if I've ever been asked to search for a parrot," Mason muttered.

Mason's troubles began yesterday morning when Mrs. Alene Niemann, 22, of Balboa Heights, Canal Zone, stopping here at the Lee House, complained that her pet parrot, Lorita, a Colombian, was lost in a taxicab at Union Station.

Mrs. Niemann said she had brought the bird here from her home about a year ago and was preparing to leave for Texas to visit her father, who is ill. Taking her baggage to the station, Mrs. Niemann said another woman took the cab and the driver sped off before Lorita was missed.

Poll Standings

For The Washington Post and other leading papers the American Institute of Public Opinion is conducting a Nation-wide referendum on the President's Suprem Court plan. The following table shows figures previously reported:

U. S. Bar Votes Against Change In High Court

Mail Poll Shows More Than 6 to 1 Opposition to President's Plan.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 11.—The American Bar Association tonight announced a poll of its membership resulted in a vote of 16,132 to 2,563 against President Roosevelt's proposal to reorganize the Supreme Court.

Justice Edward T. Fairchild, chairman of the organization's board of elections, disclosed 19,136 ballots had been returned in the mail referendum. The total vote on various questions pertaining to the proposed change in the Federal judiciary was given as follows:

"(1) On the proposal to authorize an increase in the number of justices of the Supreme Court: For, 2,563; against, 16,132.

(2) On the protposal to authorize an increase in the number of justices in the Circuit Courts of Appeals and the district courts: For, 4,049; against, 14,401.

"(3) On the proposal for additional authority in connection with the transfer of judges from one circuit or district to another. For, 11,452; against, 6,837.

Nazi Who Shocked Britain With Salute Now Shakes Hand

London, March 11 (AP).—German Ambassador Joachim von Ribbentrop, who shocked Great Britain by giving King George the Nazi salute on two occasions, reverted to custom today and shook hands with the King and Queen.

Then he and his wife—who also shook hands with the royal couple—stayed for tea at Buckingham Palace.

The procedure amazed Von Ribbenthrop's fellow envoys

The two Nazi salutes to the King, in February, brought newspaper criticism, but German spokesmen stoutly insisted a uniform rule had been imposed requiring representatives to raise the arm on all official occasions.

As Von Ribbentrop is handling Germany's campaign here for the return of her former colonies, observers thought Berlin might have ordered an exception today to avoid annoying the British government. This was denied, however, by a German spokesman who contended there are different rules for different kinds of royal entertainments.

'Fattest Man' Dies.

Flomaton, Ala., March 11 (AP).—"Happy Jack" Eckert, 63, who weighed 739 pounds and called himselfthe world's fattest man, died tonight in a hospital of injuries inflicted February 7 when his specially built automobile was in collision with a freight truck near here.

Advance Notice On Pacts Planned

By the Associated Press.

Officials said yesterday the State Department soon would inaugurate a policy of giving American producers advance information concerning foreign products on which tariff concessions are to be considered.

It will be put into effect, they disclosed, in connection with negotiations for a reciprocal trade agreement with Ecuador.

In the 16 reciprocal agreements already negotiated, no advance information was given. American producers, importers and exporters first learned of tariff changes after the pacts had been concluded.

2 Men Convicted In Wendel Torture

New York, March 11 (AP).—Harry Weiss and Martin Schlossman were convicted late today for the kidnaping of Paul H. Wendel, former Trenton, N. J., lawyer. The blue ribbon jury selected a month after another jury had disagreed on the men's guilt, deliberated 52 minutes in King's County Court, Brooklyn.

Conviction carries a penalty of 20 years to life. No date of sentence was fixed. The State charged Weiss and Schlossman tortured Wendel into confessing he kidnaped Charles A. Lindbergh, jr.

Post Carriers Dine in State At the Willard

750 Boys Hear Sen. King, See Lou Gevinson and Comic Strip Artists.

In the same banquet hall of the Willard Hotel, where Presidents and other notables have been feted, 750 Washington Post carrier boys gathered last night to feast, to whoop and to gaze upon heroes they long have worshiped from afar.

It was the first such banquet since The Post adopted the program six months ago of the Newspaper Boys of America, a national organization with a program for fitting boys not only for the task of carrying newspapers, but for success in life.

Gales of laughter, exuberant applause and the satisfying sigh that follows a turkey dinner—all these attested that the party was a success.

See Senator, Ring Champion.

Looking up at the long speakers' table, the boys who carry The Post to thousands of homes here and in Maryland and Virginia could see a United States Senator, world-famous artists who turn out five of this newspaper's comic and feature strips, the featherweight boxing champion of the District and a host of well-known local citizens.

They were entertained by Leon Brusiloff and his orchestra and artists from Loew's Capitol Theater, from Warner Bros. Earle Theater, and the Lotus Restaurant, which latter establishment sent over a Chinese tenor who sang "Irish Eyes Are Smiling" with the most appealing note heard since John McCormack was around this way. All of this was directed by Arch (Old Pine Tree) MacDonald, radio announcer, in the role of master of ceremonies.

Saunders, Woggon Applauded.

Capitol Hill was represented by Senator William King (Democrat), of Utah, who congratulated the boys on their N. B. A. pledge and urged them to play their part in preserving America's liberties.

Allen Saunders and Elmer Woggon, authors of "Big Chief Wahoo," got a great hand from the youngsters, and responded by giving a redskin yell over the microphone.

Rube Goldberg, America's best-known comic artist and creator of "Lala Palooza," brought a howl from the boys when he gave them one of his unique inventions, involving a sparrow, a string and a banana peel, which he promised would result in the sales of more Washington Posts.

Lank Leonard, tall, smiling creator of "Mickey Finn," took a bow, but refused to talk, saying he was bashful like Mickey.

Lieut. Comdr. E. V. Martinek, author of "Don Winslow," told The Post carriers that Don, like them, also had a pledge, and he read it—a ringing credo of patriotism, the high light of which was peace.

Then came Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, famous World War ace, head of Eastern Air Lines and author of "Ace Drummond." He told the boys how fortunate they were to be Americans, and described how, in warlike countries of Europe a child is handed a wooden gun just after the cradle age, and from thence onward is prepared to be cannon fodder.

Gevinson Mobbed.

Lou Gevinson, who once was a Post carrier and who recently became featherweight champion of the District, was mobbed by boys seeking his autograph. After writing his name on a score of program cards, he had to halt in order that the entertainment might go on.

The banquet started at 6:25 o'clock when, to the strains of "Happy Days Are Here Again" and the "Washington Post March," played by Brusiloff's orchestra, the boys marched into the banquet hall from either end.

Led by R. Preston Oliver, coach of the Newspaper Boys of America, the boys said the Lord's Prayer. Then, while the American flag was raised on the stage, they sang "America." Next, in unison, they recited their N. B. A. pledge:

"As a newspaper boy, I pledge upon my honor to do my duty to God, my country, my family, my friends and my newspaper.

"I pledge that I will play the game fairly and squarely, keep myself alert, strong and clean in mind and body; obey my parents, co-operate with my coach, be courteous and dependable to my subscribers and all people with whom I come in contact."

Bernard Makes Awards.

Donald W. Bernard, business manager of The Washington Post, presented honor awards to 83 carriers, and outlined the aims of the newspaper in its relationship with N. B. A.

"In six short months," Bernard said, "83 boys have stood the acid test of boyhood—the acid test of youth—and have won their spurs. Perhaps that doesn't seem a very important step to you who are outside the realm of the newspaper boy program, but to those of us who know the full meaning of that promotion we realize its importance and its magnitude.

"Perhaps you parents and men and women who are interested in boys and in boy development would like a brief picture of the newspaper boy program, because even the briefest picture will give you a new appreciation of the splendid work done by the leaders of the newspaper boy movement.

"The boys you see in this room are all members of this great organization, and they are all on their way to success, not failure. When a boy first takes his pledge as a junior carrier he is on his way up the ladder. The first four rungs of that ladder are the first fundamental things that any boy must overcome—to succeed at home, in school and later on in college and in life.

"These 83 boys took their pledge six months ago. Would you like to know what they have accomplished in the shape of achievement and development?

"They got their first seal on their pledge cards when they learned the valued lesson of punctuality, to be at their branch, at their school, at their home on time. Half of life's hardest battles are lost by men who, as boys, failed to be there on time and at the right time."

Collector's Seal.

"The second seal they received was the seal for personal appearance.

"The third seal they received was the collector's seal. To operate a business or a route without understanding the proper business methods is impossible.

"The last seal they received was for salesmanship—the ability to understand their product and to sell it, clean-cut and intelligently.

"Consider these four steps as rungs on the ladder of success. Add two more, which are scholarship and thrift—two lessons and precepts that are vital in every boy's life. When these things are mastered in an atmosphere of understanding, an atmosphere of respect for property and a reverence for God, you have the Newspaper Boy program."

Presents 83 Awards.

Here Bernard, on behalf of Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Washington Post, presented the honor awards to the following 83 boys:

Zone 1.

Zone 2.

Zone 3.

Millard Shumaker, David Strain, Stephen Stephenson, Frank Hardie, Gregory Norris, Charles Kosack, Bernard Lyons, Robert Robson, Thomas Sheppard, Daniel Robson, Harry Bower, Earl Baker, Lewis Brittle, Andrew Jublick, Leo Woolls, Cyril Cluff, Wallace Hill, Kirk Goines, George Robey, Joseph Geiser, Robert Waugh, Nelson Van Wie and Richard Warner.

Zone 4.

John Coates, Jack Davis, Jack Rogers, Robert Hammell, Calvin Scutt, Vincent Kirchner, Robert Sutton, Norman Blincoe and Roy Case.

Leroy Gissel, James O'Hagan, Lloyd Holloway, Domenico Antonelli, George Strombos, Allen Kramer, William Hughes and Paul Holmes.

Zone 7.

Michael Martin, Donald Cousins, Rudolph Biro, William Eden and Calvin Miller.

The serious part of the banquet was concluded by the sounding of taps.

Meanwhile the boys were doing a good job on a banquet that began with a coupe or fruit delices and then ran through creme of fresh mushrooms with perles royale, celery hearts, olives, salted pecans, roast Vermont turkey with chestnut stuffing and cranberry sauce, new string beans, candied sweet potatoes, coffee, ice cream, assorted cakes and mints.

Griffith Sends Regrets

In introducing the guests of the evening, Master-of-Ceremonies MacDonald announced that Clark Griffith and Bucky Harris regretted that, with the Nationals training at Orlando, they were unable to be present. He announced, too, that Jack Dempsey, Jimmy Braddock and Barney Ross had sent greetings to the boys.

The guests introduced by MacDonald included the following:

Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Post.

Mrs. Henry G. Doyle, president of the Board of Education; Mrs. Walter B. Fry, president of the District Parent-Teacher Association; John A. Remon, president of the board of managers of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club and vice president of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.; Thomas E. Lodge, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations; Charles Fyfe, manager of the Washington Boys Club; the Rev. Maurice King, administrator of St. Anne's rectory; the Rev H. G. Smith, pastor of Petworth Baptist Church; Howard E. Clark, of the Washington branch of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.; the Rev. Russell Phelan, assistant rector of St. Anne's rectory; Miss Jesse Arndt, society editor; Donald M. Bernard, business manager.

Alexander F. Jones, managing editor; C. C. Boysen, assistant comptroller; Frank See, city circulation manager; William J. Hayes, suburban and country circulation manager; Ray C. Thompson, manager of circulation promotion; Franklyn Waltman, chief of the national news staff; Aubrey Harris, advertising manager; J. M. B. Sacks, national advertising manager; R. C. O'Donnell, classified advertising manager; Raoul Blumberg, sales promotion manager; Maxfield Lund, assistant comptroller; Charles Moore, director of promotion.

John J. Riseling, city editor of The Washington Post; E. C. McFarland, of the Bureau of Yards and Docks of the Navy Department; Lou Gevinson, featherweight boxing champion of the District; Edward T. Folliard, a member of The Post's city staff; Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Gillette, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Michael and Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Brittle, parents of honor carriers.

In the absence of their parents, who were unable to attend, three boys were asked to stand. They were Howard Hixon, Kenneth Speer and Richard Nessul.

Meyer "Happy and Proud."

Meyer, in addressing the boys, told them he was happy and proud to be with them.

"I am happy," he said, "because I have been presented with a certificate from the Newspaper Boys of America. I am proud because we are able to have so many honored guests here tonight. I am proud of The Post staff, some representatives of which have been introduced to you tonight, and also of the members of other departments whom you know.

"I know that if we can keep up the good work we have done in the past three and a half years, since I became owner of The Post, we are going far in the future.

"I want to thank you and wish you the best of luck."

The entertainers who appeared before the boys never had a more appreciative audience. From Loew's Capitol Theater came Red Skelton, a hilarious master of ceremonies; Jack Powell, trap drummer and syncopator; Marylyn Marlowe, tap dancer, and Sue Ryan, a singer.

Bazooka Band Is Success.

From Warner Brothers' Earle came Cardini, the card manipulator; Lester Cole and his Midshipmen Singers, and Lathrop Brothers and Virginia Lee.

George Horne, a ventriloquist, who came all the way from Philadelphia, astonished the boys by having dummies on each knee sing "Sweet Adeline" together—or as nearly together as was possible.

The Lotus sent over the Chinese tenor, Joe Wong, and Elton Rich, a magician.

Lee and Cody O'Neill, a brother and sister dancing act, who were brought to the party by Orchestra Leader Brusiloff, were given a good hand by their youthful audience. So, too, were the members of the Merrick Boys Club Surprise Band, who made their music with bazookas—the famed instrument popularized in Washington by Bob Burns, whose homely humor is a feature in The Post.

Restaurateurs Hear D. C. Liquor Inspector

Two hundred local restaurateurs, recently organized as the Washington Association, listened yesterday to a ton Class C and D Liquor Dealers discussion by Maj. Jerome Johnson, chief inspector of the Alcohol Control Board, of legislation pending in Congress which would stop all transfer of liquor licenses in the District.

Officers of the new organization are Burt Lotatin, president; George Goodacre, vice president; Joe Judge, vice president; W. A. Finkle, treasurer, and J. H. Crandell, secretary.

Among the Honored Guests at Carrier Boys' Banquet

Six creators of Washington Post comic characters gather around Senator William King, of Utah, at last night's Washington Post carrier frolic: Col. Eddie Rickenbacker, Senator King, Allen Saunders; standing: Rube Goldberg, Lank Leonard, "Wog" Woggon and Lieut. Comdr. E. V. Martinek, U. S. N. R.

Many Leaders Praise Post's Carrier Club

Colored Boys Observe Ritual, Enjoy Program at Crystal Caverns.

Colored carriers of The Post, in the subterranean recesses of the Crystal Caverns, celebrated the solemn ritual of the Newspaper Boys of America and enjoyed a program of Tommy Miles' swing music, song and dance from neighborhood night clubs, and inspirational addresses by prominent men in public life, and members of The Post organization.

Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Post, bespoke the paper's interest in minority groups, and in business and economic development of more than 100 employes. Representative Arthur W. Mitchell (Democrat), of Illinois, termed the demonstration the finest example of co-operative endeavor to be witnessed by him in a lifetime.

J. Finley Wilson, grand exalted ruler of colored Elks, paid tribute to The Post as the "safest and sanest paper in the Americas." Dr. Emmett J. Scott, secretary of Howard University, in admiration of the tenets of the newsboy organization, and as a former newsboy, applied for membership in the organization.

Judge Hueston Speaks.

Educational significance of the organization was the subject of an address by Judge W. C. Heuston, educational director of the Elk fraternity. Perry W. Howard, Republican national committeeman from Mississippi, after witnessing the ceremonies, announced his purpose to write the book, "It Can Happen Here."

Judge James A. Cobb, formerly of the Municipal Court, and Campbell C. Johnson, secretary of the Twelfth Street Branch Y. M. C. A., offered felicitations and commended The Post for the social and economic benefits afforded its carriers through their national organization.

Awards were made to Robert Williams, Herman Eskridge, Edward Botts and Christopher Johnson, by William Haggerty, for punctuality, courtesy, and dependability. They consisted of a belt, buckle and senior membership certificate in the chapter of the association inaugurated here by the publisher of The Post.

Banquet and entertainment went hand in hand, the Caverns presenting Sam Wood, Scotty Scott, Viola Holloway and Bea Foote. Marguerite Robinson, representing the Green Parrot, answered an encore. Diminutive Dolores "Dee Dee" Savage, of the Capital Pleasure Club, brought the boys to the table tops with her whirlwind song and dance, and the ingenue, Mildred "Toots" Brooks, had to return to the mike until the last bell rang.

Applause Is Vociferous.

Vociferous applause greeted the famous cartoonists, Eddie Rickenbacker, Rube Goldberg, Allen Saunders and Elmer Woggon, Lank Leonard, Lieut. Comdr. E. V. Martinet and the heads of the Federation of Citizens Associations and the Federation of Civic Associations, Thomas E. Lodge and Woolsey W. Hall.

Other honored carriers were James McDade, Talmadge McCloud, Charles Brooks, James Payne, James McCall, Vincent Bryant, Nelson Ferguson, William Beverly, James Penn, Albert Hawkins, John Lucas, Norman Lee, John Ford, John Carter, James Fletcher, Stations Baltimore, Cyprian Johnson, Louis Proctor, Leon Turner and Willis Davis.

E. D. Marston, of The Post staff, was master of ceremonies, and William F. Harris in general supervision of the banquet and ceremony. Special guests were introduced by C. F. Moore, director of promotion, and included Alexander F. Jones, managing editor; Don W. Bernard, business manager; C. C. Boysan, assistant comptroller, and C. E. Briggs, of the Eastern Air Lines.

Increase in Free Mail Criticized by Hayden

A Three Days' Cough Is Your Danger Signal

A cough, chest cold or bronchial irritation today may lead to serious trouble tomorrow. You can relieve them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified Creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery that aids nature to soothe and heal the infected membranes and to relieve the irritation and inflammation as the germ-laden phlegm is loosened and expelled.

Medical authorities have for many years recognized the wonderful effects of Beechwood Creosote for treating coughs, chest colds and bronchial irritations. A chemist worked out a special process of blending Creosote with other ingredients so that now in Creomulsion you get a real dose of Beechwood Creosote which is palatable and can even be taken frequently and continuously by adults and children. Thousands of doctors now use Creomulsion in their own families and practice, and druggists rank Creomulsion top because in this genuine, original product you can get a real dose of Creosote so emulsified that it goes to the very seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel germ-laden phlegm.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles, especially those that start with a common cold and hang on and on. Get a bottle of Creomulsion right now from your druggist, use it all up as directed and if you fail to get satisfactory relief, he is authorized to refund every cent of your money. Get Creomulsion right now. (Adv.)

Parks Charged With 16 Counts By Grand Jury

One Alleged Accomplice Is Named in Each Indictment; 10 for Other.

Sixteen robbery and housebreaking charges were preferred against Richard C. Parks, 19-year-old redhaired alleged bandit, yesterday after the District grand jury had named him in that number of indictments and had accused his two associates, Silvio J. Daneri and James K. Phelps, of a number of felonies.

Phelps was named in each indictment with Parks, while Daneri, who still maintains he was innocent of any of the alleged crimes, was mentioned in only 10. Phelps is 19 and Daneri is 23.

Armament Found.

In the police picture of the trio's operations, the two younger boys were described as the pair who entered stores and shops and robbed them, while Daneri remained outside in an automobile, prepared to drive them away after they had finished. Numerous pistols, shotguns, and rifles were found in the homes of Phelps and Parks, weapons, police said, that were obtained in a robbery at a D street sporting goods store.

In other indictments, the grand jury charged Marvin R. Harlow and Aldo Pieri with violations of the narcotic laws, and alleged Sam Wilner, salesman for a liquor distributing company, with embezzling $470.40 he had collected for the firm.

Indicted were: John W. Williams, Roland R. Taylor, James Brown, John H. Brown, Walter Young, Lil McCoy, Mary Knox, Rosalie Watkins, Fred E. Byrd, Mary L. Sheckles, robbery; Robert G. Chambers, Clifford L. Gibbons, Nathaniel Cobbs, and Anthony Kirby, assault with intent to commit robbery.

Maude E. Shepherd, Milton Potts, Henry G. Barrett, Albert Jackson, Furman O. Gant, Paul Hill, Edna M. Hill, William N. Waters, William J. Dorsey, William H. Hush-Hush or Health?

Trickery of Luetic Infection Makes It 'Greatest Imitator'

By Gerald G. Gross.

(This article is the fifth of a series to acquaint citizens with the tragic neglect of the venereal disease problem in the District of Columbia).

Syphilis has been called the greatest imitator and the great ventriloquist because of its uncanny predilection for disguises and deceit. The guilty microbe might also be likened to a rat—sneaky, afraid of the light, patient and systematic in its program of destruction, existing in unsuspected places.

Lucky is the man or woman who, suspicious of the primary sore, goes to a physician immediately. Luckier still if that physician has a dark field microscope at this time when every hour counts. A Wasserman blood test would prove nothing. But a specimen taken from the sore and placed under the microscope will show up the swimming, squirming, spiraled killer in the same manner that dust motes are visible in a beam of sunlight entering a darkened room.

About half-way through the primary stage the blood will become positive and in a matter of weeks the spirochete's host will enter the secondary period. Here the wily microbe dons such seemingly trivial disguise as falling hair, measle-like body eruptions, headaches or indigestion.

Diagnosis Difficult.

Dr. Earle Moore, of Johns Hopkins University, asserts that in one man out of every five and one woman out of three early symptoms are so evanescent as to be unrecognized.

When this stage is over, the infected person becomes eligible for the dread late stage unless he obtains the proper treatment. Untreated, he may go along for years in apparent good health. Then suddenly, without warning, his heart may go bad or he may find himself a member of that pitiful legion of paretics or locomoter ataxia sufferers. Or the spirochete, whose presence could have been detected years earlier by a simuple blood test, may attack the bones, the arteries, the brain or any of the vital organs.

The birth of babies with congenital syphilis is not uncommon in Washington, yet such a conservative as Dr. N. A. Nelson, of the Massachusetts Department of Health, says that transmission of the disease from mother to child is "utterly inexcusable."

The earlier the pregnant woman begins treatment for her infection, the better the baby's chances. But no matter whether it be a prospective mother, a high school boy, or an infant, early diagnosis and regular treatment are crucially important.

Treatment Important.

Syphilis treatments are generally given once a week and their continuity is of the gravest consequence. Dr. Alan M. Chesney, dean of Johns Hopkins Medical School, says:

"A small amount of treatment in early syphilis is worse than none, precisely because it interferes with the body's own defensive mechanism while at the same time it often fails to eliminate the infection. It leaves the patient worse off than nature alone would have left him and is therefore greatly to be condemned."

Because the treatment of syphilis and the arrest of its infectiousness can and are being practiced so successfully wherever the patient gives medical science a chance, the U. S. Public Health Service is laying stress on this disease rather than gonorrhea in its present national campaign. Get the most vulnerable offender first, is the byword.

Numerous inquiries have been received since this series of articles began. Beginning today, those which are of sufficient general interest will be answered in this space. Medical advice will not be given. If for any reason the anwser cannot be furnished here, the questioner will be referred to the proper source of information.

Q. Where may I go for treatment if I cannot afford to pay a private physician's free but don't wish to attend a free clinic?

A. If you have a family doctor, take the matter up with him. Or go to the Central Admitting Bureau, Eighth and I streets northwest, where you will be properly taken care of regardless of your financial means.

Q. Do you have access to the names of reported cases?

A. No, not even to the number—only case reports.

Q. Why can't I compel the clinic or doctor where my maid is going for treatment, for syphilis I suspect, to tell me what is the trouble with her? As her employer, don't I have a right to know?

A. It is doubtful whether any clinic or physician would divulge such information without the patient's consent. This is a matter that can and should be taken up strictly between employer and employe.

Washington's various venereal disease clinics will be discussed in the next article.

Thaw Brands Waiter a Liar, Denies Assault

not dance, was not under the influence of liquor, and left the table only one time during the entire evening, according to Mrs. Sladdin's testimony.

Miss Diana Nash, actress, of New York, was another member of the Thaw party who took the stand yesterday. Stating that she was present the entire time, was an eyewitness to events that led up to Thaws' ejection from the dining room "by three men who were most belligerent in their attitude," she asserted that:

"The whole thing looked like a nice little frame-up."

One said another guest—a "Mr. Ney"—was the one whose boisterous conduct attracted attention to the Thaw party.

Ernest F. Henry, Washington attorney, and Gordon B. Prowse, clerk at the Farm Credit Administration, also testified that "the antics of a smaller man" caused all eyes to be turned on the Thaw table. Neither Henry or Prowse saw Thaw strike Jaeck, they said.

Jaeck's Story Upheld.

Yesterday morning, however, the plaintiff, a Washington socialite, the Shoreham house detective and a trade association executive told a different story. Each of these said, in effect, that Thaw's behavior was "noticeable" on the night in question.

Dr. Harry M. Kaufman, chief of the medical staff at Emergency Hospital and a resident of the Shoreham, testified that upon examination of Jaeck's eye shortly after the alleged attack he found an "abrasion made by some foreign substance, probably cigarette ashes." Dr. Kaufman said he advised the waiter to consult an occulist unless the injury showed indications of healing overnight.

Jaeck's story of the alleged attack was borne out by Mrs. Abner Drury, a guest at a nearby table on the evening of Thaw's party. Ralph G. Proctor, detective, testified that he and Jaeck "politely escorted" Thaw out of the dining room after the dispute, and that Thaw's behavior continued to be boisterous until he left the hotel.

Jaeck said the bill for the dinner was $57.50, and that Thaw offered him $50 in payment for it. After that, Thaw returned to his table, and, "without warning, he struck me in the eye with his fist in which he held a lighted cigarette," Jaeck continued. He added that Thaw previously "annoyed guests by thumping lighted matches and cigarettes about, and by giving a solo dance with war whoops."

The case will be continued before Judge Jesse C. Adkins this morning. Christopher B. Garnett is attorney for the defense.

Peggy Will Not Share In Estate of Fiance

London, March 11 (AP).—Peggy Hopkins Joyce, fiancee of the late Vivian Jackson, amateur steeplechase rider and professor of astrophysics, will receive none of his estate other than proceeds from the sale of horses he gave her.

The net estate of Jackson, popularly reputed to be a millionaire, was paced at only $135,000 when letters of administration were granted to his widow today. No will was found. Miss Joyce is recovering from injuries suffered in a sleighing accident at St. Mortiz, Switzerland. Jackson, who was to have been Miss Joyce's fifth husband, was killed in the accident.

23 States to Hold Flood Talk Today

St. Louis, March 11 (AP).—A resolutions committee paved the way for a conference tomorrow of representatives of 23 "flood bowl" States by approving a comprehensive plan today for checking the destructive tendencies of the Nation's rivers.

In tentative draft for submission to the conference, resolutions drawn by the committee set out these principal objectives:

Immediate appropriations by Congress of adequate funds to finance reservoirs, floodways, spillways and other control works. These call for ultimate expenditures of $582,000,000.

War 'Duds' Kill 2.

Monks Win Strike For Social Liberty

Cairo, March 11 (AP).—Coptic monks who objected to restriction of social liberties won a 40-day sit-down strike against Abbot Komnos Sidarus today.

Their victory came with the decision of Patriarch Yohannes to ask for the abbot's resignation and allow the monks, who live in a high-walled windowless retreat, to choose their own superior.

The patriarch, however, served notice on the striking monks that, while yielding this time, he will exercise greater control over the monastery to prevent rebellions in the future.

75% Wage Boost Ends Polish Cobblers' Strike

Warsaw, March 11 (AP).—A sit-down strike of 15,000 shoemakers ended today with intervention of the government to compel shop owners to increase wages 75 per cent.

FOODS You Should Know

Unusual foods, yet not expensive at our prices.

Stokely Peas & Carrots—The same good Stokely peas and the same Stokely diced carrots that you have used separately, blended into a delicious combination of true Stokely goodness. On the back of the label you'll find recipes for new and interesting variations in serving. Our price, 20-ounce can, 17c

Silver Slice Grapefruit—Not long ago, canned grapefruit was unheard of—today it is a "best seller" in fruits. Reason: Scientific canning methods have produced a product whose taste is remarkably close to the fresh fruit, and: the ready-to-serve feature appeals to housewives—simply chill, open and serve. Our price, 20-oz. can, 10c

Del Maiz Niblets—You've taken an ear of golden corn steaming out of the kettle and sliced the grains off the cob, haven't you? Well, that's practically what you get in heated Del Maiz Niblets. So fresh, so delicious, so close to fresh corn "off the cob." Serve it hot and let a generous piece of Land o' Lakes butter ooze down through the golden kernels, salt and pepper to suit and you'll smack your lips with joy. Our low price, 12-oz. can, 2 for 27c

Hunt's Pickled Peaches—Spicy-sweet, wonderfully good Hunt's Whole Peaches in rich syrup. A dandy appetite teaser—goes well with meats. Like all Hunt's Supreme products, it is the finest that can be packed. Our low price, can, 25c

Dole Pineapple Spears—Not long ago somebody had a hunch that pineapple sliced from top to bottom in long, slender spears would lend itself to many new and interesting salads and desserts. Dole started packing it, and the hunch was right. Housewives everywhere began thinking of clever ways to serve it, and today it, too, is a "best seller." Why not see what novel salad or dessert you can make from these unique slices? Our low price, 14-oz. can, 10c; 25-oz. can, 19c

Dromedary Gingerbread Mix—(Based on the private recipe of George Washington's mother.) Guaranteed to come out right, sure to please. Made especially for those who like a rich, old-fashioned gingerbread. Our low price, package, 21c

Duff's Spice Cake Mix—Add water, mix and bake—that's how easy it is. We can't tell you how good it is, though—you'll have to taste it yourself. Full directions on the package. Price, per package, 23c

Sanico Long Grain Rice—Fancy, pearly white, long grains that cook fluffy and snow-white. A real high-grade rice at a low price—full pound package, 7c

Stokely Grapefruit Juice—You've used Stokely's vegetables, now try their grapefruit juice. The bumper citrus fruit crop this year has brought prices 'way down. Serve well chilled. 18-oz. cans, 3 for 35c.

Stokely Corn on the Cob—Corn on the cob in March! Yes, it's an all-year-round treat now with Stokely canned ears. This tall can contains four ears of tender, golden bamtam corn, ready to heat and serve. Our low price, 19c

B & M Brown Bread—Good old-fashioned brown bread all baked and packed in vacuum. Just open, slice and serve. Made by Burnham and Morrell Co., packers of the famous B. & M. Baked Beans, and just as good, too. Our low price, can, 15c

Crosse & Blackwell Beef or Irish Stew—Delicious stews all made, ready cooked, ready to serve. The name, Crosse & Blackwell, guarantees the quality—makers of fine foods for years. Our low price, can, 19c

Crosse & Blackwell Damson Jam—Another Crosse & Blackwell treat for those who enjoy something different. The damson is a member of the plum family, and is recognized as a delicious jelly fruit. Crosse & Blackwell's method of jam making brings out its best. One-pound glass, 25c.

Sanico Grape Juice—If you are a grape juice drinker here's worth-while savings for you. Sanico is a high quality product guaranteed to give complete satisfaction. Pressed from choice grapes. Try it. Our low price, pint, 17c; quart, 32c

Stokely's Tomato Puree—The handy little can with hundreds of uses. It's the strained pulp of Stokely's whole, ripe tomatoes—no seeds, no core, no skins. For sauces, soups, escalloped dishes, macaroni, noodles, rice, spaghetti, etc. 11-oz. can, 5c

Milani's Noodle Products—Ready to serve complete dinners in three varieties: chicken and noodles plain, chicken and noodles Spanish style, and cottage dinner. Each priced at 29c a jar.

Bavarian Bar Spread—A blend of several varieties of Blue Moon cheeses, combined into a delicious spread. Not too bity, not too mild. It is packed in a handy glass container that may be used as an ash tray, coaster or ice-box dish when empty. Glass, 3-oz., 15c

Martel Boneless and Skinless Sardines—Big fellows—mild and delicious. Imported, packed in fine olive oil. Sardines of this quality usually sell for 8 to 10c a can more. Our price, 2 cans for 25c.

That Future Crisis.

Prior to the last election it was the crisis behind us which justified any and every form of hasty legislative action. Now it is the crisis ahead. In this week's "fireside chat" the President warned that "the dangers of 1929 are again becoming possible." To avert disaster he argues that "we cannot delay one moment in making certain that our national government has power to carry through."

This invocation of a future emergency would be more effective if the President would explain how a change in the composition of the Supreme Court can possibly save the country from the particular kind of inflationary crisis which he prophetically envisages. There is, of course, no denying that the foundation for an inflationary boom has been laid, by Mr. Roosevelt himself. The current rapid upturn in prices of commodities and securities is evidence. But why a casual fiscal policy justifies an equally casual attitude toward the Supreme Court remains a mystery.

A huge volume of bank deposits has been created during the past few years by the methods employed to finance recurrent Federal deficits. These deposits created by Treasury borrowing operations—constitute an imperfectly-utilized purchasing power that could sustain a tremendously inflated price structure. But how on earth can Mr. Roosevelt hold the septuagenarian justices responsible for the deficits that piled up these idle bank funds? How can he blame the "nine old men" for the devaluation policy that has attracted the gold hoards of the world to our shores? How would six, or sixty thousand, "young bloods" upon the bench avert the danger of inflation through uncontrollable credit expansion?

The country must look to the President, not to the courts, for reform of the practices which he says are threatening to bring on another crisis. The Supreme Court has nothing to do with governmental extravagance, with the unbalanced budget, or with any other aspect of the inflationary menace that is a legacy of the Administration's fiscal and monetary policies. But the device of an alibi is an old one and any stick, apparently, is good enough to flog that fractious "third horse."

New York And Child Labor.

Republican leaders in New York's Assembly have put themselves in an anomalous position by helping to defeat the proposed child-labor amendment to the Federal Constitution and then sponsoring a measure to keep the products of child labor out of that State.

Obviously rejection of the amendment can not be interpreted as a vote in favor of exploiting children. New York has a stringent child-labor law of its own. The purpose of the bill introduced by Assemblyman Abbott L. Moffat, with the support of the local Republican Party, is to coerce other States into adoption of similar high standards. With some exceptions, this measure would prohibit the sale in New York of goods produced, wholly or in part, by the labor of minors under 18 years of age.

When coupled with the Assembly's hostility toward the child-labor amendment, however, this move loses all semblance of consistency. The Legislature at Albany has said in effect: Congress can not be trusted to set up national safeguards against exploitation of children in industry, but that power may be safely exercised by New York State. For the effect of a New York law excluding products of child labor from sale in that Commonwealth would be to set a national standard for major industries.

The effectiveness of this venture, it is agreed, would depend upon enactment by Congress of the Bacon bill, forbidding the transportation of child-made goods into States where such merchandise can not be legally sold. In this way Congress would be asked to help the New York Legislature handle the child-labor problem on a national scale. States refusing to fall into line would find the free movement of their products blocked. Resultant complications would undoubtedly prove intolerable.

Presumably the sponsors of this scheme did not stop to analyze its implications. In defeating the amendment they bowed to religious groups who fear that its acceptance might interfere with the parochial schools. By bringing forth a substitute they hope to convince their constituents that they do not favor toil for minors. Ingenious as it is, however, this strategy is not likely to allay political apprehension.

A recent poll by the Institute of Public Opinion indicated that 83 per cent of the voters in the Empire State favor the child-labor amendment. Political maneuvers after that amendment has been defeated at Albany are not likely to satisfy the great majority who have concluded that Federal control is the only really effective means of handling the child-labor problem.

The Search For A Formula.

Apparently J. L. Jacobs has failed to convince the House sub-committee on District Appropriations that the report bearing his name affords a basis for equitable fiscal relations between the District and the Federal governments. The report itself was so long and complicated that few, if any, Congressmen found time to master the text. And even after it had been thoroughly explained by its author most members of the committee seemed to consider it unworkable.

On various occasions The Post has pointed out that the first prerequisite of a practical fiscal formula is simplicity. An equation that can be understood only by experts and worked out only by a corps of statisticians is as unacceptable to Congress as to the local community.

No scheme which depends upon a comparison of taxes or governmental costs in 17 non-comparable cities to indicate what the Federal Government should pay to its Capital can be expected to appeal to practical-minded legislators. By trying to revive this long-discredited formula the Jacobs committee succeeded only in befuddling the issue.

As matters stand, the local community has found the fiscal relations report unacceptable because of its inequity. House committees handling District legislation appear ready to discard it because it is so hopelessly complicated and because some of its findings are based upon flimsy assumptions. In these circumstances it should be a simple matter to write "finis" across Mr. Jacobs' $50,000 tome.

But the fiscal relations problem remains unsolved. Even if the Jacobs formula collapses of its own weight, it is of the utmost importance to the District to have a reasonable fiscal policy adopted. Interest is reverting, therefore, to the forgotten formula worked out by the Bureau of Efficiency in 1929-30. Incidentally that agency, since abolished, carefully analyzed the arrangement now advocated by the Jacobs committee and found it impractical.

Going back to a suggestion made more than a century ago, the bureau recommended that Congress grant the District an allowance that would compensate the local government for the excessive exemption of property from taxes here. Only 45 per cent of the land area of the District is now taxable, and this portion is being rapidly diminished by governmental purchases as well as construction of embassies, national churches and institutions that have been exempted from taxation. While the taxable base is thus shrinking, expenses of the local government are rapidly mounting.

If the House is ready to face realistically the District's financial crisis, it will consider this alternative to the unworkable Jacobs formula as a means of ending fruitless investigations as well as relieving local taxpayers of what are really national obligations.

New Assault On Madrid.

Four months have now elapsed since Gen. Francisco Franco, aided by Moorish mercenaries, Foreign Legionnaires and German and Italian "volunteers," first reached the outskirts of Marid.

The rebels were confident that city would fall in a few days. But it has remained in government hands and there is no sign of any early change in its status. On at least five occasions ambitious rebel offensives have been broken by loyalist resistance, aided by the international Socialist legion. The rebels have not even succeeded, despite enormous efforts, in cutting Madrid's communications with the sea although successive bombardments of the city have left it a shambles.

Now a sixth offensive has been undertaken by Gen. Franco. But this time he is planning no frontal attack. Instead, the rebels have begun a wide encircling movement to the north, with Guadalajara as the first objective and the complete isolation of Madrid as the ultimate purpose.

This is, in part, a repetition of the strategy applied some weeks ago when the assault on Madrid was temporarily suspended in order to make possible the reinforcement of the rebel armies moving on Malaga. In the last analysis, however, that city was captured not by the rebels themselves but by a regular detachment of Italian troops, equipped with Italian tanks, artillery and airplanes and commanded by Italian officers. This fact was boastfully admitted by the Italian press the moment the goal had been attained. The pretense of Italians serving on the rebel side simply as individual "volunteers" was thrown overboard under the intoxication of victory.

A similar situation now evidently exists in the fighting on the Guadalajara front. On the basis of past events it is easy to believe the truth of Gen. Miaja's assertion that the brunt of the sea fighting north of Madrid is now being borne by Italians. According to the leader of Madrid's defense forces, an entire Italian division under an Italian general is active in the fighting. This would be in line with the communique recently issued by the Fascist Grand Council in which Italy's solidarity with the Spanish rebels was reiterated.

In view of this stand it cannot yet be taken for granted that should the proposed sanitary cordon actually cut off all "volunteers" and supplies from entering Spain and should that lead to a government victory, Italy will abide by such an outcome of the civil war. Even more than Germany is Italy committed to the rebel cause.

It may be, however, that the Fascist government now feels certain of a rebel victory because there is already in Spain a sufficient number of Blackshirt troops to make that victory possible. After Malaga, Madrid. Or so Mussolini ardently hopes.

Rival Neutrality Bills.

The debate on what form of permanent neutrality legislation the United States should adopt has now been transferred to the House of Representatives. It has a real opportunity to perform a truly constructive act of statesmanship.

The Senate, by an overwhelming vote has approved the Pittman bill. This continues the existing provisions regarding a mandatory embargo on arms, ammunition and implements of war to belligerents. It also provides for a "cash and carry" program regarding war-time trade in essential raw materials. The House Foreign Affairs Committee, however, has placed the stamp of approval on the measure sponsored by Representative McReynolds, which, while broadly resembling the Pittman bill, differs from the latter in certain important particulars.

The McReynolds bill, while itself falling far short of what a truly discretionary neutrality policy should involve, is nevertheless more reasonable than the rival Pittman bill.

The latter, for instance, would by implication continue unchanged the present definition of what constitutes arms, ammunition and implements of war. It is conceivable, however, that because of technical progress new lethal instruments may be developed which will not come within the scope of the Senate bill. In this as in other respects it is difficult to write a prescription for the future. The McReynolds bill avoids the pitfall by giving the President power to enumerate the "arms, ammunition or implements of war, the export of which is prohibited."

The House measure also steers clear of certain dangers arising out of the "cash and carry" policy approved by the Pittman bill. In the eagerness to eliminate all possible dangers to American peace that may arise out of war-time trade, the Pittman bill makes it mandatory upon the President, once a state of war exists, to prohibit American ships from carrying essential raw materials to belligerents. It is based on the assumption that the next war will resemble that which broke out in 1914. Yet the Pittman bill would apply in the event of the outbreak of any war, small as well as great; one in which the possibility of American involvement was negligible as well as one in which it was considerable. Whatever the nature of a war the President's hands would be tied.

The McReynolds bill, with a greater sense of reality, would give the Chief Executive sufficient leeway to enable him to determine whether and to what extent the "cash and carry" program should be carried out. In some cases such a program might have no point whatever. It might merely prove embarrassing to the United States without serving any useful purpose. In other instances it might be found necessary to go far beyond the trade restrictions embodied in the Pittman act. The McReynolds bill avoids this danger by placing the power of determining the extent of the action to be taken in the hands of the President.

To cite a practical instance, the Pittman bill might, in the event of a European war, serve to cut off or impede normal American relations with Canada. Under the McReynolds bill the President could, in his discretion, rule out the Great Lakes from the operations of the neutrality law. The Pittman bill apparently permits of no such exceptions being made.

In assessing the relative value of any type of neutrality legislation it is important to ask two questions: First, would the proposed measure enable the Administration to act in a constructive manner to keep the United States out of war; secondly, would the sacrifices demanded by the measure be obviously greater than the possible benefits?

Applying this test to the Pittman and the McReynolds bills it is clear that the latter is wiser and more far-seeing. The House measure avoids placing the United States in a strait-jacket in anticipation of developments which no human being is capable of foreseeing. While laying down broad lines of policy, it gives to the Chief Executive at least a modicum of discretion to act in a manner best calculated to advance American interests, not least of which is our interest in the continuance of peace.

A California judge rules that a man has the legal right to kiss a woman other than his wife. It's a situation analagous to a pedestrian's right of way over an automobile: He knows he has it, but he's afraid to take it.

Reporters recently interviewed in the mountains of Tennessee a man who said he had never been 5 miles from his home. Not only that, but he insisted that he had never seen Mrs. Roosevelt.

Liberty Dearly Bought.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Our family had four uncles, a father and three sons fighting in the Revolutionary War for liberty, leaving a mother and daughter home alone to carry on through hard winters, and we have cherished the freedom so dearly bought.

Through years of hard work and economy our ancestors, some of them farmers, too, accumulated some property, but unfortunately invested it for an income in old age in "national bank" stock which we have doubly lost in the New Deal bank closures, causing untold hardship. We are near the age when the President insists one should be discarded, especially when they oppose him, but hard as it has been to lose our savings, it would be a greater loss to lose our liberty so dearly bought.

We were taught that "willful waste would bring woeful want," also that "Satan finds mischief for idle hands to do," and we are reminded of the truth of these sayings when we see the extravagance and waste, want and crime everywhere and many supported and encouraged in idleness.

If the President had come out openly before the election, as now in his "sit down" fireside fight, we would not be in the quick sands of the present time.

Blaming The System.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Roosevelt diatribe on Thursday night brought to mind Trumbull's couplet:

No man e'er felt the halter draw,
With good opinion of the law.

Criminals, when caught and convicted, are given to ranting against particular courts and the judicial system. Too often lawyers who take hopeless cases into court and lose are inclined to try to place the blame upon the judicial system.

The Nation has indeed reached a crisis when the occupant of the White House emulates the example of those others and endeavors to bring discredit upon the judiciary because he has been prevented from getting away with violations of the fundamental law.

"Women Need To Wake Up."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I believe all children should be separated from their parents until after 6 years of age. Give the children a chance to do their own thinking, unhindered by prejudices.

To me, women are on a par with idiots. Why trust them with the young minds of this growing world? Devise some system where they can develop and learn how to observe. Few children can reason before the age of 10. That is why memory work only should be taught in the lower grades of school. Why let women ruin this world? Few of them have an education that fits them to think.

Prof. Anderson, of the University of Minnesota, in testing over 10,000 children, says the boys can outsmart the girls even at housework. Until we begin to train our girls as boys are trained they will not be capable of any real creative thinking. The poorest co-ed college beats any woman's college. The women need to wake up. I have brought up two girls and four boys. The girls being older, I followed conventional methods and if you never met two idiots I can present them to you—mea culpa.

My boys, brought up on different lines, are "peaches." They are "going places." I know now the reason my girls are such idiots is the way they were educated to play with dolls. That is all life means to them, although they pretend to be so wise. ANONYMOUS.

Beating The Lights.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Sometimes, when weary of being cut-off from the green light by round-the-corner motorists, pedestrians dare to cross at points between intersections. No school of red herrings can obscure the fact that speed crazy motorists trying to beat the lights are the cause of most of deaths and injuries arising from traffic. D. C. MENDEL.

Crime and Profiteering.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The recent letter of Miss Vickers regarding prisons and crime should impress all thoughtful persons.

While distinct progress has been made in penology, the Nation still has a long way to go. Men like Sanford Bates and Warden Lawes have contributed splendidly toward adoption of scientific and humanitarian methods in place of obsolete tactics of ignorance and brutal treatment of prisoners. Yet there are plenty of jails in the country still where the sanitation is both disgusting and disease-breeding, the food is unfit to eat, working conditions are unfair and unintelligent, and inmates are handled according to medieval standards. All this must be ended if the situation is to be coped with.

Crime is largely economic in its causes. When not economic, it is usually biologic. Human beings are mainly the effects of circumstances, born into the circumstances that nature has built around them, and molded by the artificial circumstances of social conditions. In order adequately to deal with crime and materially lessen it, we must go back to these causes. Punishment and restraint, while they have their places, are not sufficient, and the causes themselves must be eliminated so far as possible.

Men and women who rob, burglarize, extort and defraud are in innumerable instances led to do so because they see the beneficiaries of "entrenched greed" living in luxury through legalized theft from the public. The criminal tries, on a small scale, outside of the law, and usually in a bungling way that assures eventual detection, to get what belongs to someone else. He attempts, without the protection enjoyed by the profiteer, to commit thefts that are ethically similar, although they affect less people. He gets caught and lands behind bars. When legalized theft is ended or minimized, illegal thieving and many related offenses will dwindle down to near the vanishing point.

The Charlottesville Tragedy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The recent crime in Charlottesville should open our eyes to certain existing evils in our social system—evils that are man-made, and for this reason remediable by man. We might with impunity hurl the charge of murder at the dentist, but are we not at the same time hurling this same charge at ourselves? The unfortunate girl found lying dead in a lonely cemetery is an isolated example of similar so-called "crimes" common to thickly populated urban centers in America, only the larger cities are content to dismiss these "crimes" as obscure notices in the obituary columns.

Except in the files of some callous welfare agency, the deaths of our Cleo Sprouses are never adequately recorded, the truth seldom shown the public unless some rebel author dips a Dreiserian pen into acid and throws a picture of life-across-the-tracks in our faces. Let us face the facts. The dentist presumably intended to be a humanitarian and bungled the job. The girl, caught between two fires—moral and economic—took the only way she knew and paid with her life. If the girl was murdered, it was by society's indifference and prudery. If the dentist is a criminal, are we less criminals when we tolerate the social and economic conditions that are the factors behind such crimes?

The Stabilization Fund.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The papers bring the disquieting intimation that the Treasury may use the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund to maintain the position or value of the franc.

As a plain, ordinary citizen I should like to see this $2,000,000,000 fund scrutinized and I would suggest that the Senate might interest itself in this. It would be too bad to wake up and find that it has been largely dissipated through our having played the good Samaritan too enthusiastically—as we seem to have faculty of doing at times.

The Dismissal Of Dr. Charles Tansill.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The dismissal of Dr. Charles C. Tansill by American University because of his open admiration for Hitlerism is an act of intolerance. I regard Hitlerism as essentially reactionary. But that has nothing to do with the decorum of retaining Dr. Tansill. Since when has it become a crime for college professors to express tory sentiments?

Dr. Tansill is one of America's leading historians and is nationally known. I have heard him lecture. He bends backward to be fair. He was specially selected by Congress in 1925 to prepare research on who started the World War. His impartial and carefully documented report dissipated the myth of German war guilt. This report, strangely, was suppressed and never saw the light of day. I am not a German, nor of German ancestry, but believe in telling the truth.

Dr. Tansill is not accused of teaching Hitlerism in the classroom. Indeed, university officials do not accuse him of anything. Nowadays, college officials have learned wisdom. In order to avoid stirring up a dispute in public, they quietly "drop" a professor "for administrative reasons" or "for budget restrictions" and seal his mouth up by threat of blackballing if he squeals. If he makes a fuss, every college in the country will refuse to hire him, because they all dread "publicity" like smallpox. Glenn Frank, of Wisconsin, Republican, and Jerome Davis, of Yale, militant New Dealer, were quietly "dropped" also.

The truth is that our big universities have become mausolea of thought. They are so tied up with Big Business that they unconsciously regard their professors as "employes" who are supposed to think the same thoughts as the "big boss" who "hires" them. Colleges not only buy the brains of a man who becomes a professor but think they are entitled to his soul as well.

Every college should have one or two Fascists, Hitlerites, Communists, Socialists, Republicans, Democrats, New Dealers, Single-Taxers, yes, even Prohibitionists, to say nothing of a couple of fundamentalists and evolutionists. They should not propagandize in the classroom, of course, but outside should be allowed the common courtesy accorded ordinary citizens. We pay our college professor the salary of a bricklayer and treat him as (pre-1937) member of the Supreme Court. As a matter of fact, nowadays, college professors are so numerous and talk so much people do not attach oracular importance to their ex-cathedra expressions.

I am strongly of the opinion that the dictum laid down years ago by Voltaire: "I disagree with everything you say, but I will fight to the death for your right to say it," is good Americanism. Many of us hate the dictatorships of Moscow, of Rome, of Berlin. But we hate even more intensely the chauvinism that takes refuge in wiliness and subterfuge. American University is an accredited and semipublic institution and the public is entitled to know what is going on behind the scenes. If it does not take the public into its confidence it will lose prestige. When an educational institution loses that, it loses its capital. Dr. Tansill is a gentleman and a scholar and has the reticence characteristic of researchers. We cannot expect him to take the initiative. It is up to the university authorities to "come clean."

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Communism vs. Fascism.

SOME fellow writes to inquire why these dispatches so often view with alarm the possibility of a Fascist movement in this country but seldom show any concern about a rise of communism. The answer to that is easy.

The answer is that communism will never get to first base in the United States because it is strictly a foreign article and identified with atheism. On the other hand, there is a good deal of native fascism in the American make-up and a strong religious and chivalrous strain. The chivalry is somewhat juvenile in that it sometimes goes out to avenge an insult just for a workout, knowing that no such insult ever was offered.

The tendency toward fascism has been demonstrated many times in vigilant movements of various kinds, such as the Ku Klux, the Knights of Luther, the Silver Shirts and the Black Legion, and in the domination of many communities by an element vaguely described as the right-thinking, God-fearing, patriotic Americans.

Individually they are all right, and their Americanism under normal conditions is pure. But bring them together under the spell of secrecy and the charm of a voice in the belief that they are morally better than the nonjoiners and you have the nucleus of fascism.

• • • •

If the late Ku Klux had grown big enough to elect a President and a Congress it might have gone ahead to pack the Supreme Court and then pass laws to revoke the citizenship and confiscate the property of all Americans in the three groups which it held to be un-American. This would have required some distortion of the Constitution, but fascism makes its own Constitution, so that would have been no problem at all.

The danger of fascism is that it is insidious. It employs religion as a stooge and communism as a punching dummy in regions where even the poorest people would tar and feather a Communist agitator on the ground that he must be there to advocate sexual promiscuity and the burning of the churches.

The majority of the American Communist leaders have been either foreigners or Americans who caught communism in Russia. The American Fascist leaders all were born on this side. Communism has never made any progress here except in a few crowded industrial or metropolitan centers where there are foreign settlements.

• • • •

It is fairly easy to recognize communism, because it simply cannot disguise itself as that which we understand as Americanism. It wants no part of Americanism. It wants Russian communism, and to the great mass of Americans that means that any whiskered foreigner with weevils in his beard, a "ski" on the end of his name and the blood of American co-eds on his hands can have his way of any American woman. That is the thing which the American naturally will fight to the death, and that and atheism make it too easy for Fascist organizers to rouse the patriots from time to time.

It is not easy to recognize fascism, because it always calls itself Americanism and calls on everyone who calls himself an American to join some band to protect his hearth and altar from the foul invader. This democracy has done an excellent job of providing this protection all these years, but now and again there comes a call for some special deputies to back up the authorities.

Considering the known American appetite for this kind of thing and the suckers we have been for promoters preying on our regard for home and church, I feel that fascism might be put across some time, especially if we get careless about law and the Constitution. But communism, should it ever make a break, would be slapped down in a few days. Communism just isn't in the breed.

Invitation College Sports

An American university, Johns Hopkins, will no longer charge admission to its athletic events. Paid admissions will be abolished with the opening of the 1937 football season. When the major colleges that have been talking so much about abolishing commercialism got the news you could have knocked them over with a cash register.

• • • •

Nothing flabbergasts the colleges as a whole more than the news that one of them has gone sincere.

• • • •

Admission to the Johns Hopkins athletic events will be by invitation. You will be allowed, however, to pay for the peanuts and popcorn.

• • • •

Even this university hasn't gone far enough. If the colleges want to go the limit in giving the public a fair break they will endow the hot dog stands, distribute coffee free and lend a guy a steamer rug.

Correspondence On The President's Supreme Court Proposal

No Mandate To Revise Bench Found In November Election

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The great unorganized middle class contributed more in votes, more in money to the re-election of Roosevelt than Lewis' highly organized group of sit-downers. It has nothing in common with the sit-downers who respect neither property nor the rights of their fellow workers.

It is not yet fully aroused but should be. When it speaks the President and Congress will listen.

In the last election the great middle class followed the President because of his brilliant handling of the banking situation, his promotion of peace by trade agreements, his vast expenditures for relief. It gave only lip service to the NRA and breathed a sigh of relief when the Supreme Court buried the NRA, already dead from public disapproval. It wasn't enthusiastic over the AAA and recognizes the soil conservation program as more in keeping with sound economics and American life than crop destruction and regimentation.

The Supreme Court has protected property and liberty. It has sustained the Government's gold relief measures, and the only phase of the TVA that has come before it, it has not prevented vast expenditures for relief, flood control and soil conservation. It has not struck down anything as unconstitutional which either the great middle class or the citizens generally want. It has held that the Constitution does not give the Federal Government control generally over wages and hours. No one supposed it did.

Not even labor leaders wanted such broad powers of control exercised by the Federal Government until recently when they have come to believe that Government control will, in fact, be domination by their faction of organized labor. Does the great middle class want such domination by either the sit-down faction or the Green faction? Does either faction want domination by the other? If not, do not tamper with the Supreme Court or the Constitution.

"The Greed For Power Grows Apace"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The recent attack of Mr. Roosevelt upon the Supreme Court, with all of its characteristic accompaniments, is in complete accord with the logic of the farcical New Deal. At the outset in 1933, the abrogation of practically all rules of the game was demanded. Many Congressmen forthwith renounced both their rights and their duties. The brain trust, that exotic but delicate flower, bloomed, faded and died. But constantly, in ever greater volume, the virus of conceited intolerance continues to pour forth.

Now the time has come when the Administration can do no wrong. It is the custodian of all that is just and right and true. It sours at the least opposition. It brooks no resistance. It cannot graciously accept the slightest rebuke. Dissent, even from the Supreme Court, invites a barrage of bombastic and abusive epithets. Deliberately antagonisms, discords, divisions and enmities have been created amongst the people throughout the land; and by every conceivable device the enginery of corruption has been built up. Meanwhile, the outstanding accomplishment of four years of monkeying, muddling and wasting seems to be an "even more grave" crisis than "that of four years ago," which was announced during the most recent tirade against the court.

But the greed for power grows apace. Already the foundations of tyrannical repression have been laid. Government based upon free association and discussion is rapidly ceasing to be, and we are threatened with despotic rule by truculent railing, the passion of egotism, vindictive epithets, intimidation and terrorism visited upon the needy, and brash, obnoxious flunkyism.

One searches the pages of history in vain for another such exhibition of overweening conceit. There is a brightening ray of hope. Increasing numbers of Congressmen are asserting their rights as men and courageously facing their duties as public servants. But they will need the support of all citizens who cannot be deceived by tall talk, citizens who are not afraid to think this "crisis" through.

LOOKING FORWARD.
Washington, March 7.

"No One Knows What The End May Be"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When the world and our country in particular are in a state of social flux, when crime is rampant and there appears to be little respect for law, constituted authority, or the rights of private property, it is not only deplorable, but the height of folly and unwisdom for the President of the Nation to indulge in such unwarranted criticisms and condemnation of our highest judicial tribunal.

In the first place, the charges he makes against the Court are false, and have been proven so, and yet he continues to make them with reckless abandon and utter irresponsibility. This in itself is bad enough, but what must be the effect upon the weak-minded and criminally inclined elements of the people? The answer is found in the wave of revolting criminality sweeping the country, and the utterly indefensible and lawless "sit-down" strikes now going on in practically every industry.

The inevitable results of such condemnation of the courts by the Chief Executive of the Nation is to bring the courts and the laws of the land into contempt, and to encourage crime and revolt against the established order.

The course of Mr. Roosevelt has encouraged revolution, and he has sown the wind by his reckless appeals to the mob, to class hatreds, and his attacks upon our institutions, and we are now reaping the whirlwind, and no one knows what the end may be, but thoughtful and patriotic people fear the worst.

"Prefers To Pass The Buck In Advance"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Some kindly old timer—under 70, of course—but experienced in the intricacies of political bunk, should take time out to deliver to the President and his more fiery New Deal court packers, a fireside chat.

He should explain kindly but firmly, as when one addresses recalcitrant infants, that the mandate was not a shutout victory; is capable of several interpretations, just like a court decision that displeases New Deal higher-ups.

That to the 16 million must be added the several millions "mixed up in politics" who will leap in whichever direction they glimpse immediate gain—and as promptly turn back.

That the reliefer vote swayed more millions and that they will continue to be swayed only so long as the manna-barrel remains full.

That the Northern Negro vote was manipulated in a way to make the solid South cheer!

That those unable to discern political bunk when served up to them constituted another cool million.

That the first impetus to recovery followed overthrow of New Deal pap treatments—and will continue under the same auspices.

That President Roosevelt has not yet had the courage to declaim against $10 to $15 a day labor in favor of $10 a week labor.

That he vaguely recognizes a discrepancy by his alarmist statement of a "return to conditions of 1929, not tomorrow not next week but possibly in a year." But that he prefers to pass the buck in advance to the present Supreme Court and not a pilloried substitute of New Deal genus.

"If Such Had Been Compelled To Retire"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I know that the Psalmist says that "The days of our age are threescore years and ten," but that refers to humanity in general. In particular there are shining exceptions—examples of the inexpediency and injustice of making 70 the shelf-age. And I cannot but wonder if our Chief Executive has ever come across the excellency of such exceptions.

Here are a few that come to mind: Between the ages of 70 and 83, Commodore Vanderbilt added one hundred million dollars to his fortune, which betokens a fair amount of business ability for a doddering old septuagenarian! At 74 Immanuel Kant wrote his "Antropology," the "Metaphysics of Ethics," and "Strife of the Faculties," which seems fair evidence that senility had not set in with the great German philosopher.

Or our own Oliver Wendell Holmes, who was in his genial eightieth year when he wrote that brimming "Over the Tea Cups," and we need not be told how this balanced and brilliant Chief Justice kept all his remarkable faculties unto the destined, and not the demanded end!

Marcus Portius Cato began the study of Greek when a youthful Roman of 80! Goethe at 80 completed "Faust," of which it has been said, that "literature has no stronger or more incongruous masterpiece."

Tennyson wrote his divinely impressive farewell, "Crossing the Bar" at 83. At 98 Titian painted his historic picture of the "Battle of Lepanto." It was said of the great artist that "the glow of his work increased with age, marked to the last with vigor and enthusiasm." Can you calculate the loss to the world if such as these had been compelled to retire at 70?

And when we come to the present day, and witness a political and personal animus aimed at a figure clothed not only with the judicial robe, but with a rare judicious character—a master of mental process coupled with true dignity, balanced decision and unblemished character—we do not wonder at the storm of protest that has arisen at the possibility of retiring Chief Justice Hughes in his 75th year.

THE VICAR.

"Lack Of Memory About The Facts"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your editorial of March 9 entitled "The Appeal to Reason" you quote the President as follows: "some of our supporters . . . were worried by the evil symptom that the propaganda and the epithets of last summer and fall had died down."

You then go on to imply that our great President is irrational by making the following observation: "To the rational mind it would seem a most healthy sign that the eighteen million voters who cast ballots against Mr. Roosevelt were so generally disposed to accept his sweeping victory in good part. How any responsible person could regard this as an 'evil symptom' is incomprehensible."

I now appeal to your memory to recall the period immediately after the election during which virtually every newspaper—including your own—lamented the fact that the Democratic majorities had been so large that all hope of an effective opposition was without prospect. This fact was further expounded, day by day, in your editorial columns, when you so eloquently stated that our democracy was founded on the two-party system and that such a majority as the Democrats now had in Congress was not conducive to good government.

Of course, I am opposed to your entire line of thought in this, but this point, I believe, is not an opinion, but a lack of memory about the facts.

Quotes Court's Right To 'Veto'

Reader Sees No Arrogation In Rulings Affecting Legislation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In his fireside chat March 9 President Roosevelt questioned the right of the Supreme Court to pass on the constitutionality of an act of Congress. The President hoped that his listeners would read and re-read the Constitution. I echo that hope. The reader of the Constitution will find this language appearing in Article III, Section 2, which article deals with the creation of the Supreme Court:

The judicial Power shall extend * * * to Controversies to which the United States shall be a Party; * * *

Further on, in Article VI, Section 2, this is said:

This Constitution, and the Laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof; * * * shall be the supreme Law of the Land; * * *

The United States is always a party to a proceeding in which the constitutionality of a Congressional act is involved. It seems clear, therefore, that under the Constitution the Supreme Court in passing upon such a question is only performing its duty, and that it is not arrogating to itself unlawful power, as the President would have us believe. If the Supreme Court does not have this right under the Constitution, then the question arises, who is to say that an act of Congress is or is not made in accordance with the terms of the Constitution, which is the supreme law of the land and anything in conflict therewith must yield.

Is an act of Congress to be unrebuttably presumed to be constitutional merely because it is an act of the legislative body? Apparently that is the idea, because further on in the chat the President tells us that given the opportunity he will appoint justices who will not undertake to override the judgment of the Congress on legislative policy. If this is to become a fact, of what worth will be the constitutional guarantees of certain rights to the people, such as contained in the Bill of Rights?

A supine Congress under a dominant executive may pass laws that unquestionably would violate some provision of the Constitution, but there would be no relief. One may have the idea that a change in the Congressional membership or in the Executive itself could be effected by the ballot. But even that right could be taken away by legislative fiat, and then there would be no redress except by rebellion. Is that democracy? It has happened in Europe. It can happen here.

Willoughby's Words.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The following quotation from Mr. W. Willoughby's "Principles of the Constitutional Law of the United States" has seemed to me to be one which, in view of President Roosevelt's frequent criticism of the Supreme Court, is deserving of the thought and consideration of every American citizen:

Those legislators, therefore, who vote for a measure without being honestly convinced of its constitutionality, and excuse themselves upon the ground that, if their action is not valid, the courts have the opportunity so to declare, are recreant to their duty. Not only, as we have seen, may serious consequences follow from these acts before their invalidity is judicially determined, but, what is of still more importance, an unfortunate burden is thrown upon the courts. No popular government can successfully endure in which the decisions of its courts do not receive the general approval of the citizen body. But, if legislatures recklessly pass measures ostensibly for the benefit of the masses, but invalid when tested by the fundamental law, the odium of defeating these measures is thrown upon the courts, and a popular objection to and distrust of these courts is created. For, of course, the people generally cannot be expected to appreciate the constitutional questions involved. All that they can see and appreciate is that their legislative representatives have enacted a measure in their interests, which the courts have declined to recognize as valid.

Waltman's Articles.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Let me add my praise to that of Mr. Carter's concerning the truthful articles of Mr. Waltman's, in your paper of March 7.

With all the strength and vigor of our language I want to condemn the President's desire to influence the opinions of the Supreme Court. With an executive like our present one all independent men and women know the United States needs a court composed of honest he-men.

And furthermore, let me say I believe all intelligent and competent farmers disapprove of the efforts of Mr. Wallace to plan their lives.

Hamilton On Aged Judges

(From The Federalist, No. 79.)

The want of a provision for removing the judges on account of inability has been a subject of complaint. But all considerate men will be sensible that such a provision would either not be practiced upon or would be more liable to abuse than calculated to answer any good purpose. The mensuration of the faculties of the mind has, I believe, no place in the catalogue of known arts. An attempt to fix the boundary between the regions of ability and inability, would much oftener give scope to personal and party attachments and enmities than advance the interests of justice or the public good. The result, except in the case of insanity, must for the most part be arbitrary; and insanity without any formal or express provision, may be safely pronounced to be virtual disqualification.

The constitution of New York, to avoid investigations that must forever be vague and dangerous, has taken a particular age as the criterion of inability. No man can be a judge beyond sixty. I believe there are a few at present who do not disapprove of this provision. There is no station, in relation to which it is less proper than to that of a judge. The deliberating and comparing faculties generally preserve their strength much beyond that period in men who survive it; and when, in addition to this circumstance, we consider how few there are who outlive the season of intellectual vigor, and how improbable it is that any considerable portion of the bench, whether more or less numerous, should be in such a situation at the same time, we shall be ready to conclude that limitations of this sort have little to recommend them. In a republic, where fortunes are not affluent, and pensions not expedient, the dismission of men from stations in which they have served their country long and usefully, on which they depend for subsistence, and from which it will be too late to resort to any other occupation for a livelihood, ought to have some better apology to humanity than is to be found in the imaginary danger of a superannuated bench.

Excerpts From Letters

To appease the blasted dignity of the honorable old men of the court, I would suggest the President appoint a Council of Elders (I believe Japan has such a system). Each of the 48 States and Territories could elect its most public-spirited citizen, either man or woman, 70 years or older, to serve the country without remuneration but great honor. Their advice would be asked only when the country faced a great crisis, like the World War or the present constitutional controversy.

RICHARD J. PAHNKE.

A President is often spoken of as the "Chief Magistrate," as well as Chief Executive. The definition of a "magister" is, a "dispenser of wisdom." Do we doubt either the wisdom or the motive of our Chief Magistrate at this crucial hour of human history as to delay his objectives? The late President Taft, before he was elected to office, I heard tell in Worcester, Mass., much about "the law's delay." President Roosevelt is evidently trying to remedy that evil, by resorting to the use of younger minds to move with the rate of vibration demanded by the new era.

I see where a great feast, $100 a plate, was held to celebrate the seizing of absolute power under false pretense. And if Congress was present they must have felt at home to hear the usual voice, "Must." Countless dictators have said the same thing. And if you will look there is poverty and want in every land of dictatorship.

MARY McNUSS.

At one dinner the President's lady assures young Democrats that the country is too peaceful to accept a dictatorship. "Peaceful" with strikes on every side and a mighty organization aiding and abetting bigger and better strikes!

At a neighboring dinner the President "demands" action on "his" court proposals "now!"

BEWILDERED.
Washington, March 5.

No doubt many of the members of the Congress intend to stand for re-election. If they should vote for the President's proposal what do they think is going to happen to them in the next election? The President says he is not going to be a candidate four years from now. If members of the Congress think it may be popular to help the President pack the Supreme Court let them come back home and mingle with the people and find out—they will get the surprise of their lives.

THOMAS M. CASEY.
Ellsworth, Wis., March 5.

Twenty-seven million voters can't be wrong. Why not help President Roosevelt carry out his progressive program? We know that the Supreme Court has by its adverse decisions defeated almost every progressive measure recommended by the President. With the Liberty Leaguers and their coadjutors lined up against any attempt to pass an amendment to the Constitution it would take years to pass. Therefore, the only way out of this dilemma is to enlarge the court and appoint more progressive judges—men who are in sympathy with the President's efforts to help all the people.

S. MAGRUDER.
Washington, March 4.

Many thoughtful people do not believe that the framers of the Constitution intended that the Supreme Court should assume power to such an extent that it would dominate both the executive and legislative branches of the Federal Government. At the present time the Supreme Court is wielding more power over legislation than either the President or the Congress or the 130,000,000 people of the United States. The Supreme Court is wielding more power than all these combined.

The President has likened himself to a quarterback on a football team—if one play does not work, try another.

Why not continue the comparison? If he tries one play and it fails and the second is declared illegal does he want to change the quarterback or the referee?

A DEMOCRAT.
Washington, March 8.

This wonderful country of ours would be a much better place in which to live if the President would follow Abraham Lincoln's ideals and practice "malice toward none and charity for all." In so doing he would not show this vindictive attitude towards that dignified tribunal, the Supreme Court, which represents the very foundation of our Government and to which all true Americans cling with deep affection and respect.

Your editorial, "Driving A Wedge In His Party," recalls your ominous warning prior to the 1936 election that the Democratic Party was badly split due to the defection of Al Smith, Davis, etc., and the apparent luke-warmness of Carter Glass and others. The result of the election signally failed to sustain such views. Hence real supporters of the President will not now be deceived by your renewed warnings to the Democratic Party.

Recovery Seen As New Deal's

Prosperity Said Returning 'In Spite Of' Court Decisions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Allow me to reply to the letter of William H. Parry, of Newark, N. J., published in your issue of March 8.

Mr. Parry states in part: "During the entire period when the New Deal legislation was in its fullest bloom and before the Supreme Court had nullified any of his particular measures, United States lagged far behind many of the nations of the world in the return to normal conditions." In this Mr. Parry is wrong. If he thinks the majority of the nations of the world have returned to normal conditions let him travel abroad for a few months and observe the conditions as they actually exist.

Mr. Parry further states: "Indeed, America's return to a more prosperous condition was almost coincident with the nullification of the major New Deal measures by that tribunal. December, 1936, was the first month in which industrial production in the United States surpassed the 1929 average."

I might advise Mr. Parry that the return to normal conditions in the United States is due to the continued efforts of the President and "in spite" of the Supreme Court's decisions.

Does Mr. Parry feel that because the United States has returned or surpassed the 1929 average in industrial production that the President and Congress of the United States should cease its efforts to improve and assure continued prosperity? Does he feel that because we have reached the average of 1929 that we should return to the do-nothing policies of the Coolidge and Hoover era? Probably so. But let me advise Mr. Parry that he will have a hard time convincing 27,000,000 people in the United States of this fact.

Allow me also to reply to one statement made by Mr. Richard R. Feldman, East Falls Church, Va., in his letter of March 6, published in the same edition as Mr. Parry's letter. Mr. Feldman refers to the remarks made by President Roosevelt March 4 and states in part: "But we have arrived with one horse lying down on us—Congress; another horse dashing for all points of the compass including the stars, namely, Mr. Roosevelt; and only one of the team trying to plod along in the furrows—to wit: the Supreme Court."

Mr. Feldman makes one mistake in his reference to the Supreme Court. He speaks of one of the team trying to plod along in the "furrows." He should have said "furrow" and I would like to advise Mr. Feldman that you cannot plow a field by plodding along in the same furrow indefinitely.

"Without Understanding."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: President Roosevelt delivered his "fire side" radio message to our people last night, and the Supreme Court received a severe chastisement. Just what the reactions to this message will be, are unknown at present. I think a majority of the people will indorse it, possibly without understanding its meaning or far reaching effect.

The Supreme Court has invalidated a number of the New Deal laws that to the average citizen were not understood.

I have often wondered why these laws, and their invalidations were not reconstructed with simple interpretations by the conveyors of public expression, so that the average citizen could read with understanding. Had this been done, I believe the Supreme Court and its work would be receiving the highest commendation by a large number of those who condemn it today. This is a most serious and vital matter for all of us.

The newspapers are the people's first line of defense and the courage of the papers is the courage of the people. Through this medium we have freedom of thought, expression and action.

Omitted Clause.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The excellent news report in The Post of March 10 of my reply to Mr. Harry L. Hopkins' recent radio address on the President's court proposal evidently omitted a line in the last paragraph which materially affects the sense of what I was trying to say.

You quoted me as saying: "My point is that an end, no matter how good and desirable, does not justify a means which has been operating satisfactorily for the past century and a half."

What I actually said was that it "does not justify a means which is destructive of the fundamental system of Government which has been operating satisfactorily for the past century and a half."

Proponents See Need To Bring Judiciary Into New Deal Camp

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the welter of discussion concerning the future of the Supreme Court, three certainties seem to have been overlooked.

First, that in few families or communities, non-governmental, do those in the prime of life seek and follow, as a rule, the advice of members of their group who are above 70 or 75 years of age. It simply isn't in accord with human nature.

Second, the closest parallel to a legal career is the academic. Our universities and colleges have found it advisable to fix an age limit for their teachers partly because of the general divergencies of age and youth, but also because it is all-important instruction should keep abreast with increase of knowledge, and mental vigor to study and assimilate new facts usually grows less after even so moderate an age as 65.

The third certainty is that a justice of the Supreme Court retired for age, on full pay, need not be shelved. He would have full command of his time, perhaps for the first time in a long, busy life. If he remained mentally active, he could, by writing and through friends and disciples, exert a wider influence than ever before.

Prof. Henry M. Tyler, of Smith College, still young at 68, found it hard to be shut off from teaching the Greek he loved; but he was too wise to repine and in the true spirit of ancient Athens accepted a call to his city's service, which needed his good judgment and moderation and gave his full measure of gratitude.

It is interesting to realize that had there been a statute requiring retirement from the Supreme Court at 70 years, President Roosevelt would have had opportunity to appoint only one justice in his first term (successor of Justice Butler) and one in his second term (successor of Justice Cardozo). The successors of Justice Hughes, Van-Devanter, McReynolds, Brandeis and Sutherland would all have been appointed before he took office.

It would seem more fitting that in each administration the President should normally appoint two justices. Among our population of more than 120,000,000 surely two blameless, richly endowed jurists could be found about 55 years old, in good health, who might be expected to serve their country 15 years.

It is not the fault of President Roosevelt that the present situation, unparalleled in the Army and Navy or in academic life or at the Capitol (what should we think of a Congress two-thirds of whose members were over 70 years old?) exists in the Supreme Court today.

For the honor and prestige of the Court, for the good of our whole country now and in years to come, it should be rectified and repetition of it should be prevented. There seems no good reason why the four oldest justices should not now retire and a start be made toward an equable system of appointment, which shall be established later by amendment to the Constitution.

"I Am Sure It Would Win Hands Down"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The purpose of this letter is to question the accuracy of your implication that the majority of the American people is opposed to the plan. You base this implication on the strength of Dr. Gallup's recent poll which shows that 53 per cent of the people are in the opposition. Were this poll actually accurate, it would merely signify that the people are about evenly divided on the question.

But the Gallup poll is far from accurate, as was demonstrated during the recent election. Although that poll predicted a sweeping victory for the President, its estimate fell far below the actual vote that the President obtained. In fact, it was about 7 points out of line, for the country as a whole and even 10 points too low in some of the large Eastern States. It was merely the good fortune of Dr. Gallup that the President's lead was so big that even a 7 per cent underestimate could not affect the predicted result. Had the President obtained only 54 per cent of the popular vote instead of the 62.5 per cent that he actually got, the poll would have indicated a Landon victory.

The same reasons which account for the error in that poll, exist to an even intensified degree in the present poll. One of the reasons is that Dr. Gallup's poll does not tap the sources of the President's strength in proportion to their actual numbers. The second reason is that those who are opposed to the President and all his endeavors are a more vociferous lot than his supporters. The preponderance of letters to the editor attacking the judiciary proposal over those supporting it, is no true indicator of their relative strength. People who are defeated, disgruntled and against something, are more apt to rush into print to express their injured feelings than those who are on the winning side.

Applying, therefore, a 7-point correction to Dr. Gallup's recent poll, a correction necessary to adjust the errors inherent in that poll, the result is not a 53-47 vote against the President's plan but 54-46 vote in its favor.

I am sure that if the President's plan was submitted to a vote by the people, it would win hands down.

J. H. RUBENSTEIN.

"Unless The Judiciary Is In Harmony"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Certain clauses of the Constitution are quite clear and the Supreme Court and lower courts are generally unanimous in deciding cases arising under them. While others lend themselves to various interpretations, and the Supreme Court even reversed itself on several occasions.

It is perhaps well that, for an example, the Bill of Rights is quite clear and that the "interstate commerce" clause is not so rigid and can be interpreted differently now from what it was previously interpreted, to suit the needs of the times. Since judges are appointed by the President with the consent of the Senate, they will generally be representative of their age. Deaths and retirements have in the past afforded ample opportunity for keeping the court in harmony with the elected part of the Government, but rapid developments in science have increased human life and also are constantly changing the economical life of the Nation, making demands on the Government for solution of complicated modern problems.

These demands, registered in elections, cannot be met by the Government unless the judiciary is in harmony with the elected part of the Government, and this harmony is lackng because some of the Supreme Court members have been on that bench for over a quarter of a century and are out of step with the times.

I am in favor of a law obligating every incoming President to appoint three new Supreme Court members even though there may not be that many vacancies. With judges now able to retire after ten years service there is little danger of the number of justices on the court increasing unduly and we should have a court in harmony with the present age rather than an age gone by.

"Is The President Horse Or Driver?"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Using as a figure of speech a three-horse team to plow the field, as a characterization of Federal Government, lends itself to several interpretations.

The first question that may occur to one is: Is the President one of the horses or the driver? Assuming that the President, with his executive family, has the position of one of the horses, the public may be considered the driver. The public has placed him back in the team for another four years. It was not by that action given him power to change the other horses in the team.

In all cases, the driver selects the horses, and in most parts of the country he retains a direct control over each horse. An old-time custom remains in the East, however, of making one of the three horses the bar-share leader. (The other two are strapped to the leader and kept in place by crowdsticks and straps.) The driver controls the team by directing the leader. The President is now in the position of asking that both the horses and the hitch be changed to some extent so that he, the leader, can beter manage the strap horses.

One of the characteristics required of a leader is that he be patient. When the plow strikes a stone or a stump, he must relax and back up so that the plow may be lifted over or around real obstacles. As a leader the President now seems like the fresh horse that has forgotten the necessity of patience and tact in plowing as well as in guiding the team.

Listening to the Victory Dinner address, the idea might occur that we ought to depart from the horse and buggy days in the fields as well as in the roads, and abandon the use of horses in plowing. It is much easier to manage a tractor which cannot be headstrong or display stubborn horse-sense.

Japan'sLeaders Jeer at Sato's Chinese Policy

Friendship Plea Assailed; Parliament Hears War Threat Stressed.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, March 11.—Foreign Minister Naotake Sato's explanation of Japan's new policy of friendship for China tonight drew the fire of two major party leaders and warnings to the government that it faces grave danger from all sides.

The diet listened in silence as Dr. Hitoshi Ashida, publisher and Seiyukai leader, led the attack. Sato, making his second foreign policy speech in the parliament was heckled frequently.

"We are at the momentous crossroads between peace and war," said Dr. Ashida, president of the Japan Times, an English language newspaper.

Laughter Greets Sato.

Sato was greeted with laughter, when, discussing a Sino-Japanese deadlock, he said "If China rejects Japan's policy, we must wait patiently until China changes its attitude."

He appeared disconcerted by the barrage of questions hurled at him because of his doctrine that China henceforth should be treated as an equal nation and that friendship between the two countries should be fostered.

Dr. Ashida expressed surprise that Sato's speech of last week was received favorably in the United States and other countries, because, he said, the foreign minister's statements were too general and abstract to give any real idea of the actual factors behind Japan's new foreign policies.

Yusuke Tsurumi, of the Minseito, largest political party, joined in the attack on Sato.

Sees Poor Co-Operation

Despite the Government's claims of improved relations with Great Britain, he charged, there is little evidence of co-operation between the two countries. Trade relations especially, he said, were highly unsatisfactory.

Referring to relations with the United States, Tsurumi declared the most urgent issue was that of naval disarmament and what he called the "dangerous" situation in the Pacific.

"Sato," Dr. Ashida said, "merely stated (in his last speech) that he wished to make friends with all nations. We've heard such expressions frequently in the Diet before only later to have to face bitter realities."

"We are at the momentous crossroads between peace and war," he said. "The Nation is uneasy. The Government has no real capacity to lead the people. Some refer to war clouds hovering over the Amur River, others point to a tense situation in the Pacific."

Urges Arms Boost

"It is high time for the Government to unify and strengthen its national power and show the people wherein they should advance. * * *

"How does the Government intend to harmonize armaments and diplomacy? As Japan is isolated now, she must replenish land armaments against Russia and expand naval power against Great Britain and the United States."

Diplomacy, he said, "should be one of the main pillars of our national defense. If present relations with Russia are allowed to drift the result may be grave."

Premier Hayashi, meanwhile, moved into his new official residence, described as "assassination-proof." He took up residence in the $28,000 "House of Secrets" alone, forbidding his family to join him until the present session of Parliament ends.

Man Slays Self Here With Pistol

Jesse Lewis, 52-year-old employe of the Home for Incurables, shot and killed himself yesterday afternoon in the basement of his home at 3117 Hyatt place northwest.

The body was found on the floor by Joseph Mahaney, a roomer in the house, who just had returned from a drug store where he had purchased medicine for Lewis. Mahaney said a .38-caliber revolver was on the floor between the dead man's legs.

Mahaney, who had been gone from the house only about 20 minutes, told police Lewis wrote three notes. The notes all complained of ill health.

Today Is Last Chance to Enter Post's Big Bazooka Contest

Palace Theater Tomorrow at 8:30 A. M. to See Start of Fun; Entrants and Spectators Urged to Be On Time for Competition.

This is the last call for the big bazooka contest tomorrow morning at the Palace Theater.

The contest will begin promptly at 8:30 a. m. Every boy and girl who expects to participate—and all the boys and girls who are coming as audience—should be in the theater before 8:30 so they won't miss out on playing in the contest itself or any of the acts.

Red Skelton and Phil Lampkin, from the Loew's Capitol Theater, just down the street from the Palace, will be on hand to judge the bazooka bands, orchestras and smaller groups who will compete for dozens of prizes of merchandise.

In addition, Red has promised to do some monkeyshines all his own—and as every one knows, he is a very funny fellow. There also is a rumor going around that John Tio, the famous talking bird, may come to the bazooka contest. And show how he can carry on a conversation with his owner.

If you wish to enter the contest and have not yet sent in an entry form, just turn to the page with the Post comics and clip the coupon. Fill it in and return to The Post today. The coupon may be left at the front counter, first floor, of The Post Building, 1337 E street northwest.

Be sure to be at the Palace Theater before 8:30 tomorrow morning. The fun is all free. And lots of prizes for the best bazooka players.

New England Head Of G-Men Resigns

Boston, March 11 (U.P.).—Clarence D. McKean, chief of G-Men in New England since 1930 and first head of the Washington Fingerprint Bureau, tonight announced his resignation, effective immediately.

McKean, who has been with the Federal Bureau of Investigation for 20 years, said he would become manager of the Massachusetts Claim Investigation Bureau, an organization conducted by insurance companies for investigation of fraudulent claims.

McKean previously served as G-Men chief at Portland, Me., Pittsburg, Baltimore, Detroit, Oklahoma City, Jacksonville, Fla., and New York City. In 1924, he was in charge of the bureau's first fingerprint department at Washington.

Mellon Art Plan Halted in Senate

Opposition to the Mellon art gallery acceptance bill developed somewhat belatedly in the Senate yesterday and resulted in the measure being put over until another consent calendar day.

Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, stated he has some amendments to offer when the bill is acted on, but he declined to discuss them. Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York, said some architects in his State wanted an opportunity to be heard, presumably in protest against their inability to bid on the gallery.

Simultaneously Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, introduced a bill to authorize construction of a Smithsonian Gallery of Art as a separate project from the Mellon structure.

Two Projected Pacific Flights May Coincide

Miss Earhart Passes Blind Flying Test; Airways Grooms Clipper.

By the Associated Press.

Oakland, Calif., March 11.—Possibility of two simultaneous aerial dashes to the South Seas appeared today, with Amelia Earhart passing her first blind flying test preparatory to her projected world flight, and Pan-American Airways plans to fly a clipper plane to New Zealand.

Miss Earhart hopes to get away for Honolulu Monday.

Pan-American said its plane will start for the Antipodes within the next three days. Officials said the flights differed as to their objectives and would not follow the same route.

Miss Earhart, who has flown both the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans alone, took her $80,000 "flying laboratory" through an hour of "instrument flying" accompanied by Commerce Department Inspector R. D. Bedinger. The cockpit was covered.

"She can do it," said Bedinger as he stepped from the plane.

The aviatrix said the plane would not be taken up again until she starts the world flight.

"Scared?" she repeated in reply to a question. "No, just thrilled."

In contrast with her previous ocean flights, the forthcoming adventure calls for some navigational sharpshooting to hit the tiny islands on her route.

The first hop, 2,400 miles to Honolulu, requires a degree of accuracy, but the second flight leg is even more difficult. It involves precision steering toward tiny Howland Island, 1,900 miles across an untried skyway.

Reorganization Meeting Is Set For Next Week

Prettyman Names Steering Committee, Six Others on Reorganization.

The first business meeting of the Commissioners' newly formed committee on efficiency, appointed to study functions of the District government with possibilities of a general reorganization, will be next Thursday, it was announced yesterday.

Meanwhile, E. Barrett Prettyman, former people's counsel, and chairman of the group, announced appointment of a "steering committee" and six sub-committees to study various municipal problems.

The "steering committee" will coordinate work of the sub-groups and direct studies of the entire committee of 18, Prettyman said. Its members include John Locher, president of the Central Labor Union; Dr. William McClellan, president of the Potomac Electric Power Co.; Robert V. Fleming, president of Riggs National Bank, and Prettyman.

HOW TO TALK MUSIC

The article on page 60 of CORONET for March (on sale today) is going to make certain music-lovers boil. But all will find in it food for some exciting conversation.

Satisfy

Modern factories... spotlessly clean like your living room at home... that's where Chesterfields are made.

The Champagne Cigarette Paper is pure... burns without taste or odor ... you can't buy any better paper.

The mild ripe tobaccos are aged two years or more... like fine wines are aged.

Refreshingly milder... more pleasing taste and aroma... and best of all They Satisfy.

Hotel Reports Progress Made With Workers

Willard Management to Resume Parley With Union Today.

Saying the labor trouble this week at the Willard Hotel has demonstrated "that an unlawful and un-American sit-down strike cannot prevail" in this city, Manager Harry P. Somerville last night announced progress in negotiations with the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' Alliance.

Somerville issued a statement following a four-hour conference with representatives of the union, which conducted a sit-down strike of cooks, waiters and bellhops that began Monday and ended Tuesday.

"At the conference held today between the union and Willard management, the union agreed not to resort to the sit-down strike in the future," said Somerville.

"Negotiations were then reopened in reference to wages and hour and other conditions affecting employment. The wage increases which had been put into effect prior to the strike were discussed and found to be, for the most part, satisfactory."

Parley Resumes Today.

The negotiators will reassemble at the hotel at 1 p. m. today, Somerville asserted.

He said that the union's demand for a closed shop, which was refused, precipitated the sit-down strike of more than 100 workers and the question of wages and hours was not involved.

"The reason for the termination of the strike was the withdrawal by the union of their demand for a closed shop and the management's willingness to permit the strikers to return to their jobs at the request of the conciliator, Assistant Secretary of Labor McGrady," the Willard's managing director explained.

"Prior to the strike's termination, the management had taken the necessary steps to proceed with criminal prosecution under District of Columbia statute, if the sit-down strike had not been called off."

"The net result is that it has been demonstrated definitely, at least insofar as this city is concerned, that an unlawful and un-American sit-down strike cannot prevail."

Participants in the discussions yesterday included Morris Verbov, business agent of the union local; Joseph C. McGarraghy and Joseph W. Wyatt, legal counsel for the Washington Hotel Association and the Willard Hotel, respectively; Howard Colvin, Labor Department conciliator, and Somerville.

Picketing Continues.

Picketing of the two local branch plants of the National Pants Co. continued yesterday despite Manager Charles Pilzer's announcement of a new 5 per cent wage increase. This is in addition to the 10 per cent raise granted earlier in the week shorty after 41 women employes struck for union recognition.

Pilzer said he took back 18 "repentant" employes yesterday and reiterated his intentions of "forgiving everything" and rehiring those workers who are still out.

The pay increases are effective throughout the plants on piecework, hourly scales and weekly salaries, Pilzer said. He said he has no objections to any of his employes joining a union, but that he would negotiate only with them, not a union.

Most of the picketing yesterday occurred at the 516 Eighth street southeast plant, where all strikers are employed. Fewer union members and sympathizers gathered at the branch located at 408 First street southeast, which, according to Pilzer, is in no way affected by the strike.

Shrine Picks Charlotte.

Chattanooga, Tenn., March 11 (AP).—The Shrine Directors Association of North America selected Charlotte, N. C., today as the 1938 convention city. The meeting will be held March 23 to 25.

Symphony Workers to Report Donations at Luncheon Today

Reports of first day of campaigning will be made by volunteers who have rallied to the support of the National Symphony Orchestra at a luncheon this noon in the Hamilton Hotel.

Because of the enthusiasm with which 500 of the campaigners left the "rehearsal party" that launched the drive Wednesday afternoon in Constitution Hall, leaders yesterday looked hopefully toward the initial report session.

"We fully expect to be 20 per cent of the way to our $110,000 goal when the first day's reports are counted," said Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, campaign chairman. Mrs. Howe added that several large contributions have been reported unofficially by the special gifts committee.

Hans Kindler, conductor of the orchestra, will attend today's luncheon and will speak on artistic plans he has mapped for the orchestra.

Among important reports will be one from the recently organized men's business committee, which is presenting the orchestra's appeal to business and trades organizations. John E. Parker, chairman, will make the committee's report.

Frederick P. H. Siddons is the business committee's vice chairman, and members assigned to the several business groups are. Andrew Saul, real estate; Lee D. Butler, automobiles; Powell Browning, wholesale; Carl V. Eiker, graphic arts; Frank R. Jelleff and Mark Lansburgh, department stores; Arthur Harnett, hotels; Devid Karrick, warehouse and storage; Jeremiah W. McCarty, dairies; Edwin H. Etz, opticians; Fleming Newbold, publications; Richard P. Dunn, investment houses; Charles H. Tomkins, builders and architects, and Charles T. Clagett, utilities.

Campaign headquarters yesterday cited the active interest of the Junior Chamber of Commerce in the orchestra's drive as another manifestation of the businessman's enthusiasm for the Capital's symphony. John R. Hill, who is heading a committee of more than 30 Junior Chamber of Commerce members active in the campaign, will report for the group today.

At the personal invitation of Corcoran Thom, president of the National Symphony Orchestra Association, a group of prominent businessmen will meet at 4:30 p. m. today in the Cosmos Club to lay plans for supporting the symphony.

Cash Next Door Foils Trio.

Philadelphia, March 11 (AP).—Three men who held up Louis Vassallo's barber shop searched for $6,000 cash delivered by an armored bank truck, but fled empty handed, unaware that the money was in a safe next door.

Mrs. Linnie M. Bourne Dies at Jersey Resort

Atlantic City, March 11 (U.P.).—Mrs. Linnie M. Bourne, 77, former resident of Washington, died of pneumonia at the Hotel Traymore today. The body will be removed to Washington for burial.

She is survived by her cousins, Charles D. Young, Haverford, Pa.; a vice president of the Pennsylvania Railroad; Commander Alex Macomb, U. S. N., Washington; Maj. J. Gordon Macomb, U. S. A., Washington, and Elizabeth and Jane Young, of Washington.

Rhodes Case Will Be Given To Jury Today

Fate of Closed Institution Will Be Determined Tomorrow.

The case of Fred B. Rhodes, former president of the Fidelity Building and Loan Association, will be submitted to a jury in District Court this afternoon, Justice Peyton Gordon said late yesterday following the rebuttal testimony of Desire A. Irr, engraver at the Government Printing Office, whose signature allegedly was forged by Rhodes to a withdrawal slip for $1,500.

Irr was called back to the stand as the last witness to refute Rhodes' statement that he had been permitted by Irr to use funds in the account whenever he needed them. Rhodes admitted he had made out the slip, but he defended himself on the theory Irr had told him such transactions would be proper.

With the conclusion of Irr's statement, Assistant United States Attorney John J. Wilson and Defense Attorneys William E. Leahy and William J. Hughes, jr., were called into conference with Justice Gordon to argue over proposed instructions to the jury and over "prayers" that were to be submitted.

Gibbs Lyons, of the United States Treasury, said last night that an announcement as to the fate of the Fidelity Building & Loan Association would be forthcoming tomorrow.

Treasury officials in the Comptroller's office, which controls District banking affairs, have been examining for the past week recommendations of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board that Fidelity be re-opened for business.

A lengthy plan was laid before the Comptroller last week. It described in detail the condition of the closed bank's assets and set forth means whereby, through Federal loans, it could be re-opened. How this plan fits with ideas on the bank gained by the Comptroller through an earlier survey of his own, will be made known tomorrow.

Doctor to Address Girl Scout Dinner

Taking as his topic the "Most Interesting Subject in the World," Dr. R. R. Spencer, senior surgeon, Public Health Education, U. S. Public Health Service, will speak at a jubilee dinner to be held by District of Columbia Girl Scouts in celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Girl Scout movement.

The celebration will take place today at 7:30 p. m. at the All States Hotel, 519 Nineteenth street, northwest.

In addition to Dr. Spencer, at the speakers' table will be Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes, commissioner of District Girl Scouts; Mrs. Frederick Brooke, National Board member; Mrs. Carl I. Aslakson, a member of the first Girl Scout troop organized in Savannah, Ga., in 1912; Mrs. Harper Sibley, chairman of the women's division of the 1937 Mobilization of Human Needs, and Mrs. O'Neal Johnson, leader of Troop 45.

Italian Force In Spain Is Put At 30,000 Men

Madrid Says Rome Has Made Land Scene of International War.

prise the commander, two other officers, a sergeant and 41 privates, all of Italian nationality.

"Having lost their sense of direction, they easily were taken prisoners.

"The declarations made by these men disclose the compositoin of the Italian divisions. All their equipment and personnel, including the commanding officers, are Italian and fully prove Italy's participation in this war.

Italian Generals Named.

"This participation is of great importance, taking into consideration the size of the forces whose presence here have been proved. Several fully organized divisions are involved.

"General Mangini is in command of the force as a whole. Divisions are commanded by Gens. Bergonzoli, Nuvoloni, Coppi and others whose identities thus far are not known.

"All the divisions are made up of Blackshirts except one which is from the regular Italian army."

(A high Fascist authority at Rome said tonight "It is beneath our dignity to sort truth and untruth from these wild rumors." He said information "from the Bolshevist government at Valencia has been false every day."

Reports from Valencia, temporary seat of the government, said Alvarez del Vayo would make protests through diplomatic channels to the 27-nation European committee for Spanish neutrality against the alleged dispatch of German and Italian troops to Spain.

Newspapers, taking up the theme of an international war in Spain, attacked the democratic nations, charging them with standing idly by.

Snipers Rounded Up

Soria, Spain, March 11 (AP).—Squadrons of crack insurgent horsemen romaed the cattle paths of Gaudalajara Province today, cleaning out snipers over more than 100 square miles occupied by Gen. Franco's forces in their sweep toward Madrid.

The insurgents' sustained advance in four days of heavy warfare northeast of Madrid, officers said, had not only pierced the government defenses but had hurled the whole line back along a broad front.

They said the insurgent army, heavily motorized with tanks, armored cars and airplanes, had cut a wide swath through an area which, geographically, is a great watershed leading to the capital.

The vanguard of the insurgent forces was said to have driven within sight of the city of Guadalajara, provincial capital, 32 miles northeast of Madrid.

Insurgents counted defense casualties in the fighting today at more than 400, including a whole battalion of "Red Lion" Government troops reported annihilated by three columns of insurgents.

Many towns and villages were deserted in the path of the insurgents' advance, aerial scouts reported after reconnoitering ahead of the vanguard. They described the retreat over the Madrid-Zaragoza highway as disorderly, with casualties and equipment abandoned in the hasty flight.

Nazis to Get Iron.

New York, March 11 (AP).—Spanish government agents who recently arrived here have brought word to colleagues of a contract under which Gen. Franco is to supply Germany with iron ore from Spanish Morocco for 25 years.

The informants said an organization known as Hispana Compagnia Marroqui, with headquarters in Seville, has begun to carry out terms of the contract whereby Germany is supplying an unknown quantity of war materials to Gen. Franco and otherwise recognizing and assisting his regime.

U. S. Submarine Christened.

Mare Island, Calif., March 11 (AP).—The newest United States submarine, the Pompano, slid from the ways here today.

Mrs. I. L. Yates, wife of the industrial manager of Mare Island Navy Yard, christened the craft, the last word in underwater fighting ships. Capt. Umberto Cugia, Italian Naval attache from Washington, was a spectator.

Wallace Says Farmers Support Court Change

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Wallace said yesterday he "guessed" that 60 per cent of the farmers were in favor of President Roosevelt's Supreme Court proposals.

The Cabinet member told a press conference he would make at least two speeches this month to ask farmers to support the President.

Wallace said he would talk before the Virginia Farm Bureau Federation's annual meeting at Richmond on March 22 and make a second speech dealing with the court issues somewhere in Georgia "about the 31st."

Britain Reveals Plans to Build 148 Warships

Steps to Repel Any Attack 'in Narrow Seas' Hinted Aimed at Italy.

By the Associated Press.

London, March 11.—Great Britain unfolded today the outline of one of the mightiest naval building programs in history and dropped a warning hint of the power she will hold—particularly in the Mediterranean.

While Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy cruised proudly to Libya at the head of his fleet, Sir Samuel Hoare, First Lord of the British Admiralty, told the House of Commons secret plans already were laid to repel any attack "in narrow seas."

The First Lord minced no words announcing Great Britain's resolve to protect the world trade routes of the Empire and maintain her power in both hemispheres.

Many observers believed Sir Samuel's remarks were pointed primarily at Italy, as an answer to British fears Italy might some day seek to cut the Empire lifeline through the Mediterranean.

He told Commons that, by the end of the year, Great Britain would have under construction "the remarkable number" of 148 new warships.

Introducing the 1937 naval estimates, Sir Samuel said they call for $525,325,000. Among them, he said, will be five capital ships, four aircraft carriers and 17 cruisers.

Italy's Navy Maneuvers

Aboard the Citta di Genova, en Route to Tobruk, Iibya, March 11 (AP).—Extensive naval maneuvers, demonstrating Italy's power afloat and involving more than 50 modern warships, began off the coast of Libya today under the eyes of Premier Mussolini.

Acting in his capacity as minister of the navy, Mussolini inaugurated the 10-day naval display as the heavy cruiser Pola brought him closer to his first destination on a visit to the Italian colony of Libya —Tobruk—an excellent naval base in a strategic section of the Mediterranean.

Nearing Tobruk, the first and second naval squadrons, under the command, respectively, of Admirals Bucci and Bernotti, engaged in war games to demonstrate that Italy, in event of conflict in the Mediterranean, can keep the sea lanes open between Libya and the motherland.

U. S. Navy Building Exceeded.

By the Associated Press.

Great Britain's decision to build 80 new warships, announced by Sir Samuel Hoare yesterday, will put the British ahead of the United States in naval construction for the first time in many years.

The United States Navy Department's latest comparative naval figures show that the British on March 1 were rushing work on 69 warships aggregating 333,205 tons. The 80 new ships will be in addition to these. The United States now has, under construction or appropriated for, 87 new ships, totaling 343,385 tons.

If the fleets in existence were added to fighting craft now under construction the comparative standing of the naval powers would be:

Nation.	Ships.	Tonnage.
Great Britain.....	348	*1,525,368
United States.....	400	1,441,505
Japan	223	924,866
France	219	750,832
Italy	243	530,033
Germany	109	364,245

Japan Launches Super Warship

Yokosuka, Japan, March 11 (AP).—Japan today launched its most modern first class destroyer since the expiration of the Washington and London naval limitation treaties. The 1400-ton warship, the Suzukaze, is a super-equipped sister ship of the Yamakaze and Umikaze.

Speaker Tells Club Of Fear in Germany

Freedom of speech is unknown in Germany, according to Dr. Fordyce A. H. Johnson, who spent the latter part of 1936 in Germany and Austria. Speaking before the Cosmopolitan Club at the Carlton yesterday, Dr. Johnson declared that not only does the average German fear to express an opinion on anything pertaining to the government, but he is afraid to answer qustions asked by foreigners.

Bob Burns Says

Copyright, 1937

It ain't always a good idea to make snap judgment, but it's a whole lot better to figger a thing out yourself than it is to call in the advice of a lot of other people. At least when you work it out by yourself, you only have one opinion to worry about. If you call in nine people, you have to wrestle with nine opinions.

I don't think anybody knew this better than my uncle who was a judge down home. He was a very conscientious man. One day, he was presiding over the divorce court and a woman come in with her husband and she told my uncle she wanted to get a divorce. It took her all mornin' to tell why she wanted so much alimony and it took her all afternoon to tell why she didn't want her husband any more.

When she got through, my uncle says, "Well, you deserve a whole lot of money havin' to live with such a terrible man."

The husband spoke up and says, "Judge, Your Honor, I'd like to tell my side of this story," and my uncle says, "No, I'd jest as soon you wouldn't." He says, "I've got to give a fair and impartial decision in this case, and if I hear both sides of the story it might confuse me."

'Darling 234-0-567.'

There's a hoax on the air—a big, bald-faced hoax and it concerns that tender, fragile thing called love. Rudy Vallee is the hoaxer, and maybe you heard it, heard that Social Security Board song he sang—that moonlight and mandolins thing called "I'm in Love with 234-0-567."

The expose: He isn't in love with Miss 234-0-567 because there isn't any such person. The Social Security Board, which deals with such unromantic things as numbers yesterday said: "So he's in love now with No. 234-0-567," while a brunette stenographer puckered her lips to hum: It isn't the spring, it's love in bloom."

All of which suddenly was shattered, love-bubble-like, when the office spokesman said, cynically: "There's no such number; he's just in love, curiously enough, with a lot of fictitious figures."

• • • •

And this great expose, undoubtedly, will work damage to love—disillusion the public and injure the people profoundly. What now, with spring a jump behind the first robin that's already seen, that Vallee himself should come out with a hoax against the very emotion that made him millions? What trust now in love? A cynical nation will be born of this thing . . . in unguarded moments folks may hum "Annie Laurie" or "Sweet Alice Ben Bolt," but in fuller awareness will say: "Oh, what's the use? Annie and Alice must have been just fictitious numbers."

• • • •

On first thought, it had seemed that the crooner might be crooning to some real person—that maybe, in the number sequences, there was a No. 234-0-567 and this brought about the inquiries at the Social Security Board. A positive "No" was the board's spokesman's first and concluding reaction to the whole thing. There is a rule, inflexible, that the names and numbers on the cards shall remain a secret forever and ever.

It was said that even the F. B. I. has no access to the name and number files . . . the girls who tend the cards don't know, because, contended the spokesman, "people wouldn't want their names and numbers known." He gave a lot of very obvious reasons for surrounding the names and numbers with the secrecy that attends the Knights of the Mystic Sea.

But there's one bet as sure-fired as old-age benefits now: Ninety-nine of every 100 persons neither know, offhand, their card number or care very much about it. The board might post the names and numbers on a public tree and the complaints arising therefrom could, in greatest probability, be adjusted in 10 minutes.

But, going back to Vallee, it would have been swell had there been a number 234-0-567 and the gal had been, say, some unknown farmer's daughter way down in Arkansas.

Court Branch Urged to Hear Small Claims

Bill Offered at Request of Judge Cayton; Would End Red Tape.

A bill proposing to establish a small claims ond conciliation branch in the District Municipal Court was introduced yesterday by Chairman King of the Senate District Committee, at the request of Judge Nathan Cayton.

The plan is to set up a separate branch of the court for hearing contract and damage claims involving not more than $100. Pleadings would be devoid of technicalities, and the procedure would be informal, inexpensive and speedy.

The court would offer an opportunity, according to its sponsor, for voluntary arbitration and conciliation of disputes when the parties wished to avoid a formal trial.

A simple form of "statement of claim" would initiate an action.

Service of process would be by registered mail, in addition to that by a United States marshal. There also would be services by private individuals, but no costs would be allowed by the court. This system, it was pointed out, would "forestall any possibility of a process-server's racket."

Notice Period Shortened.

The notice period is shortened to between 5 and 15 days in the bill instead of 20 days as under the present system.

Formal summons language would be abandoned in favor of a simple notice to defendant, explaining the claim and encouraging him to come to court, even though he has no defense, if he wishes additional time to pay.

The filing fee is reduced from $1.25 to $1. A simplified method is provided for the waiver of costs, not only for poverty-stricken persons but for those of limited income as well.

The bill permits judges to encourage conciliation and stipulation agreements. Provision is made for the payment of judgments on an installment plan under terms protecting the plaintiff's debt and the defendant from attachments.

Night Sessions Proposed.

A supplementary examination of the defendant, after judgment is obtained, is authorized to prevent the willful evasion of debt by a defendant able to pay.

Judges are directed to make rules to put the branch in operation. The bill provides for at least one night session weekly for the benefit of those unable to attend day sessions.

Judge Cayton pointed out that the bill does not deprive any of the parties of their rights to appeal or jury trials. It does not exclude the services of lawyers either, but the judge stated that in many cases they would not be necessary.

The plan, according to its sponsor, has proved successful in many other cities and is Statewide in 16 States.

Will Address Students.

Quintin Paredes, jr., secretary to the Philippine Resident Commissioner, will leave on the S. S. Manhattan, March 24 as one of the Phillippine delegates to attend the international sugar conference to be held in London. Before returning to Washington Paredes expects to visit Geneva, Switzerland, and other European capitals.

Clean-up Drive On 'Flop-Houses' Opened in District

Cheap rooming houses, generally known as "flop houses," were ordered to clean up or get out of business yesterday by the District Health Department.

Under the direction of J. Frank Butts, chief sanitary inspector, a drive was launched yesterday against two establishments.

Buildings in the 600 block of O street northwest and the 600 block of D street northwest were ordered closed yesterday. The O street establishment was a six-room house with dormitory, providing beds for 65 persons. Rates were 20 cents a night. Approximately 93 persons could be cared for at the D street house, authorities said. Owners had been warned to make certain sanitary changes or close their doors, Butts declared.

Red Rider Bills Divide Senate, House Groups

Senate and House conferees on the red rider repeal bills were unable to reach an agreement at their first meeting yesterday as both sides stood firm for the actions taken by the respective houses.

Senator Black (Democrat), of Alabama, and other Senate managers threatened to initiate a move to have a similar rider placed on other appropriation bills and to have the teaching or advocacy of communism barred from private and parochial schools, government offices, and other institutions if the House insited on its "pink amendment."

Another conference will be called probably next week in an effort to effect an agreement, Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, said.

The House managers sought to persuade the Senate conferees to accept the amended "red rider" sponsored by Representative McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, while the Senators insisted that they will accept nothing but outright repeal.

Under the McCormack amendment the word "'teaching" would be stricken from the rider and teachers, but not other school employes, would be relieved of the duty of signing affidavits each month that they had not advocated communism.

Following the conference Representative Jenckes (Democrat), of Indiana, staunch defender of the "red rider" made another attack on the Board of Education and sought to answer statements made by Henry Quinn, a member of the board.

The following additional Parent-Teachers Associations had gone on record as recommending outright repeal of the Red Rider:

Eastern High School P.-T. A., Western High School Home and Association, Anacostia Junior-Senior P.-T. A., Alice Deal Junior High School Home and School Association, Eliot Junior High School P.-T. A., Jefferson Junior High School P.-T. A., Paul Junior High School P.-T. A., Blow-Webb P.-T. A., Ross-Force P.-T. A. and Petworth P.-T. A.

Thousands Pay Income Taxes As Limit Nears

Treasury Officials Warn Water Levy Falls in Food Category.

In an effort to avoid the rush anticipated on the Monday deadline, thousands of Washingtonians yesterday surged into the deputy collector's office, Internal Revenue Department, to file their income-tax returns.

By way of warning, Treasury officials said water tax is not deductible from income tax. Many people make the deduction, but the department holds that being "food," its cost is no more deductible than the cost of breakfast.

In addition, Commissioners Guy T. Helvering drew attention to the law requiring all who receive gifts of $5,000 or more from one donor to file gift-tax information returns.

"If the gift was of future interest in property, a return must be filed regardless of the amount," Helvering said.

Although field examination of returns formally began January 1 this year, because of increased personnel, examinations will start July 1 and continue for 12 months.

Questionable returns will be sent to 3,000 field agents, each of whom makes about 150 investigations a year. As a result of their efforts in the last fiscal year, $222,099,000 in additional taxes were assessed.

American U. Students Reject Court Proposal After Debate

The President's court reform program is as popular among students at American University as an Orange Lodge parade would be on St. Patrick's Day.

Yesterday at that institution, boos and cheers were dished out in generaus portions as students waxed hot and cold over the proposed reform of the judiciary.

Despite an earlier plea by Representative Robert Crosser, of Ohio, to discuss calmly the "wisdow or unwisdom" of such a measure, the lively gathering was entertained by "dictatorship" blasts that figuratively brought down the rafters with their rhetoric.

"Even the friends of the court admit that bodys has offended grievously in some decision," Crosser said. "No legislator argues court reform to be unnecessary. The fight centers around the wisdom or unwisdom of the proposal."

But the student opponents of court change already had primed their vocal cannon and they raked the few protagonists with direct hits. "Any change in the Supreme Court would make John L. Lewis a potential dictator and set up a worker' soviet," it was loudly, if illogically, argued.

Leading the fight for reform was earnest looking Kimber Shoop, who scored the court as "a political body." "It has usurped the powers of the other two branches of the Government and set itself up as a

Chief debunker of the President's motives was Jack Gendron, a perfervid young man with dark hair. "The President's proposal is a step toward dictatorship, since, in effect, it emasculates the judiciary."

Result of the oratorical battle: Eighteen in favor of reform; 39 opposed to any change whatsoever in the structure of Government.

Shannon Allen Named To WPA Radio Project

Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes yesterday announced the appointment of Shannon Allen as assistant director of the WPA educational radio project in the Office of Education, United States Department of the Interior.

Allen, who was given a leave of absence as night manager of the National Broadcasting Co.'s Washington division, will assume his new duties as editor of the educational radio project's script and editorial divisions immediately.

Clergy Asked To Aid D. C. Relief Drive

Social Council Urges Pastors to Speak on Problem.

Dire Need Here of 3,000 Employables Cited in Letter.

The Council of Social Agencies appealed to the clergy of Washington yesterday for help in bringing the relief situation, in which 3,000 employables and their dependants are without jobs, before Congress.

Letters were sent to the pastors of all denominations, asking them to speak on the problem Sunday and to appeal to their congregations to assist in obtaining from Congressmen appropriation of $2,465,000 for District relief for the year beginning July 1.

In its statement the Council pointed out that the 3,000 "employables" had families totaling 10,000 These people, it was stressed, can not be helped if the recommended budget of $1,465,000 is not increased by at least $1,000,000.

Families' Need Cited.

Meanwhile, it was pointed out, these families are without aid and the men are without work.

Statement of the committee said: "About 1,500 applicants are being refused aid each month because they are employable, and there is no relief for employable persons.

"Private family welfare agencies are necessarily turning away about 500 applicants a month because private funds are inadequate to meet the situation.

"Public funds are the only resource and must be made available by an appropriation of Congress to the public assistance division of the Board of Public Welfare."

Churches Asked to Aid.

"These are funds which we, as txapayers, ought to be allowed to make available for our fellow citizens in distress."

The appeal then stated that the churches could aid in the situation by urging Congress to make the necessary appropriation for the fiscal year.

Guam Delegates Reach Capital To Seek Suffrage for Islanders

B. J. Bordallo and F. B. Leon Guerrero.

Mission, Financed by School Children, Will Ask Roosevelt's Aid to Bestow Citizenshp on Land Taken n 1898.

"Polynesian girls are too much for American men," smilingly declared two solemn delegates from our farthest territory, who were in Washington yesterday seeking citizenship for 20,000 fellowmen of Guam.

"No American man could keep up with them," stated F. B. Leon Guerrero, farmer voce chairman of the Guam House of Assembly.

"They dance all night," added B. J. Bordallo, merchant chairman of the Guam upper chamber, the House of Counsel. "No, not to ukeleles, but to modern American dance rhythms."

These wereincidental comments in an interview in which the delegates, whose expenses are paid by Guam school children, told of a 38-year fight for recognition for their tiny Pacific atolls and islands, captured in a weird victory in the Spanish-American War.

"An American battleship sailed into our palm-fringed harbor and fired broadsides into an ancient Spansih fort which had long before beenabandoned," Guerrero related.

Not Informed of War.

"The Spanish governor of the island came out in a small boat and apologized to the American commander. He told him he was all out of powder and unable to return the salute. He did not realize he had been attacked. He did not realize war had been declared.

"The old fort was empty. There hadn't been a gun in it for 50 years. The Spanish governor then looked around and saw all the American bluejackets armed to the teeth. Well, that's all there was to it. Guam became the property of the United States."

In order that such a fiasco should not happen to the new owner, Uncle Sam, the delegates are urging stronger fortificatoins, harbor improvements and a small standing army to protect Guam, important stepping stone in transpacific airlines to China.

Ever since that long-ago day in 1898, the delegates said, Guam has been picking up American ways and speech, until today only 30 per cent of the population is unfamiliar with English. During the World War every able-bodied man on the islands volunteered to fight for Uncle Sam, but none was called to service. Guamanians at that time were more apprehensive of war with Japan than Germany.

With the adoptoin of Americanism, the cry for citizenship has been constantly heard. Six months ago funds were colletced and the two representatives started for Washington, first Guamanians ever to appear here in the cause of recognition. Boats leave the islands only once every three months.

Two Bills Introduced.

Two bills already introduced in Congress is their record to date ater a month in the Capital of the white fathers. Senators Tydings and Gibson and Representative Kocialowski have offered bills which would confer United States citizenship to inhabitants of the islands.

The delegates expect to see President Roosevelt soon. They will bring him gifts, in the fashion of their forefathers. The President has granted an interview for an early date.

At present the natives are pleased with the United States Navy commandant, who acts as governor. But in 1921 they were not so pleased. That year the commandant imposed rather annoying restrictions, one of which was a ukase forbidding whistling in the streets, hte delegates said, "because whistling was an unnecessary and irritating noise."

"No millionaires, no paupers," was the way Bordallo described social conditions in the islands. "I have a farm," added Guerrero, "but I raise only enough to fill my needs. Tobacco to sell, a herd of hogs, cocoanuts, a little sugar cane. I have no desire to become an aristocrat. That is the philosophy of our people. We are happier than you."

The play is being directed by Mrs. H. H. Burks.

House Group May Recall Racing Bill

Tension Grows as Foes Charge Propaganda Campaign.

2 Committee Members Threaten to Resign Because of Feud.

By James D. Secrest.

The District racing bill yetserday bid fair to becoming another "affaire O'Hara" as another move loomed to have it recalled by the House District Committee and friend and foe prepared for another clash.

Amid continued cries of "political assassination," Representative Shafer (Republican), of Michigan, disclosed he is considering a step to bring about reconsideration of the measure by the committee next Wednesday, just a few days before it is scheduled to be called up in the House.

At the same time he stated that unidentified "press releases" had been circulated among newspapers in his district attacking his opposition to the bill on the ground that he had not read it and, ergo, was not fulfilling his duties as a legislator.

Shafer, who used to be a newspaperman, said his friends promptly threw the "release" in wastebaskets and informed hm of its receipt. The Congressman is conducting an investigation of the source of the attack.

Both Shafer and another new member of the committee disclosed they have been considering resigning their posts because of the feud that has developed over the bill.

Although the measure passed the House with no serious opposition three years ago, it now appears that the minority bloc on the committee has aroused sufficient distrust to defeat it if it is called up next District day, March 22.

Oddly enough, the minority opposition began not as a protest aganst legalizing horse racing in the National Capital but because of resentment against the manner in which the bill was allegedly "railroaded" through the District committee.

Birthday Fete Set Tomorrow At Ambassador

Lester Cole, Midshipmen Open at Shoreham for Brief Stay.

By Chanticleer.

Another birthday anniversary is coming up—that of the Ambassador's Hi Hat Room, and the date is tomorrow. If the atmosphere at this popular spot has been particularly festive the last few days, that's the reason. For tomorrow, Oscar, being a commemorative soul, has decided on offering a special cocktail entitled, "Anniversary Cocktail."

Just to make things complete, Manager Russell Conn has a birthday, too. For this, the Hawaiians and Helen Malcolm will inject a little touch of the holiday spirit into the goings-on and a special invitation is issued to one and all: C'mon up and have a birthday with the Hi Hat.

Tonight Lester Cole and his Midshipmen open for a limited engagement at the Shoreham. That ought to make everyone develop a great yen to join the Navy and see the world. They're 12 stalwart midshipmen—every one a singing star and in addition—those adagio dancers, Bray and Woods and Alma Metcalf.

Nadine, half of the youthful Kirk and Nadine, now dancing at the Raleigh's Pall Mall Room (and the feminine half) is verree, verree particular about her costumes. She has them all designed by the famous New York creator, Bonnie Cashin. Incidentally, they stop the floor show nightly.

• • • •

Russ Cullen, heart element of the one-time Club Habana, began an engagement at the Madrillon and my, my, did he get a big hand! You'll find Frank McNey, formerly of the Ambassador, the chief watcher-overer of the Madrillon's Four-Thirty lounge. Health note: Paul, the Madrillon's headwaiter, won't greet you with a smile today. He's just had a lot of teeth yanked.

This fellow Wadimoff, who produces the Russian Troika's shows and sings and plays for good measure, is the master of make-up who prepares the cast for the skits this week. He is nothing short of a wizard. Sascha Bartnovsky and his orchestra or your Troika dancing.

Al Norton is going to blossom forth within the next week with special lyrics written for the popular tunes of the day. The Lotus' emmcee is particularly gifted in this respect and the plan calls for him to hold down a spot in the floor show from now on. The Florenz Revue holds the floor spotlight with eight dancing maidens and many featured acts.

Frank McCormick continues as emmcee at the Cocoanut Grove—rounding out his third month. That speaks for his popularity, alright. The hit of the floor show is the finale—the Cuban Marracas—in abbreviated Spanish costumes. Tania and Kirsoff, Oriental dance team, get the customers on the edges of their chairs with a knife-throwing act this week.

They're passing out thanks at the Mayfair today—Jimmy Byrd and all the others—to everyone who helped to make the second anniversary day this week a rip-snorting success . . . Johnny Rice and the members of his ork at Brinkley's are having a little contest all their own. They vie each night over schooners of beer to see who can guzzle the most . . . Boulevard Farms announces a St. Patrick's Day dance the night of Wednesday, March 17. It also is waltz dance prize night and the winning couple will receive $10 instead of the usual five.

• • • •

Another big St. Patrick's dance will be staged at the Dude Ranch—with two bands. Hillbilly music is always thrown in on these gala occasions for good measure. Don't forget that Sunday night is very special at the Ranch. Get a card from Host Milt Barrett.

Arthur Warren, maestro at the Wardman Park Metronome Room, prophesies the return of the tango before long. He's now getting more and more requests for Spanish music by the day. He's even considering reviving the maxixe, a slow tango he describes as "moody and sentimental as an Argentine tango."

They've gone bazooka at the Carlton. Maestro Sande Williams, who is on view with his orchestra in El Patio, enters into competition daily with Jack Tarr, who has mastered the intricacies of the slide-whistle. In fact, all the boys have taken up the bazooka—much to the delight of the customers. Porti Portar remains this week in Spanish dances. As an added attraction tonight, a fashion show with a surprise finale.

Strike 'Error' Blamed by RCA On Governor

Senators Hear Strikebreakers Were Hired on Strength of His Letter.

By the Associated Press.

Executives of the RCA Manufacturing Co. of Camden said yesterday a letter from Gov. Harold G. Hoffman of New Jersey was responsible for their "bad judgment" in hiring a detective agency to combat a strike.

They told the Senate Civil Liberties Committee that Hoffman's letter of recommendation, coupled with a persuasive sales talk by a salesman, led them to engage the Sherwood detective agency to work against the strike of their employes last June.

E. T. Cunningham, president of RCA, and Robert Shannon, vice president, testified they believed the Sherwood agency, a New York concern, would be able to supply 200 State detectives to keep order at the Camden plant when violence and riots started.

The letter, addressed to Cuuningham, was placed in the committee's record by Chairman La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin.

It said:

"I have been acquainted with Mr. Sherwood for some time, and have been most favorably impressed by his work. He feels that there may be some opportunity for service to your company, and I would more than appreciate it if you can grant him a short interview, or refer him to the proper official of your company."

Governor Explains.

At Trenton, Gov. Hoffman explained:

"I had no knowledge that he ever supplied men for service in industrial disputes."

"The letter is part of the executive department records," he added, "and is similar to hundreds of other letters of introduction given to people with whom I have been acquainted."

Cunningham testified George Williams, a Sherwood salesman, brought the letter with him shortly before the strike of United Radio and Electrical Workers. As sales talk, Cunningham asserted, Williams informed him that combating strikes by violence was out-of-date.

Instead, the witness told the committee, Williams proposed to import 25 "missionaries" to go from house to house as representatives of a "law and order league," and to circulate propaganda against the union.

Johnson's "Fee" $40,000.

After the strike had been in progress for three days, Shannon testified, riots broke out in the streets and Williams said he would get State detectives. When Shannon investigated and learned the "detectives" were recruited in nearby cities, he said, he canceled the contract with the agency and ordered the men to leave.

The company then paid the Manning Industrial Service Company $150,000 to supply guards.

Records also were submitted at the hearing to show Radio Corporation of America, of which the Camden corporation is a subsidiary, paid Hugh S. Johnson, former NRA administrator, $40,000 for acting as a "consultant" in the dispute.

Adventists Vote To Appoint 62 New Directors

Group Plans More Vigorous Opposition to Sunday Blue Laws.

To encourage more aggressive opposition to Sunday legislation, leaders of the Seventh Day Adventist World General Conference, in closing their session yesterday, voted to appoint directors in all of the 62 local conferences throughout the United States.

It will be the duty of these directors to keep close watch on the United States Congress and State legislatures for bills which would provide Sunday blue laws, or in any other way "infringe on liberty."

Also adopted at the closing session was a resolution commending Mrs. L. Flora Plummer, recently retired secretary to the Sabbath school department.

During her 36 years with the department she raised $30,000,000 for it. The resolution was framed and presented to her.

The conference also approved division of the Union Conference of the Central West into a Central Union Conference comprising Colorado, Wyoming, Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri, and Northern Union Conference comprising North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota and Iowa.

This division, it was said, will improve supervision of the church.

Japanese Image Worth $14,250,000 Is Stolen

Nara, Japan, March 11 (AP).—Police were mobilized today for a nation-wide search for a 1,500-year-old miniature Amida image missing from the celebrated Todaiji Temple.

The image, of silver encrusted with gems, apparently was stolen last night. It surmounted a larger figure of Buddha, which is considered the oldest and most precious in Japan. The image was set in the gold crown of the Buddha, which is embellished with 20,000 jewels and valued by temple authorities at 50,000,000 yen ($14,250,000.)

New Bill Seeks Chain Store Tax

A proposal for a progressive tax on chain stores to discourage their expansion in Washington was renewed yesterday in a bill introduced in the House by Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana.

The measure seeks to impose a tax of $10 a year on each store in a chain of three stores or less. The tax on each store in chains of more than three would step up to a point where a corporation operating 100 stores would have to pay a levy of $1,000 a year on each store.

A similar bill, though with a different tax schedule, was introduced by Schulte last year.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation in the Library of Congress presents the Coolidge Quartet (William Kroll, Nikolai Berezovski, Nicolas Moldavan and Victor Gottlieb) in the chamber music auditorium Thursday afternoon. Program: Quartet in F, Op. 77, No. 2 (Haydn), "The Wind in the Willows" (Randall Thompson), Quartet No. 3, Op. 22 (Paul Hindemith).

For this last concert of the series of eight which has been in progress since February 9, William Kroll and his associates chose a program of entertaining character with no profundities calling for concentrated attention. In the works by Thompson and Hindemith, to be sure, there were some of those enigmas which William J. Henderson has wittily called "cross-tone puzzles," but their solution was not an imperative duty interfering with enjoyment of their ingenuity.

The Haydn quartet was transparency itself, pellucid music flowing like a brook over a gravelly bed from pool to pool, now flashing with the facets of broken water, and now reflecting the sky in tranquil stretches.

Piano recital by Lester Taylor, 11 years old, in Barker Hall Thursday night. Program: Sonata in A major, K 331 (Mozart), Three Minuets (Bach-Petri), Impromptu in A flat (Schubert), Waltz in C sharp minor, Impromptu in C sharp minor (Chopin), Prelude in C sharp minor (Rakhmaninov), First movement of Concerto No. 3 in C minor (Beethoven).

Coupled with a considerable technical fluency, Master Taylor's self-possession and confident application to the keyboard promise to carry him steadily along the pianist's hard road to artistry. There is about him nothing of the air of a prodigy, but the naturalness of a lad with a musical instinct. His playing does not startle with its precocity, but commends itself by its cleanness of phrasing, its dexterity and its quality of tone.

His ability in interpretation is in the indeterminate stage, as one would expect it to be. In the Mozart sonata, the Bach minuets, and the Schubert impromptu he seemed thoroughly at home, enjoying their melodic simplicities and setting them forth with clarity and precision.

Envoy Denies France's Need Of U. S. Funds

tense worry to the American Government and it has no objection to an orderly withdrawal of a part of those funds to ease the impact which they have on this country's economic and financial structure.

Thus the French government, it is understood, thought that when it proposed a method of facilitating the outflow of some of this "hot money," as well as increasing French financial stability, it was undertaking to do something which would meet with hearty approval in this country. But the proposal for appointment of a New York fiscal agent for the loan was rejected as in conflict with the Johnson act barring the flotation of loans in this country by allied nations in default of the war debt.

Stresses Wish for Peace.

The French Ambassador went into none of this in his radio address last night, but he seemed anxious to disabuse American minds that his government was seeking funds in this country. He likewise seemed anxious to have known France's desire for co-operation in economic matters with the United States and the desire of the Blum government for peace.

"For the maintenance of peace in the world," Bonnet said in his address, "France believes that the best course to follow is the improvement of economic relations between nations. She is ready to work unreservedly toward this goal. She has already given proof of that desire by signing a trade agreement with the United States and by participating in the tripartite monetary agreement.

"She fully approves of the liberal policy followed by the American Government, and if I may at this point make a personal remark, I will say that my appointment as Ambassador to Washington confirms the solidarity of conception of our two governments with regard to economic matters.

"During the last five years I had several occasions to work with prominent Americans, members of your administrations or delegates at international conferences, especially at the London Economic Conference in 1933, with your eminent Secretary of State, Mr. Cordell Hull. Two years ago, in Geneva, I advanced a plan for a world monetary and economic stabilization, and one of the first governments to adhere to my proposal was yours. Again last year, I negotiated a reciprocal trade agreement with your Government, and I am happy to be able to say that our two countries are today enjoying a great improvement in their commercial relations."

Points to Co-operation.

"Such occasions of past co-operation for the sake of mutual ideals make me hope that I will be able to pursue my task in Washington.

"In the course of the last few months, the unfortunate situation which exists in Spain has enabled France, through the wise policy of neutrality followed by Yvon Delbos, minister of foreign affairs, to show the world how great is her determination to do all that is in her power to prevent war.

"I know that on many occasions in the post-war period, the expenditures of France for armaments was seriously criticized. But you must believe me when I say that conditions which she alone could not control compelled her to resort to them. When, in the course of history, a country has many times seen its frontiers crossed and its soil occupied, it is entitled to believe that the other nations will recognize its right to insure its own protection."

Editor Will Speak To Aid Orchestra

Merle Thorpe, editor of Nation's Business, and Hans Kindler, conducting an ensemble from the National Symphony Orchestra, will be principals in a special broadcast tonight for the symphony's campaign to raise a $100,000 sustaining fund.

The program will be broadcast at 7:45 p. m. from the Willard Hotel over Station WRC.

Thorpe will speak in support of the orchestra and its campaign, launched Wednesday. Kindler will conduct the members of his or-

Isn't this a charming little house?

You can find others equally attractive in the Sunday Post Real Estate Section
In last Sunday's Post Real Estate Section there were 117 individual houses offered for sale, in addition to group offerings of various developments. This was 20% more selection than was available in the second paper's real estate section, and represented houses ranging from $6,950 to $25,000 in price. Because The Post offers so much more selection than any other newspaper, it is the first thought of people considering buying a home. Better service to its readers gives rise to better response for advertisers. The true explanation of The Post's leadership over all American newspapers in real estate display advertising.

Gay and Dramatic Easter Hats to Be the Crowning Motif of New Spring Wardrobes

New Ensembles May Be Planned About Chapeaux

Youth and Romance Are Predominating Themes in New Headgear.

Your Easter wardrobe—how shall it be planned? Shall you get a coat or a suit or both? A dashing felt hat, or a frivolous one with daisies? Which shall you buy first—hat, suit or dress. How shall you select clothes that have the most chic and lasting style?

These questions, vital to all Washington women, will be answered during the next two weeks by Ethel Ehlen, The Post Fashion Editor, who recently returned from New York, where she attended fashion openings and accompanied Washington buyers to the merchandise markets. The following article is the first of a series on the spring wardrobe.

By Ethel Ehlen,
The Post Fashion Editor.

BUYING an "Easter bonnet" this spring is a most exciting adventure! The new hats are more than just a head covering—although some of them scarcely cover the head—they are individualized toppings for the ultra-smart clothes.

Because hats are so unusual and striking this year and because they rank first as the determining factor in feminine chic, it is often best to shop first for a hat and then relate the rest of the ensemble to it. That is particularly true for the woman who has difficulty finding the "right" hat. Moreover a dramatic and different hat calls for the proper background in costume.

What then shall the woman shopper seek in her Easter hat?

Throughout the entire hat collections youth is the main theme. One must be young from the head down this spring, or completely out of tune with current style trends. Hats for the Easter parade of 1937 are gay, colorful and alluring—much imagination and ingenuity has gone into the designing. They are all flattering, that is, if you are careful about selecting the type that best suits your facial contours and coiffure.

Shape for Every Face.

As to shapes—there are just about 1,001—and all sponsored by fashion authorities. They range from tiny muffins and pill boxes, through turbans, berets, toques, bonnet-types, sailors, unique affairs of Japanese and Chinese influence, bretons, to huge cartwheels that measure 7 inches in brim. Crowns, while generally speaking, are lower than they have been this winter, are often given the effect of height by clever manipulation of the materials or deftly-placed trimming. Brims roll up instead of down; trimming too, has a tendency to soar upward, but not to the dizzy heights of past seasons.

All kinds of flowers in varied arrangements appear on all types of hats. They are usually brilliant in color theme, sometimes combining unique hues and tints. Birds, too, are a dramatic feature of the spring-time headgear and are perched at jaunty angles on either the crown or brim. Butterflies are much in evidence, both for simple, daytime millinery and for afternoon hats. Grosgrain ribbon, appears in varicolored bands and clever cockades and bows, as a decorative medium. Fruits and vegetables in miniature, fashioned of fabrics or feathers, lend distinction to both tailored and dressy hats.

Straw Popular.

Straw is the most popular medium for spring—and there are as many kinds of straw this year as there are hat styles. There are lace straws designed especially to accompany print costumes, rough straws to complement the soft tailored suit, fine straws which combine so ideally with felt or grosgain, woven straw particularly adaptable to the popular turban, straws of exotic texture, which give a chic air to the casual hat. Lacquered straws vie with those of dull surface—sometimes the two are combined effectively in one creation.

Black and navy lead the color parade but they are seldom noted in monotone interpretations. Bright red combined with navy is popular and this is usually accented by a third color. Navy blue with poudre or turquoise blue, is another popular hat trend—reflecting this exploitation in suits and jacket-frocks. Cherry red and apple green are often seen together on black hats of the more tailored types. Multi-colored garlands or bouquets of garden flowers, adorn saucy sailors, to add a bit of frivolity to tailored suits. In the realm of the classic black and white, afternoon or cocktail hats of white straw, are given a romantic air by the addition of a gracefully flowing veil of black lace.

The handwoven grosgrain ribbon hat in navy and beige (left), designed by Louisesanders is versatile enough for almost any Easter ensemble. The same idea has been developed in other color themes. A youthful-looking hat (below) designed especially for the matron by Eric Moller, is of transparent straw in the smart red earth tone. The stylized flower perched on the unique crown adds distinction. The black straw sailor (right), by Soeurs, is trimmed with grosgrain of multi-colored stripes run through slits in crown.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Two Women Identify Themselves With Wife Whose Story Was Told Here by "Z. S."

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have an idea the world is full of wives who are living under exactly the same conditions as those described by "Z. S." in his letter of March 9. I suppose you will receive many letters from wives who may believe it was themselves of whom he spoke. Of course, I may not be that woman, but the case is exact and it prompts me to write you, hoping for a definite and unprejudiced answer. Here is my side:

* * * *

I don't want to be a married woman who goes out on "dates." These engagements are so often misunderstood. I don't love my husband as I should. He has bitterly disappointed me and misrepresented himself in the beginning (as I may unconsciously have done) and now it has reached the stage of toleration. Neither do I want to be a divorced woman. I hate to live alone and would be miserable.

* * * *

I do not have any definite proof that the man who claims he loves me and wishes to marry me would actually do so if I were free, though he may think so now. I am also afraid the memories of a first husband (be he ever so unsatisfactory) would haunt me for some time and make it uncomfortable with the second man. I did not know my husband had his major faults when I married him. How do I know the other man would not be similarly disappointing?

* * * *

Had I better not be satisfied, or attempt to be resigned, to something which, though far from perfect, may yet be as perfect as the average marriage? Also, I have many relatives to consider (so I may not be the one "Z. S." mentioned as I believe he said she had none) and I dread to bring unhappiness and the disgrace of divorce upon them. There is the consideration due my in-laws who have been very kind to me, possibly because I have been very thoughtful to them. If I continue to see the man while living with my husband, it will bring gossip, though ours is a harmless friendship. There is the possibility we might in time succumb to an affair and lose each other's respect, and I can think of no greater hell than that:

* * * *

In order to avoid any unpleasant possibilities I think it better to leave the "other man" alone, regardless of the fact that I love him, and I have been a girl who has had many men to run around with and quite a few who have been really serious and very much in love with me. So I know what love is.

* * * *

My husband and I are of opposite temperament and have never effected a satisfactory emotional adjustment. The "other man" is very much my own type in every way; of similar background, similar intelligence, congenial tastes and with the same desires, hopes, ambitions, etc. My husband has his good points, but the basic "something" is lacking. Should I go on, resigned, making the best of a marriage that can be endured? Or should I take a chance on finding happiness with a man I believe is better suited?

X. Y. Z.

Little to Gain.

DEAR X. Y. Z.: It seems to me that a vague dissatisfaction with one's marriage and one's mate is not sufficient justification for obtaining a divorce. And although you have said the circumstances of your situation are identical with those described by "Z. S." you haven't offered evidence to support the statement. It is my belief that marriage should be dissolved only when it has become acutely intolerable and it would appear yours could hardly be described as that.

* * * *

You admit your husband has his good points, that the situation can be endured, that you would be miserable living the lonely life of a divorced woman, that you are not sure the other man would marry you if he could, that he might prove equally as disappointing as your husband if you did marry him, and that your in-laws are congenial and friendly. From your own testimony, it would appear that you might be throwing away more than you stand to gain in divorcing your husband. M. H.

* * * *

A Tragic Story.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Inasmuch as I am the wife referred to in the letter from "Z. S." I would appreciate your opinion on my situation. I am employed as a typist-stenographer in a small concern and make a salary which gives me independence. I have no one else to think of and whatever I do is my own lookout. The facts as stated by "Z. S." are true and there are more I would never tell anyone.

* * * *

From the very beginning of our marriage my life has been a veritable hell on earth and I feel now as though something very drastic should be done and done quickly. I hadn't quite realized what it meant to be with someone and so thoroughly enjoy myself until I started going with "Z. S." And I feel as he does that we could build together to make what is left of our lives really liveable.

* * * *

Please don't think I haven't tried. I have done everything possible for a human being to do, but it has done no good whatsoever. My husband continues to drink all the time he is awake and is usually drunk when he goes to bed. When he gets up he starts all over. We have absolutely nothing to show for our years of marriage and I have reached the end of my rope.

I have pleaded with him, argued with him, threatened and earnestly tried to do what is right and be a good wife, but feel positive now that I would rather try to build again from the bottom up with a person I am confident can make up for the years of misery I have suffered. In any event, I am quite certain I will not remain with my husband, but would like your opinion as to whether it is too late to start all over.

* * * *

I am young but will not remain young forever and I want to do something before it is too late. I have learned enough about life to know I could be happy with "Z. S." and would like just a word from you as to whether you think I could find happiness now with some one I love who loves me. Sincerely.

H. S. K.

Don't Waste Time.

DEAR H. S. K.: It is never too late to do better. Since you expect to leave your husband sooner or later, I believe the sooner you do it the better it will be for you. You seem to have everything with which to build your life anew and more happily. You have youth, you have found love with a decent man of strong character and compatible temperament; no doubt you possess wisdom and self discipline born of suffering; you have learned to appreciate keenly the joys of simple, orderly living directed toward a modest goal, and you have more than earned the right to reach out for something better than you have known to date. The greatest mistake you could make would be to continue to waste these best years of your life. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Broader Heels Popular.

In keeping with the growing demand for comfort, broader and straighter heels are coming to the fore. The Chinese heel is more popular than the Louis heel, while the square heel that caused a ripple a year ago still has many staunch advocates among sports shoe wearers. Another former favorite to make the grade on smart spring footwear is the low sports heel with concave or scooped-out sides.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, March 11.

IT IS the business and often the pleasure of these old eyes to rest upon strange and even fearsome sights, and I'm still rubbing them after beholding my first auction of silver fox pelts.

ALICE HUGHES.

There they were, 12,000 raw silver fox pelts from two mighty Wisconsin ranches. There, too, were the 150 buyers from all over the country. The presiding genius was the auctioneer, J. Gordon Noakes, a Princeton man who is now also an internationally known authority on furs, their uses and probable prices. About him were eight eagle-eyed gents called "spotters," whose business it is to detect the strangely coded bids of the buyers, such as an eye-wink, a shoulder-shrug or a nose-scratch. Occasionally, detecting bids, the "spotters" all start barking "Up! Up! Up!" until it sounds like feeding time at a smart dog fair.

In three days, Mr. Noakes assured me, he would sell the 12,000 pelts for about $1,000,000. The most popular pelts, he says, are the "full-silvers" or "three-quarters silvers." Often an eagle-eyed buyer will mentally match up as many as 20 of them for a cape that will retail for $3,000—after which he will go into the auction room and bid in the lot.

It was a fascinating sight and as unlike as any other auction as you can imagine. But, of course, it was no place for a girl with an unsuppressed desire for a sliver fox cape. I left feeling slightly depressed, and clutching my 2-year-old Persiam lamb in a sort of hopeless way.

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN Janet Gaynor has dropped into town, looking very pretty and smart. She says it's just a holiday after finishing the new picture in which she co-stars with Frederic March. Seems a long time since the great days of Gaynor and Charles Farrell—but little Janet's still going strong

* * * *

Cecil Beaton, the English artist-cameraman who left us for London only two or three weeks ago, is also a fashion scout of high voltage. He writes Gotham women friends that they'll have to have a bird-of-paradise hat in London this spring, though the law forbids them in America. Which makes just one more reason why Aunt Alice can't go to the Coronation!

* * * *

We always think of American girls as pretty hot shots at sports, and are thus a bit puzzled to know why our lassies don't do better at figure-skating, a beauteous art. Our only entry in the recent world championships in London, little Audrey Peppe, of New York, could finish no better than last. A British minx named Cecilia Colledge became the new champion—and I was surprised that no Scandinavian girl was better than third. Where are the new Sonja Henies? Up some old fjord or other, I reckon.

* * * *

Checking with Brentano, who sells me more books than I can afford, I learn that Emil Ludwig's "The Nile" now leads its best-seller list for nonfiction, with "The Late George Apley" leading the imaginative crop. Here's a dark horse in the popular-novel race—"The Sisters," by Myron Brinig.

* * * *

Is it true that Margaret Mitchell, author of "Gone with, etc.," has changed her mind and is going to Hollywood to work on the screen play? The film colony spy says so, anyway.

* * * *

We were all shocked to miss the column of "F. P. A." from its accustomed spot in the local Herald-Tribune, one morning. Mr. Adams, who's been doing a daily stint here since 1904 says there was a bit of contract-trouble—but that he still loves working on a newspaper better than anything! Thirty-two years of daily columns! I feel like Shirley Temple, jr.!

* * * *

Schiaparelli has been at it again, with her prints. She's strewn her silks with birds, bees and butterflies—also pineapples and artichokes. But it's hard to raise an eyebrow over prints any more, with the didoes they've been cutting in the last few years. When it comes to prints, everything goes!

Pleasant Homes

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"WELL, I don't mind." That's enthusiasm from a blase young gentleman of 12. Evelyn's son, John, greeted her plans for his room with that remark which she accepted as whole-hearted approval. She turned out to be right, too. John simply beams through his tough-guy shell, because underneath all that he's the dearest little boy and amazingly easy to manage if you go about it the right way, as Evelyn does.

John's room is appropriate for him now and will be as long as he lives at home, because it's really quite mannish. The furniture is modern and pleasantly simple in line, including the chest of drawers with a hanging mirror, the bed, a wide flat-top desk and a bookcase. The walls are painted in light blue and the bedspreads are in a maroon colored tweedy material which is also used for the draperies. For the floor, Evelyn was undecided between a rug and a linoleum—finally she decided on linoleum as a practical idea for a boy's hard use now, yet good looking for later when he's older.

The only pattern in the room is in the covering for one easy chair which is plaid. Evelyn felt, rightly, that John's possessions would contribute plenty of design to the picture. And they do, as he goes in for taxidermy, and has ever so many amazing stuffed birds and beasts around the place. Not to mention his maps.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Milk and Banana Lunch.

The demand for a light lunch, which is nevertheless balanced and satisfying, is completely met with one banana and a large glass of milk.

Musa sapientum, the ordinary yellow banana, is an excellent nutrional supplement for milk. It is not a substitute, but a supplement. In other words, while milk is the best single all-around food, it lacks one or two dietary requirements in order to be perfect fare. The banana very largely supplies these elements.

A fully ripe banana has a little dapple of brown on its golden-yellow skin. In this condition it is as easy to digest as milk. And milk is 99 per cent digestible for the average person.

Allays Hunger.

The banana is satisfying, stays in the stomach long enough to allay hunger, and yet does ont bog you down for the afternoon's work. It has minerals, vitamins, 20 per cent sugar, and a small amount of protein. Like milk, it burns to alkaline ash in the body and produces a slight alkaline reaction.

The sugars in the fully ripe banana are dextrose, levulose and sucrose—all simple sugars, rapidly convertible into energy.

The banana is also mildly laxative, and its sugars conduce to the growth of beneficial organisms in the intestine.

A banana of ordinary size and weight contains about 100 calories, a large glass of milk contains about 340 calories, so that a milk and banana lunch represents nearly 500 calories. This is about a fourth or a fifth of what is needed for the entire day. For those who are overweight, the banana and milk diet has proved to be effective and harmless as a method of reducing, even if simply one banana and a pint of cream are used three times a day. This gives, however, only 1,500 calories a day, and for those of normal or underweight, when doing vigorous, full-time work, the milk and banana diet is not entirely sufficient.

Best at Luncheon.

The value of it as a luncheon dish, however, is that it is so light and satisfying, that it keeps one alert during the afternoon grind, and if the let-down comes about 3 or 4 o'clock, it will do no harm to repeat with another milk and banana lunch in order to build up the energy reserve until supper time.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a 3-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instruction for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

Wool Ensembles Chosen by Wally

Wool ensembles, one in black and one in beige, are two of the five Molyneux models selected by Mrs. Wallis Simpson for her spring wardrobe.

For afternoon, Mrs. Simpson has chosen a severely tailored black wool with a matching black wool coat. The latter has a flitted waist and a wide swing skirt.

A basketweave wool in grege is Mrs. Simpson's choice for a street costume. It consists of a straight tailored skirt and mannish vest, woren under a loose, collarless grege coat.

Mothers Urged To Start Baby Visiting Dentist

Importance of Care as First Teeth Appear Is Pointed Out.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

"WHY, no, he has not been to the dentist yet. These are only his first teeth."

Many parents do not realize the importance of first teeth. Then, having neglected these, they wonder why the child's permanent teeth are crooked or misshapen and decay early. The number of young men and women who at 24 or 25 are losing their teeth is largely the result of the number of boys and girls who did not have their baby teeth looked after.

Teeth are not like hair and nails. Once the second teeth start to go, nothing can be done to produce new ones. There is no tonic or treatment which will induce growth.

If the first teeth decay and fall out too soon, the mouth may shrink, so that there is no room for the second teeth to develop normally. When these come in they are apt to be so crowded as to cause decay or even to overlap each other or protrude until the shape of the mouth is spoiled. Many a receding chin or undershot jaw is merely the consequence of neglected first teeth.

As soon as a child has ten teeth he should be taken to the dentist, and after that the visits should be repeated every six months. At first there probably will be no work to do, but at least the baby will grow familiar with the dentist and the dentist's chair. After a few visits the dentist probably will begin to clean the teeth in order to remove the gray stain near the gums which so many little children develop. Later on there may be a filling or two necessary. The child will have no fear of the dentist, and it may be that he will never need to have any serious work done which would cause pain and so inspire dread.

Mrs. Sinclair To Be Nominated As State Regent

President General of C. A. R. Will Be Urged as Virginia Head at Norfolk.

Mrs. Charles Alexander Swann Sinclair, of Alexandria, who is now serving her second term as president general of the Children of the American Revolution, will be presented before the annual conference of the Virginia Division, Daughters of the American Revolution to be held in Norfolk March 16, 17 and 18, as a candidate for the position of regent for the State of Virginia. Mount Vernon Chapter, of Alexandria, of which Mrs. Sinclair is a former regent, will offer her name, assisted by the other two Alexandria chapters, the Kate Waller Barrett and the John Alexander.

Mrs. Sinclair is at present the State chaplain, and president general of the C. A. R. Her term of office expires in April and the election of the State regent will not be until 1938, although the candidates are presented at the 1937 conference. She was the organizing president of the Ann McCarty Ramsay Chapter, C. A. R., of Alexandria, and served as its senior president for 12 years.

She served Mount Vernon Chapter first as recording secretary and later as regent, holding that office for four years. She is State chairman on the project to restore the Colonial ballroom at Gadsby's Tavern, and on the committee from her chapter in the restoration of the original doorway of this famous old inn.

She won the first prize offered by the National Society, D. A. R., for the best illustrated historical lecture with her "Landmarks of Colonial Virginia." She was instrumental in organizing the John Alexander Chapter, many of whose charter members had been members of the C. A. R., and is an honorary president of that chapter.

Mrs. Sinclair is an active worker in historic Christ Episcopal Church; chairman for Alexandria and vice chairman for the State of Virginia of the National Cathedral Association. Mor many years she was a member of the board of lady managers of the Alexandria Hospital; one of the founders of St. Agnes Episcopal School for Girls, and secretary of its board of trustees since its founding. She was one of the judges for the Mount Rushmore Memorial Committee, being appointed in March, 1934. She is also a member of the Alexandria Committee of the Colonial Dames in the State of Virginia.

Mrs. Sinclair is not only a Virginian by birth, being descended from many of its earliest families, but she is a direct descendant of John Alexander, who owned vast tracts of land in northern Virginia, and for whom the City of Alexandria is named. She is a direct descendant on her mother's side of Edward Diggs, a Colonial Governor of Virginia, whose home still stands at Yorktown.

Col. Phelan, Wife Return From Miami

Retired Officer to Make Home in Capital.

Col. James Phelan, retired, and Mrs. Phelan have returned from Miami, Fla., where they were guests of Col. and Mrs. William A. Jones. They have an apartment at 1870 Wyoming avenue, where they lived before leaving the Capital two years ago for Fort Slocum, the post from which Col. Phelan retired.

They motored South several weeks ago and have been entertained at a round of parties and also have spent much time at Hialeah, at the races in which Col. Jones has entered several horses. Mrs. Phelan likewise enjoyed the Jai Alai games which they attended, a sport resembling handball which is played only at Miami in this country.

Col. and Mrs. Phelan lived in Washington four years before going to Panama and previous to that had been here six years. After their return from Panama, they went to Fort Slocum. They will reside here permanently.

Mr. and Mrs. Czedekowski are spending the season in Washington, and on Tuesday will be guests of honor at a reception to be given by the Polish Ambassador and Countess Potocka. At the reception a portrait of the Ambassador made by the artist will be exhibited to the guests.

Women's Federation to Vote Opposition to Court Plan

Opposition to the President's plan for reorganization of the Supreme Court will be one of the subjects discussed and acted on when the General Federation of Women's Clubs meets in Tulsa, Okla., April 26 to April 30.

A resolution expressing opposition will be presented to the council meeting of the department of legislation, of which Mrs. William Dick Sproburg is chairman.

Mrs. Roberta Campbell Kawson, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, will preside at the meeting. The sentiment of the clubwomen on national issues will be discussed.

Reports on the work of the various departments and committees of the federation will be made by officers and department and committee chairmen.

One of the outstanding matters to be considered at the council meeting is the progress the department of education is making in character building and crime prevention in schools. The federation has been working along these lines in an intensive campaign for several years since the fact was called to its attention that 20 per cent of the crimes committed in the United States are by minors.

Capt. Rhoda Milliken, chief of the Woman's Police Bureau, will speak at the meeting of the department of government and economic welfare of the District of Columbia League of Women Voters Monday. Her subject will be, "The Families of Household Employes as Seen by a Police Officer." This is the third of a series of meetings by the group to study problems connected with household employment.

Increasing interest in the subject has been shown since the establishment by WPA of a training course for household employes. The meeting will be held at the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K streets northwest, at 11 a. m. Mrs. John Allen Morgan will preside.

The league's child welfare department of which Mrs. R. G. Wagenet is chairman will hold its regular semimonthly meeting at the Smorgasbord on Monday at 12:15 p. m.

Members of the foreign policy department, Mrs. Henry Chalmers chairman, met at the home of Mrs. M. O. Lorenz, 3510 Porter street, on Wednesday.

Under the subject "Something New," the stage, television and aviation were discussed in the program of the Woodridge Book Club, when it met Tuesday, at the Woodridge Branch Public Library. Mrs. Charles Williams presided and Mrs. C. M. Neff was hostess.

Mrs. Samuel F. Hildebrand read a poem, "Life and Death," by Earnest Crosby. "Our Changing Theater," by R. Dana Skinner, was reviewed by Mrs. Clara Hitz; Mrs. Lloyd Miller read a paper based on Ronald F. Tillman's "Television for the Home," and "North to the Orient," by Anne Lindbergh, was reviewed by Mrs. James Benfer.

A list and brief summary of new books embracing biography, fiction and poetry were given by Mrs. Paul Davis.

Mrs. John Byers and Mrs. Homer McCann were elected to membership.

The annual meeting and anniversary luncheon will be held on April 13 at the Admiral.

The Columbia Heights Art Club met at the home of Mrs. Raleigh Gilchrist March 4. The papers read were the Sciences, pertaining to Holland, by Mrs. Gilchrist, and the Growth and Decline of the Colonial Empire, by Mrs. Pratt. The guests were Mrs. H. C. Underwood, Mrs. J. H. Kramer and Mrs. Sidney Forbes and her son, Charles.

The woman's organization of the National Association of Retail Druggists will hold its regular monthly luncheon and meeting at the Tabard Inn Wednesday. Mrs. Lusby, Mrs. Mattingly, Mrs. Maxwell and Mrs. Moskey will be hostesses.

Only a few thousand out of the almost half-million people who are reading CORONET for March will appreciate the actual-size miniatures from mediaeval manuscripts on pages 47 and 143. But those few will treasure them.

THE WASHINGTON SCENE

By the Poe Sisters.

The Right Rev. James De Wolf Perry, presiding bishop of the Episcopal Church in the United States, when he was in Washington last week-end was the guest at luncheon on Sunday of the Bishop of Washington and Mrs. James E. Freeman, in the Bishop's House in the Cathedral Close. Bishop Perry, whose own diocese is the Diocese of Rhode Island, lives in Providence.

An honor has come to his son, the Rev. James De Wolf Perry, jr., who is curate of Christ and St. Luke's Church, in Norfolk, Va. He has been appointed a chaplain to the Archbishop of Canterbury for the Coronation service in Westminster Abbey.

His appointment as special chaplain to the Archbishop of Canterbury is a tribute to the Episcopal Church in the United States from the mother Church of England and a sign of the friendly feeling between these two ecclesiastical bodies.

Coronation news comes thick and fast nowadays with many Washingtonians making plans to attend the ceremony in the dim old abbey on May 12 and witness the royal procession as it sweeps with panoply and glamour through the streets of London.

From Palm Beach comes the news that Mrs. W. Harry Brown, of Pittsburgh and Washington, has taken a house in London for the coronation season. Mrs. Brown has as her house guest in Palm Beach Mrs. George Barnett, of Washington, widow of the World War commandant of the United States Marine Corps, and a cousin, by the way, of Mrs. Wallis Simpson, who by coronation day may be the Duchess of Windsor.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Clement Watson and their children, Robert, jr., Olive and Alice, will leave today for a leisurely trip by motor to Palm Beach where they will join Mrs. Watson's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. James H. Patten, of Washington, for a fortnight's stay.

They expect to be joined there by Mrs. Watson's mother, Mrs. Asbury Latimer, of South Carolina, widow of a former Senator of that State.

This will be the first visit of the young Watsons to Palm Beach.

High Navy Group And Wives to See Ride at Fort Myer

The Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral William D. Leahy, will be the guest of honor at the drill and exhibition which will be given this afternoon at Fort Myer by the officers and enlisted men of the Third Cavalry and Sixteenth Field Artillery.

Preceding the ride Admiral and Mrs. Leahy will be guests of Col. and Mrs. Jonathan Wainwright at luncheon. Other guests will include Admiral and Mrs. Adolphus Andrews, Admiral and Mrs. Charles R. Train, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Louis McC. Little, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Charles H. Lyman, Lieut. and Mrs. William L. Freseman and Lieut. Homer B. Wheeler.

The last of the Friday rides is scheduled to take place March 19, after which the Fort Myer garrison, assisted by Washington's debutante horsewomen, will present its annual pageant, which this year is titled "Hoof-Prints," a saga of men and horses through the ages.

Professor Deibert Host at Campus Tea

Foreign Students at G. W. U. to Be Entertained.

Professor Alan T. Deibert, of George Washington University, gave another in his series of teas for students from foreign countries yesterday from 4 until 6 o'clock in International House on the campus.

Assisting at the tea table were Mme. Molekamp, wife of the Commercial Counselor of the Netherlands Legation; Mme. Dimitriu, wife of the Assistant Financial Counselor of the Rumanian Legation; Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, wife of Dean Doyle of the university faculty; Mrs. William C. Johnstone, jr., wife of Dean Johnstone of the faculty, and Mrs. Anella Tinto Rocca, of Turino, Italy.

Women View Indian Jewelry

Laces Also Are Shown at Mrs. Hampton's Club Talk.

Hand-made laces and beaten silver jewelry made by Paraguayan Indians were exhibited at the Woman's National Democratic Club yesterday morning in connection with Mrs. Wade Hampton's discussion of an Indian-American experiment in socialism before the education committee of the club at 11 a. m.

Dr. Alfredo Busk Codas, Minister of Paraguay, who was to have taken part in the program, was unable to attend, but sent a translation and interpretation of Indian lore he had planned to explain. The jewelry was worn by South American guests of Mrs. Hampton.

Other events on the week's program at the club include the discussion in the evening by Director Katherine Lenroot of the Children's Bureau of the progress of the child labor amendment before the business and professional group, and the dinner tonight when Senator Hugo Black, of Alabama, will discuss the Supreme Court issue.

Miss Rogers Leads In Benefit Play

'Lady of Letters' to Continue Through Tomorrow.

Miss Grace Rogers, of Dallas, Tex., formerly a student at Gunston Hall, in Washington, played the lead in "Lady of Letters," which opened last evening at the Wardman Park Theater, and will continue through tomorrow. She is the daughter of Mrs. E. G. Rogers, of Baltimore.

Patrons for the performance include Senator and Mrs. Morris Sheppard, of Texas; Representative and Mrs. Braswell Dean, of Georgia; Representative and Mrs. Hardin Peterson, of Florida; Representative and Mrs. Joe Starnes, of Alabama; Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Black, Mr. and Mrs. Bolitha J. Miss Mary S. Howes, 'Little Cabinet' Debutante, And Mr. John A. Stewart Are Engaged to Marry Daughter of First Assistant Postmaster General Is to Be One of First Brides Among Girls Presented to Capital Society This Winter.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

The only "little Cabinet" debutante of the season, Miss Mary Senate Howes, also is to be one of the first brides among the girls who were presented to Capital society this winter. Her parents, the First Assistant Postmaster General and Mrs. William Washington Howes, today announced her engagement to Mr. John Alexander Stewart, son of Mrs. Lawrence Welch Wilkins, of North Attleboro, Mass., and Mr. Alexander Mills Stewart, of New York City. No date has been set for the wedding.

Miss Howes attended National Park Seminary, at Forest Glen, Md., where she completed the four-year preparatory course.

Debut After Christmas.

She made her debut the day after Christmas, when she was introduced by her parents at a tea dance at the Mayflower, one of the largest parties of the debutante season. Among the bouquets of flowers which had been sent for the occasion was one of American beauty roses, from the President and Mrs. Roosevelt. The guests at the function included many prominent members of official and diplomatic society and, among those who assisted in serving were Mrs. John Nance Garner, wife of the Vice President; Mme. Troyanovsky, wife of the Soviet Ambassador; Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, Mrs. James A. Farley, Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, Mrs. Daniel C. Roper and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, of the Cabinet wives.

Following the tea dance, Mr. Stewart entertained at a dinner at the Shoreham in honor of Miss Howes. She was also one of the Capital debutantes who attended the first Monday German in Baltimore, at which he was her escort. Many parties since have been given in her honor and she has been one of the popular members of the debutante group during the season.

In Federal Service.

Mr. Stewart was graduated from the New York Military Academy, at Cornwall-on-Hudson, where he was a member of Chi Sigma Chi Fraternity. He also attended Bentley School of Accounting and Finance, in Boston, and is now employed by the Comptroller of the Currency in the division of insolvent banks.

Miss Howes, who came to the Capital four years ago with her parents, has the distinction of having been named by an act of the South Dakota Senate, of which her father was a member when she was born.

Bachrach.

MISS MARY SENATE HOWES, daughter of the Assistant Postmaster General and Mrs. William W. Howes, whose engagement to Mr. John Stewart, of Washington, was announced today by her parents. No date has been set for the wedding.

Marquis Alberto Rossi Longhi Is Transferred to Canada.

The Counselor of the Italian Embassy, the Marquis Alberto Rossi Longhi, has been transferred to the Italian Legation at Ottawa, and with the Marchioness and their children will leave the end of April for his new post. Since Italy has no Minister to Canada, Marquis Rossi Longhi will serve as Counselor.

Marquis Rossi Longhi has closed his home on Leroy place and, with the Marchioness, is staying at the Mayflower until their departure from Washington.

The Commercial Counselor of the Netherlands Legation and Mme. Molekamp will entertain at a small cocktail party on Sunday afternoon in honor of the Counselor of the Legation and Baroness van Breugel Douglas. Baron and Baroness Douglas will leave the end of the month for Greece, where he has been assigned Minister.

Miss Betty Boschen, who makes her home at the Wardman Park Hotel with her parents, Gen. and Mrs. Frederick W. Boschen, entertained a party of eight last night in the Metronome Room.

The Counselor of the Swiss Legation and Mme. Freer are leaving today to sail for Europe for a short visit.

Mrs. Roosevelt Concert Patron

Sigismond Stojowski Appears in Piano Recital on Tuesday.

Mrs. Roosevelt heads the list of patrons for the concert being given on Tuesday evening at 8:45 at the Willard Hotel by Sigismond Stojowski, the well-known Polish pianist. Mr. Norman Frauenheim, of Washington, a former pupil of the artist, and himself a pianist of note, is arranging the concert.

Other patrons and patronesses are the Peruvian Ambassador, Senor Manuel de Freyre y Santander; Countess Potocka, wife of the Polish Ambassador; Mme Pelenyi, wife of the Hungarian Minister; Mme. Prochnik, wife of the Austrian Minister; Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr, Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, Gen. and Mrs. Daniel B. Devore, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Allen, Mrs. A. C. Miller, Mrs. Reeve Lewis, Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, Miss Frances Sortwell, Mrs. David R. Craig, Mrs. John J. Kennedy, Mrs. L. Corrin Strong, Mrs. T. Whitney Blake, of New York; Mrs. Edward J. San Francisco Couple Is Entertained Here

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Prince of San Francisco, Calif., were the guests in whose honor the Assistant Solicitor General and Mrs. Golden W. Ball entertained at dinner last evening.

The other guests included Judge and Mrs. Edwin L. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. R. D. W. Conner, Col. and Mrs. Robert M Gates, Miss Marie Regan and Mr. Hammond Chaffitz.

Visiting in Capital.

Miss Hortense Weinfeld, of Chicago, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Friend, of Washington, for a week.

Mrs. Honeyman Guest of Club

Oregon Representative Will Address Women on Plans of President.

Mrs. Nan W. Honeyman, Representative from Oregon, will be the guest speaker at the meeting of the Democratic Women's National Council Monday night at the Washington Hotel. Her subject will be the President's program of legislation.

Mrs. Robert Kirkpatrick Noble, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee of the council, will be hostess at the informal tea the council is giving on Sunday at its headquarters, 1325 New Hampshire avenue from 4:30 to 6 p. m. This is one of the series of weekly Sunday afternoon teas being held by the council during the spring season. Mrs. George Swofford, chairman of the United States Employes Compensation Commission, will be hostess the following Sunday.

Assisting Mrs. Noble will be Mrs. John Shriver Wynne, Mrs. Robert Windsor and Mrs. Mary Buford.

The council is entertaining at a card party on Thursday evening, March 18, at 2400 Sixteenth street. Mrs. Ethel Murray is chairman of arrangements.

Virginia Group to Give Banquet on April 13

The Virginia State Society will hold a banquet in celebration of the anniversary of Thomas Jefferson's birthday, April 13, at the Willard hotel. Mr. R. Walton Moore, Assistant Secretary of State and president of the Society, will act as toastmaster.

Among those invited are the Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Claude A. Swanson; Senator Carter Glass, Senator Harry Byrd, Representative Schuyler Otis Bland, Governor George E. Peery of Virginia, and former Governor John Garland Pollard.

THE MERRY WHIRL

By Marylyn.

The White House Aide party out at the Army and Navy Country Club was a huge success! Large bouquets of early spring flowers adorned the long table on the "lanai," which was presided over at one end by Chic Glover and at the other, by Horace Smith—the ranking aides.

Whirlographs of the evening: Mrs. Louis Caldwell, wearing a particularly becoming shade of soft blue, just matching her merry eyes——

Commissioner George Allen—the wit of the evening—his attractive wife, wearing her blonde hair in a long simple coiffure and attired in a gleaming white satin gown, shirred up the front——

Mary Elizabeth Damon and Louise Chase Myers with their escorts, Bud White and Johnny Pugh, sitting together and keeping up a lively run of banter——

The unanimously-approved-of and foreign-to-Washington manner of seating—doing away with the old habit of placing by rank, everyone sitting just where he pleased——

The Edwin Watsons (half of the honor guests) arriving right on the dot, Mrs. Watson wearing lame—the Paul Bastedos, unable to attend the dinner because of another engagement, dropping in for dancing——

A neighboring party of Mme. Ulises Espaillat—with the W. W. Howeses (and not looking one bit as though they might be getting ready to make the announcement that is in a nearby column this morning)——

A glimpse of the Tomas Cajigases whirling past on the dance floor—Commander and Senora de Puga, the latter in white crepe——

A brief glimpse of Josephine Hill and Beverly Carter, whose wedding will be taking place ere long——

And everyone staying on and on, loathe to leave the club and its happy hours, finally going out into the chill and heading their cars cityward.

Saw Mrs. Abner Drury yesterday just after she had come from court and her first time at testifying. (She had been not many tables away from a fracas at one of the hotels—and so was asked to tell what she saw.) Telling us about the trial, she commented upon the fact that nearly everywhere she looked she found some of her friends. Young Ralph Quinter swore her in. She knew both of the attorneys, and looking at the jury, she discovered three of the jurors were also persons of her acquaintance.

Jeanne Hall has a "heavenly" new evening gown . . . We say heavenly advisedly because the frock is of dark blue marquesette dotted all over with silver stars. The narrow halter neckband fastens at the front with a large star of brilliants.

The other day, when Mrs. George Balfour Gelly and her committee (who are making all arrangements for this parliamentary procedure course out at Trinity College) gathered to discuss ways and means, they fell to talking about that extremely popular topic, the Supreme Court. One thing led to another and someone finally brought up the question—would women ever get on the Supreme Court bench. Then, strange coincidence that it was, a quick glance about disclosed the fact the committee numbered exactly nine.

Mrs. Duncan Stewart, who has been paying a brief visit here, is a clever person. Decorating and pictures have been a hobby with her and now she has combined the two and spends much of her spare time doing over rooms with unusual wallpaper. One of her latest "brain children" was a little room which is entirely fenced around by scenes of New York's stupendous sky line, making it seem for all the world like a balcony overlooking the city.

The Officers Club at Governors Island, out in New York Harbor, has fallen under her skillful hands and is now graced with walls covered with various historical Army scenes.

Additions to the ranks of large-hat devotees, or perhaps we should say sponsors, include Mrs. Abbott Maginnis and Mrs. George Trible. Saw them together the other day on Connecticut avenue and took careful note of their chapeaux. Mrs. M.—who designs many of her own hats—was wearing a tricky little model of beaver brown foleil, flat, shallow crown, straight brim and a pom-pom of arched feathers rightin the front. Mrs. T., juust back from her native Carolinas, had on a "Merry Widowish" model of black felt, becoming and just the thing to wear with her long bob.

To Entertain for McNutts.

The Indian State Society of Washington will entertain at a "Bon Voyage" party on Tuesday evening in honor of the former Governor of that State and Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, who are sailing early in April for the Philippines, where Mr. McNutt has been appointed High Commissioner.

New Trans-Lux Given Notable Opening Night

Brilliant Audience Accords Warm Welcome to New Newsreel Theater.

By Nelson B. Bell.

A typical Washington first-night audience, of such distinction as to do deserved honor to the simple and unostentatious beauty of the house, the purpose it is expected to fill in the amusement life of the National Capital and the diversified character of its inaugural program of short-reel film subjects, attended the formal, invitational "preview" dedication of the new Trans-Lux Theater last night.

The Capital's official, diplomatic, social and theatrical worlds were well represented in the audience that filled the 600 seats of the new newsreel theater that occupies an advantageous site on Fourteenth street, between New York avenue and H street northwest. Among those of prominence who took part in the dedicatory ceremonies were Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, chairman of the board of District Commissioners; Percy M. Furber, chairman of the board of Trans-Lux Theaters; Roland Robbins, manager of the new theater, who returns to managerial activities in this city after a decade and a half of invaluable service to the theater and Washington's civic enterprises as manager of the former B. F. Keith Theater, and Maj. Thompson, president of Trans-Lux.

Robbins Warmly Welcomed.

Arthur Reilly served as a brief and intermittent master of ceremonies during the introductory speeches, and introduced first Roland Robbins, who was accorded no less than an ovation by those occupying the orchestra chairs. There is no balcony. Mr. Robbins in turn introduced commissioner Hazen, who, in kind, presented Mr. Furber. Mr. Furber then presented Maj. Lester E. Thompson.

All of the addresses were short, to the point and felicitous. The program of screen entertainment then immediately got under way.

Last night's roster of abbreviated screen subjects was somewhat more elaborate than will be the rule when the Trans-Lux settles down to its major function of catering to the Washingtotn theater-going public. The bill ran about an hour and 35 minutes—a half-hour longer than habitually will be the case.

In addition to a wide variety of newsreel shots, reflecting the late events of importance the world over, there were included in the array of featured short reels, cartoon comedies, travelogues and informative reels that comprised a variegated entertainment well calculated to satisfy the greatest catholicity of taste.

Critics Have Stage Fright.

The bill was opened by an issue of the Pathe News in which the five drama desks of the local press welcomed the Trans-Lux to the growing list of Washington's amusement centers and demonstrated that critics have their "first nights" and get as completely scared as any other "actors" going before the public for the first time in a new vehicle or, perhaps better said, a comparatively new medium. This desk, it may be remarked, is in no sense proud of the contribution he made to the goings-on.

The Trans-Lux, in point of physical comfort and visual beauty, is a valuable addition to the sum total of Washington's amusement places. The auditorium is decorated in terra cotta and brown shades, with "line drawings" of the sort of news reporting to which the theater is dedicated—sports, war, personalities and international concerns. The lighting is indirect and mellow and the projection strikes a new note in screen presentation in that it is thrown from the rear of the silver sheet instead of the front, thus eliminating the shaft of light that ordinarily punctures the center of the house from the balcony level.

On the floor below the entrance level and auditorium proper there is a rest lounge that is executed in buff colors and equipped for the greatest measure of comfort for both men and women attending the theater—soft carpets, easy chairs, the most modern of retiring rooms and a general air of artistry and good taste that should appeal to every sense of propriety as a conservative but completely successful attempt to provide the utmost facilities for a moment of restful relaxation when the film bill is not being viewed.

No Ticket-Takers.

The theater is further unique in that it makes no use of ticket-takers, but admits its patrons by turnstiles that are automatically operated from the box office.

Last night's brilliant audience was enthusiastic in its appreciation of a playhouse that seems to fill a definite and long-felt want in the Capital as a place where one may enjoy brief entertainment without walking in in the middle of a dramatic feature in which continuity of narrative is a vital element.

The sponsors of the project are to be congratulated upon the success of their inaugural, which was preceded by a buffet dinner in the Rose Room of the Washington Hotel, attended by a company no less distinguished than that which attended the later performance in the theater at 9.

Dr. Rath to Lecture On Child Psychology

The second in a series of lectures on child psychology pertaining to the normal child, being given by Dr Edmund Rath for the benefit of the St. Gertrude's School of Arts and Crafts, will be heard today at 11 a. m. at the Carlton Hotel.

Dr. Rath will discuss "Learning and Habit Formation" in tomorrow's lecture and an open discussion will follow.

"Red" Skelton, Who Opens His Second Week at the Capitol Today, Begins Ascent to Top of the Heap

Versatile Young Comedian Is Sought by Motion Picture Producers and Radio Executives as Prospective Object of Stellar Honors on Both Screen and Air; Civic Theater to Do 'Lysistrata'; Jack Powell Pens a Note and Tempts Us to Be a Drummer; Leon Navara, a Musical Prodigy, Honored by Royalty.

"RED" SKELTON, who has scored so resounding a hit as master of ceremonies, presiding over the stage portion of the bill at Loew's Capitol Theater during the past week, seems to be going places.

It is known that RKO-Radio has a 90-day option of his services and that this producing company soon will test "Red's" ability before the cameras and microphones in a two-reel comedy. Paramount also is interested in this personable young comic and yesterday afternoon the radio representative of a large agency discussed his possibilities on the ether with comedian Skelton. By and large, one gathers that Master Skelton is beginning a steady climb to the higher rungs on the ladder of opportunity—but definitely.

BELL.

"Red" has taken such a strong hold on the risibilities of the theatergoers of Washington that today he will begin his second week on the Capitol stage. So versatile is this ingratiating young fellow that it is promised he will dig deep into his bag of tricks and come up with a handful of stunts which will not in any respect duplicate what he did during the week ending last night.

I have no idea where he gets his material, but he certainly has a raft of it, as the saying is.

It has been remarked here before that Jack Powell, that extraordinary syncopationist who can drum on anything and everything better than most percussionists are able to do on a drum, is one of the few performers who take the trouble to write letters to those who like their work in print. This came to the drama desk yesterday:

"Dear Mr. Bell: I'm sorry we did not have more time to talk the other night at the Variety Club. It was a real pleasure to meet you and be able to thank you in person for the kind thoughts expressed in your column—particularly the advance comment voiced on March 4. Possibly you may be able to find a place among your souvenirs for these drum sticks. My very best regards to you and yours, Sincerely, (Signed) JACK POWELL."

With the note there arrived a pair of the identical sticks that Jack uses in his act. I had always been under the impression that they must be made of hickory or steel, or something equally tough, to withstand the wear and tear to which Powell puts them. I was wrong. They are made of maple, just like most other drum sticks. It won't be long now until I will be doing the long roll on chair backs, window panes, piano tops, dishpans, stove lids and whatnot, along with the best of them. That is, along with the best of them except Jack Powell. He is in an indisputable class by himself.

Now that mention of the Variety Club has come up, it is quite a "Cruise to Ireland" that Dr. Frank T. Shyne has contrived for the club's celebration of St. Patrick's Day in the clubrooms and adjacent precincts of the Willard Hotel next Wednesday night.

The S. S. Erin-Go-Kosher will set sail for many ports of call and dock at home again at 2 a. m. The first stop will be at Jerusalem, the next Paris and, finally, the Emerald Isle will be reached in the first land cruise of its kind ever staged in the National Capital.

In Ireland the Variety barkers and their guests will be permitted to kiss a blarney stone which it is promised will imbue the kisser with more than the gift of gab. There also will be two bouts between two fighting fish seined out of the Irish Sea. In addition to all this, roving entertainment will be provided by a trio of Dublin Irish Minstrels, comprised of Emmett Hogan, Frank Govan and Eddie Moran. They feature their Irish bagpipes extensively. What! You never heard of Irish bagpipes?

The first floor hall of the Willard, where the club quarters are located, will be converted into a complete boat deck, with gangplanks and all of the other maritime trimmings, even down to a peg-legged sailor who will patrol the "water front."

Boy, have we got fun!

"Lysistrata," the side-splitting comedy by Aristophanes, which to the best of recollection never before has been played in the Capital, will be the seventh production of the season of the Washington Civic Theater. The play will be presented in the Wardman Park Theater, opening on Wednesday night, April 28, and running for five performances. Rehearsals of "Girls in Uniform," the group's sixth production, scheduled to open on Wednesday, March 31, are progressing nicely under the direction of Constance Connor Brown. Or so one is told.

The first of a series of four special Saturday morning motion-picture programs for children will be presented by the Junior Cinema Guild this Saturday at 10:30 a. m. in the Rialto Theater, with "Timothy's Quest" as the feature attraction.

Washington's youngsters, parents and teachers were polled in order to make a judicious selection of a feature film for the opening program, as well as for the three to follow on March 27, April 3 and April 17. All will be presented at the Rialto.

The Junior Cinema Guild has been formed through the co-operation of Mrs. Louise Noonan Miller, co-manager of the Rialto; Bess Davis Schreiner, of the American Theater Society of Washington, and Matilda Young, Washington representative of the Children's Theater of New York.

When Leon Navara and His Orchestra appear on the stage of the Earle Theater, for the week beginning today, it will mark the first stop on a cross-country tour. Navara is recognized as one of the leading pianists on the stage. When only a youngster he was given the National Amusement Association's award for his command of the keyboard. When the Prince of Wales, now the self-exiled Duke of Windsor, was in this country he heard Navara at the Hotel St. Regis in New York and complimented him on his unique arrangements and ability at the pianoforte. Had the Duke not abdicated the throne, Navara would have appeared, at the King's behest, to play for private parties at the time of the coronation. That, of course, has since been cast into the outer darkness.

Farmers Will Consider Agricultural Problems

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Manassas, Va., March 11.—Prince William County farmers will meet at the Manassas postoffice Saturday to prepare recommendations for national agricultural policy to submit to Washington.

Hunt Taxi Bandits As Woman Is Shot

Detectives last night were searching for two colored bandits who shot Mrs. Lillian Laurell, 39, 17 T street northwest, during a holdup of her husband, a taxicab driver.

Mrs. Laurell was wounded in the right hip and leg as she ran from home after the bandits had forced the couple to drive to Oxon Hill, Md., and back to their home in search of more money.

Sylvester Laurell, 35, the husband, said the men ordered the cab at First and B streets northeast and told him to drive into Maryland. In Oxon Hill the robbers took $5.60 from Laurell and then ordered him to drive home.

Mrs. Laurell was taken to Sibley Hospital, where her condition was reported improved last night.

Blames Roosevelt.

Middletown, N. Y., March 11 (U.P.).—Corporation Counsel J. Allen Ballman, a Republican, blames President Roosevelt for the $1 he was fined for parking without lights. He listened to the President's Supreme Court speech last night, he said, and then hurried to bed, forgetting about his automobile.

In Hollywood With Jimmy Fiddler

Hollywood, March 12.—Tennyson's brook, which goes on forever, has its counterpart in Hollywood's "horse operas." I mean Western pictures. Curious how few changes have taken place in cowboy dramas since the early days of fil-ums. Other types of movies have been revolutionized (and have nearly started revolutions—the so bad ones) by scientific improvements, but nothing seems to alter the Westerns.

WILLIAM HART

The answer, of course, lies in the unchanging taste of very young America. Several million kids of today like adventure just as did the previous generation. Modern youth gets the same spine-tingling, foot-stamping thrill out of the lusty deeds of modern strapping cowboys that I used to get when Bill Hart speeded my heart action by single-handedly killing enough Indians to capture New York City.

It is the kid audience which has made box office perennials of many Western heroes. Buck Jones, George O'Brien, Hoot Gibson—these fellows have been stars since grandpop wore knee breeches. I do not like to recall how many years it has been, but I can remember Hoot Gibson riding herd back in days when it was a toss-up whether I should go to a nickelodeon or stay home and wait up for Santa Claus.

Sharon Lynn's auto is just three weeks new, and yesterday Jack Oakie found her almost in tears because she had hooked a fender around a fire hydrant. "I had a bet with my husband," she wailed, "that I could keep the car three months without a scratch." "Scratch!" howled Oakie, "I'm trying to keep mine three months without a payment!"

• • • •

I cannot help being amused by the Hollywood point of view. At least a dozen localites have come to me frothy-mouthed because of the new "soak the stars" attitude at Palm Springs. Not only have prices soared at most of the resort hotels, but with these gem-valuable accmmodations is dished out a scornful treatment from clerks and managers. I have not personally experienced it, but I have the word of many who have.

Yesterday a feminine star who has just returned from the Springs cornered me in a studio office and vowed to the heavens that she had been literally robbed. "Three weekends I have been there this season," she moaned, "and each trip cost as much as a summer vacation."

"Then why do you go?" I demanded. She shrugged. "Everybody does," she said. "It's the place to go in winter." Can you think of an answer to that?

Walking to the theater behind Jack Benny the other night, I crowded him a bit and stepped on his foot. He turned, recognized me, and cracked down, "Why do you walk on my heels—when you should be walking on your own!"

You would think that here in Hollywood, where beauty is such an asset to success, women would be extremely careful of their appearance. Standing on a Vine street corner today, I became conscious of the fact that local girls are becoming downright shabby in public. Like wives grown weary of prettying up for their husbands.

I counted 11 girls whom I recognized as being "of pictures" (chorus, extras, bit players), all wearing hair-curlers, some clad in slacks that were practically slovenly. Of course, these same girls will blossom like butterflies from cocoons at nightfall, but in the meantime how many directors have seen them at their worst? Again comparing them to wives who lost their husbands because they let themselves grow shoddy, movie girls are picking a fine way to lose their own "husbands"—their movie jobs.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, March 11.

THE MEMBERS of the Hoyle Club were discussing Kenneth Simpson's royal flush. "Remember the night Ralph Fleischmann drew a royal flush," George S. Kaufman sighed, "and we called him Royal Flushman? . . . "WE called him?" F. P. A. shrieked at Kaufman. "Where do you come off with that WE stuff. Not only were you away from the game when it was said but you were shot with luck to have heard it!"

ROBERT BENCHLEY was discussing his son and the fact that the youngster is maturing quicky . . . "I'd like to live to see the day," Marc Connelly sighed, "when you come into Jack & Charlie's, and have people point at you and say: 'There goes old Bob Benchley'" . . . "Oh, no," Benchley protested, "I'd like to live to see the day when I come into Jack & Charlie's and have people point at me and say: 'There goes old Nat Benchley's father.'"

A RECENT VISITOR to Germany brought this tale back from Berlin . . . He suffered a severe toothache, and went to a dentist in that city. "I'll have to yank that tooth," the dentist told him. "The charge will be, in American money, $150" . . . "$150?" the American protested. "Why, in my country I can have all my teeth yanked for that much money" . . . "I know," the dentist explained, "but in America it's a simple thing to extract a tooth. Here it's a delicate operation. Nobody's allowed to open his mouth in Germany—so I'd have to extract it through your ear."

SAM ROSOFF was in a reminiscent mood last night and revealed this sidelight of his securing the subway-building concession . . . When Mayor LaGuardia was inducted into office, Fiorello became suspicious of Rosoff's having secured those subway contracts. Special investigators were set to work, but could unearth no evidence of impropriety. When the Mayor met Sam, he told him: "Mr. Rosoff, I have a confession to make. When I became mayor, I had your contracts investigated. The check-up showed that your dealings were absolutely honest" . . . "Mr. Mayor, I have a confession to make, too," Rosoff replied. "When I found out you were investigating me, I checked up on your dealings when you were president of the board of aldermen. The check-up showed your dealings were absolutely honest, too!"

FRANK SULLIVAN, the Saratoga hermit, marched into "21" Monday night and observed the habitual long-distance phone-callers . . . Frank called for a table-phone and lifted the receiver. "Gimme Tokyo," he spoke. "Hello? I want Emperor Hirohito's palace. Yes, the number is 7624 . . . Hello? Maggie? Is the Emp there? He isn't? Well, okay" . . . Sullivan hung up, frowned—and marched out.

HERBERT BAYARD SWOPE attended Jock Whitney's farewell party last night . . . At 10:25, a page boy approached the dinner table, and whispered something into Swope's ear. Swope nodded, turned to the other guests and excused himself: "I'm going downstairs for a little word. I'm expecting a message from my boss" . . . Downstairs he went, and 15 minutes later, when the other guests descended to the lower floor, they discovered Swope seated in front of the radio— listening to the President's broadcast . . .

3 Persons Injured In Traffic Mishaps

Three persons were injured late yesterday in traffic accidents.

Stanley Seymour, 36, of 519 N street southwest, was hit by a Capital Transit Co. bus. He was sitting in a truck parked on M street southwest, between Second and Third streets. The bus swerved to avoid a collision with a car and hit the truck, knocking Seymour out. He was treated at Sibley Hospital for severe scalp lacerations.

Frank B. Grande, 26, of 1611 Forty-fourth street northwest, was hurt when struck by a car operated, police said, by Franklin W. Harper, 70, of 3846 Cathedral avenue northwest. The accident occurred at Fifteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue. Grande, a pedestrian, was treated at Emergency Hospital for concussion of the brain and a fractured left leg.

Noted Comic Is Slightly Irked By FilmAwards

W. C. Fields Finds Many Inconsistencies in Academy Findings.

By the Associated Press.

Hollywood, March 11.—The Motion Picture Academy awards of merit in the movies have been made for another year, and W. C. Fields is disgusted again.

"What do you think of the academy awards, Mr. Fields?"

"I don't."

"You don't what? Think of them?"

"Not if I can help it. I'm uninterested because the dear academy chaps never pay any attention to comedians. The customers seem to have liked Charley Chaplin and Harold Lloyd and many others, but the academy has never given them—or any comedian—a statue."

"How do you explain that, Mr. Fields?"

"Well, I've been trying for years to explain it, and can't. Any actor knows that comedy is more difficult, requires more artistry, than any other form of acting. It is pretty easy to fool an audience with a little crepe hair and a dialect, but a comedian is either funny or he isn't funny. It seems to me that a comedian who really makes people laugh should be as eligible for an award as a tragedian who makes people cry."

Punchinello Slighted.

"Would you suggest a special award for comedians?"

"Yes, if necessary. Punchinello—that's French for clown—is gathering dust on the mantlepieces of the best assistant director, cameraman, dance director, sound recorder and film editor. Also the company that made the silent wind-machine got one and the company responsible for the non-skid printer. But no comedian.

"They call those statuettes 'Oscar,' but I think 'Punchinello' is a better name. It's more farcical."

"Did you note any other incongruities in this year's awards, Mr. Fields?"

Author Was Slighted.

"Well, a small one. This picture, 'The Great Ziegfeld,' won all the awards. But William Anthony MacGuire, who wrote it, wasn't even mentioned. Is that sensible? No picture is any better than its story. Therefore, if 'Ziegfeld' was good enough to win all the other honors, logically the writing honor should have gone to it, too. How come, then?"

"Has your favorite actor ever won an academy statue?"

"I know many fine actors, but I consider Al Jolson about the best that we have on the stage or screen. He did not win an academy award, perhaps, because among other talents, he knows how to play comedy.

"This isn't a case of sour grapes with me, because I didn't grow my grapes last year. I didn't even grow a wild oat."

Honor Guests at Trans-Lux Opening

Missing Child, 3, Feared Kidnaped

East Unity, N. H., March 11 (AP).—The search for little Shirley Brooks, missing since Saturday, tonight was spurred to renewed vigor with Sheriff Emery B. Monta's declaration that the child "might have been kidnaped."

The sheriff admitted "the investigation has come to almost a dead end," and termed the disappearance of the chubby, 3-year-old youngster "one of the most mysterious cases in my experience."

The girl toddled away from her home Saturday. The sheriff said the Brooks family was only in "moderate circumstances," and that no demands for ransom had been made.

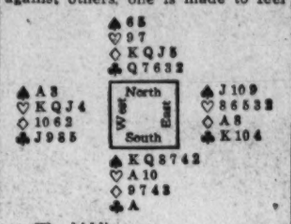
Normandie Sails.

Le Havre, March 11 (AP).—The Normandie sailed for New York today. A strike which delayed her a day was settled yesterday.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

A defender's lot is often just as happy as the declarer makes it. Against certain naive declarers, defense becomes a simple pleasure; against others, one is made to feel that he is back at college wrestling with calculus. In today's hand a contract was fulfilled only because the declarer presented a baffling problem to the defenders.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 N T	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

South, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

West opened the King of hearts, and declarer counted his losers which were a heart, at least one diamond, and almost surely two spades. Even if the spade Ace were in East's hand, dummy had insufficient entries to allow spades to be led up to the King-Queen more than once, and unless declarer were so fortunate as to find East with exactly the Ace and one spade, this would not avail. But there was another ground for hope, and that was through misleading the defenders. On this theory declarer won the first lead, and promptly returned the ten of hearts.

West, jr. with the Jack, realized that he was in a "tough spot." Declarer might have made the identical play with the Ace and two hearts, hoping for a third-round ruff in the dummy. If that were the situation, it would be imperative to take out dummy's trumps. West remembered declarer's jump rebid in spades and considered it likely that his own Ace was the only spade trick declarer was missing, therefore laid down the Ace, and continued with a second round.

Declarer's difficulties were now over. He drew the adverse trumps, and established dummy's diamonds, losing only one diamond, one heart, and one spade.

Although West's diagnosis of the situation was not as keen as it might have been (had the declarer really held the Ace ten of hearts, his best chance for a heart ruff would have been to have allowed the heart King to hold the first trick), I strongly suspect that declarer's "trap" would have succeeded against most players.

Subway System Urged by Allen

"The District will eventually have subways—so why not now?"

This was the comment of Commissioner George E. Allen yesterday as he discussed recent proposals to construct a street car underpass beneath Dupont Circle.

He suggested that an immediate study be made toward an ultimate subway system extending from Connecticut avenue and Calvert street to Constitution avenue and the Capitol.

"A system of underground transportation facilities," Allen said, "would help to relieve traffic congestion and cut our appalling accident toll. I don't think there should be any delay—studies should be started at once."

Treasury to Bar Gold From Mexico

By the United Press.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., at the request of the Mexican government, last night directed collectors of customs to refuse entry into the United States of gold shipments from the southern republic unless each shipment is accompanied by a certificate showing it may be lawfully exported from Mexico.

The Secretary's action has the approval of the President, the Treasury's announcement said. His instructions, however, did not apply to "fabricated gold" as defined in the provisional regulations issued under the gold reserve act of 1934; and any substance, including gold in its natural state which does not contain more than five 5 troy ounces of fine gold per short ton.

A Treasury official indicated Morgenthau's action was taken in cooperation with the Mexican government which is concerned over evasion of taxes on domestically mined gold. Unless the gold is cleared through the Bank of Mexico, as required by law, the tax is easily avoided, it was explained.

St. John's Five Upsets Court Play Favorite; Western Is Toppled

John Marshall Falls By 31-22, as Local Team Outclasses Foe.

Georgians Defeat D. C. Five, 26-22; Staunton, Massanutten Win.

By John R. Vosburgh.
A Staff Correspondent.

Lexington, Va., March 11.—Unseeded, and comparatively unsung, St. John's Prep, of Washington, uncorked one of the biggest upsets in the 13-year history of the South Atlantic Interscholastic Basketball Tournament here tonight when it ended a 19-game winning streak of the defending champions, John Marshall High, of Richmond, with a 31-to-22 defeat after Washington's other entry, Western High, had bowed to Monroe A. & M. Prep of Georgia, 26 to 22.

The crimson-clad cadets from Vermont avenue bounced into the second round of the tourney clearly stamped as "the team to beat" for the title. They play Spartanburg High, of South Carolina, at 7:30 o'clock Friday.

Both Western and St. John's collaborated in giving the tournament the most surprising opening day it has experienced, but the role of Western's interhigh champions was decidedly uncomplimentary to their rating as the No. 1 seeded theam.

St. John's, on the other hand, not only outfought John Marshall's Virginia High School Champs but outclassed them with a performance which had everybody in the Washington and Lee University gymnasium blinking in admiration.

Reges Plays With Bad Leg.

Causing much of the blinking was Big Jack (Ace) Reges, St. John's center, who unkown to the onlookers, was playing virtually on one leg, being lamed with a bad case of water on the knee.

Led by Reges, who piled in 13 points and little Joey Gallagher who swished the net for ten more, theh rightly-hied Catholic Prep League champions swung to an 18-10 lead in the first half. After taking a 6-4 lead in the first period, St. John's had relinquished the pace-setting role only once, when Capt. Bill McCann, of John Marshall, sent the Justices ahead, 7-6 in the second period.

Reges and Gallagher then went to work and between the two of them jumped the lead to the halftime count.

Continuing the parade in the third period, the same pair resumed their two-man scoring act and the final quarter ended with St. John's leading 27-17. Jimmy Giebel scoring the only two points not sunk by Reges and Gallagher.

Western Team Tired.

Content to protect its lead, St. John's then failed to concern itself greatly about point-making although Gallagher topped off the proceedings with a basket which was only so much more gall for the men of John Marshall who were by that time getting used to their first defeat of the season.

St. John's had indeed upheld the Washington prestige rather feebly supported by the tired Western team an hour previously.

Ragged and apparently still cramped from their 200-mile auto journey from Washington, the red-clad Georgetowners got off to a slow start and ended up with a slow finish. Coached by Red Barron, Georgia Tech's great all-American footballer and brother of Carter Barron, theater official in Washington, Monroe brought out a zone defense which wrecked havoc with the Western's point making.

Despite its unimpressive start,

Hitting Ends As Newsom Starts Work

Big Hurler's Fast Ball Hops a Foot in Mid-Season Form.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., March 11.—Buck Newsom ascended the pitching mound at Tinker Field today and the rattle and roar of base hits subsided as if muffled by some unseen force.

There was not much to be seen at that, of the little white pellet that Newsom was heaving plateward with all the vigor of a midseason performance, despite the fact that this was only his third day at the Nats' training camp.

For two days the big fellow has been standing by impatiently while the hitters feasted on the offerings of a corps of rookies and veterans who had been serving 'em up tantalizingly, but today Newsom promised "I'll put a stop to that."

And he did. Buck's fast ball was hopping a full foot, according to the later testimony of Catcher Shanty Hogan. Cliff Bolton, Buddy Lewis, Ben Chapman, Jim Wasdell and the other perennial heroes of the batting drills, were actually whiffing for the first time in training camp, or popping up harmlessly.

Bluege, Myer Ailing.

Once, Manager Bucky Harris, cautioned Newsom to go easy and called him from the box, but the irrepressible Newsome would not be deterred.

"I've been working out for two weeks up in South Carolina," he told Harris. "I'm way ahead of these other pitchers. Never had a sore in my life, and I know I'll never get one. This is my way of training, and you know I'm always ready in the spring."

Harris threw up his arms in resignation. "What can you do with a galoot like that?" he asked newspapermen. "I'd shoot anybody else who tried it, but I have to give Buck credit. He works like that every spring and every spring he's the best-conditioned pitcher on the squad. You just have to let him go."

Harris was contemplating a game between the regulars and the Yannigans for Saturday morning, but a lack of infielders may cause him to abandon that plan. Ossie Bluege is ailing with a sore arm, and Buddy Myer is in the last stages of recovery from a stiff neck. Neither would be available for the practice game.

Wasdell to Outfield.

"I wouldn't have any infielders for the second team if I put Johnny Mihalic at second base in Myer's place," said Harris, "so the game looks pretty useless. 'Course, I might play second myself and put McNeely at third base, but we'd still be lacking a shortstop. Guess we'll have to call the game off."

The veteran Bluege's sore arm is causing no panic whatsoever among the Nats' bosses. Conversely, they would be surprised if Bluege did not report a sore flipper at this stage of the season. For as long as Clark Griffith can remember, Bluege has come up with a soreness in his arm each spring, which is the talisman that his arm will be okay when the season starts.

Bucky Harris today was playing around with the idea of converting young Jim Wasdell into an outfielder. With Joe Kuhel a fixture at first base, there is no post open for Wasdell, but the rookie's hitting has

Tigers' Camp Is Made A Monastery by Order

Lakeland, Fla., March 11 (U.P.).—Mickey Cochrane put up the bars today and made a baseball "monastery" of this training camp town where the Detroit Tigers are getting into shape and hope to win back the American League pennant.

"I'm cracking down on the boys because we have a battle ahead of us if we are to win back our laurels," he said.

Cochran's new rules include the following:

1. Wives barred.
2. All players must live at the hotel.
3. Stars and rookies accorded the same treatment.
4. No outside activities that will interfere with training.

22,000 Pinmen Open Tourney

New York, March 11 (AP).—Tonight 280 pin busters turned the 212th Field Artillery Armory into a bedlam as they opened the largest and longest American Bowling Congress.

Over 22,000 keglers from 31 States and Canada opened an assault on the pins that will not end until May 4. At times the noise sounded like the firing of cannon as the 16-pound balls crashed into the pins on the 28 mirror-like alleys.

Mayor Fiorello LaGuradia set none too good an example when he knocked over only one pin with the first ball. He asked for a chance to vindicate himself and on the next attempt got a 5-8-10 split.

The opening was indeed an auspicious one for the debut of the greatest sporting extravaganza in the Nation's largest city. The huge drill shed was packed to capacity. Leading figures in bowling circles, occupied every box. A band furnished the noise until the bowlers swung into action.

Although none of the opening scores threatened the five-man team record of 3,199 made by the Milwaukee tea shops in 1927, Al Carroll, of West New York, N. J., youthful member of one of Pabst's 28 teams, created something of a sensation when he bowled 274 in his first game.

Boudreau Captain.

Champaign, Ill., March 11 (AP).—Louis Boudreau, of Harvey, Ill., star sophomore forward on the University of Illinois basktball team which shared the Big Ten championship with Minnesota, was elected captain of the 1937-38 squad today at the annual basketball luncheon.

Merrick Boys Win Title; Aggies Triumph, 24-23

WPA Five Takes 52-33 Rout From Y in Post Court Tourney.

For the second time in three nights, the unheralded Department of Agriculture's 145-pound team stole the show in The Post's A. A. U. tournament in the Heurich gymnasium by defeating the Columbia Beverage five, 24 to 23, with another sensational comeback. The first title of the tourney was decided when the Merrick Boys' Club walked off with the 100-pound honors, over the "Y" quintet, 14 to 3, in the evening's opener.

In the only unlimited battle of the night, the District WPA five was too good for the Y. M. C. A. team, despite a second half comeback, winning, 52 to 33, led by big Bill Noonan with 19 points. The victory qualified Commissioner Allen's boys for a semi-final berth.

Coach Tom Gearty's Merrick Boys Club five added The Washington Post cup to its trophy collection while members of the winning team adorned their chests with gold medals, also a gift of The Post. The losers received silver medals. Trailing, 2-9, at half time, the "Y" boys were never in the running, David Davis' field goal being the only floor goal scored by the losers. Marshall Dellinger led the winners with 6 points.

A comeback spirit that has enveloped the members of the Aggie team was again evident last night and thrilled the handful of spectators. The Beverage five jumped into an 8-2 lead, only to trail 8-9 at half time. The second half was nip-and-tuck.

Columbia grabbed a 22-20 lead

Cubans Hold Giants to 1-1 In 12 Innings

National League Titlists Get Only 5 Hits Off Rival Hurler During Tilt.

Havana, March 11.—Featuring a continued improvement in the pitching department but not much in the way of offense, the New York Giants were held to a 12-inning 1-all tie by the Cuban All-Star Professionals in a drizzling rain today.

The Giants managed only five hits off Ramon Bragana, who went the full distance for the Cubans. The big leaguers scored their lone run in the first inning, and thereafter were unable to add to it.

Lefty Al Smith, Dick Coffman and Rookie Tom Ferrick divided the Giants' mound assignment and stayed out of danger except for the eighth, when the Cubans brought in the tying run. Smith was impressive in holding the Cubans hitless for the first three innings.

Helen Dettweiler Wins; To Meet Miss Traung For Belleair Golf Title

Victory Gives District Girl Her 2d Chance to Win a Tourney.

Field in Belleair Event Is Fastest in Any of Florida Affairs.

By the Associated Press.

Belleair, Fla., March 11 (AP).—Helen Dettweiler, young Washington, D. C., golf star, gets her second chance to win a Florida winter tournament here tomorrow when she meets Dorothy Traung, San Francisco, in the Belleair women's meet.

Survivors of probably the fastest field of women golfers to enter a Florida tournament this season, including Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, Philadelphia, six times national champion; Patty Berg, the Minneapolis redhead; Kathryn Hemphill, Columbia, S. C., winner of three Florida tournaments, and Jean Bauer, Providence, R. I. Miss Dettweiler and Miss Traung will meet in the 18-hole final match tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

Miss Dettweiler was defeated in the finals of the Palm Beach tournament by Miss Berg.

To reach the finals, Miss Traung defeated Miss Bauer, conqueror of Miss Berg in the first round, 3 and 1, and Miss Dettweiler eliminated Goldie Bateson, Milwaukee, Wis., 4 and 2.

Both Miss Traung and Miss Bauer were out in 41, 1 over women's par, and turned all even.

Miss Bauer went 1 up by winning the eleventh, but Miss Traung took the twelfth, thirteenth and fourteenth holes, dropped the fifteenth and won the sixteenth and seventeenth.

Two topped shots on the sixteenth and seventeenth holes cost Miss Bauer the match as Miss Traung won the two holes with fives.

Miss Dettweiler, whose golf has been the most consistent all through

Harris Sees Close Fight For Pennant

Rates Yankees Best, But Thinks Tribe, White Sox Dangerous.

Orlando, Fla., March 11.—Bucky Harris, head man of the up and coming Washington Senators, thinks the American League's got something this year and is willing to bet on it.

"If the Yankees take the rest of us on another buggy ride and cop the pennant by 19 games, I will give Joe McCarthy a piggy back ride from Yankee stadium to Brooklyn and apply for citizenship papers in Flatbush," promised Bucky. "Laugh all you want to, but in my books the race is going to be the closest in years.

As his listeners shook their heads and muttered that they couldn't see much use in holding an American League pennant race at all this year, Bucky, a right shrewd fellow when it comes to analyzing ball clubs, explained how he came to his conclusions.

"Sure, you got to give the Yanks the call as the heavy favorite, the one team to beat, but they're going to have some woe and don't kid yourself. Not only has every club in the league improved but does anyone think the Yanks can do better than last season?"

Free Aide in Barrow.

"If Pat Malone and Bump Hadley win 26 and lose only eight between them, I'll give them a free ride in a wheel barrow down Fifth avenue. They won't do it. Lefty Gomez is bound to do better, but not enough to offset the slips by Bump and Pat. DiMaggio unquestionably is a real fine ball player, but he'll have to be plenty good to hit .323 his second year. You know pitchers invariably do better with a sensational rookie the second year. They study him and his batting style all winter while the batter sits around in the sun."

Bucky called attention to the fin-

Baxter Stages Sit-Down Strike; Hader Sat On in Mat Festivity

By Bill McCormick.

Laverne (Funny Mans) Baxter staged the first sit-down strike known to the wrestling industry at Turner's Arena last night. At the time Baxter decided he would squat in protest against the presence of a radio announcer he was hexing, the arena was so overstuffed with a turn-away crowd that most of the customers couldn't find a place to sit.

Of course, the final sitting—or rather reclining—was done by Baxter's opponent, Jack Hader, who was stretched out flat at the end of 32 minutes of barroom brawling.

The sit-down was occasioned by some sort of an altercation between Radiorator Tony Wakeman and Baxter on a sports broadcast last night. The boys were pulled apart in the studio and apparently all was forgotten.

Baxter spotted Wakeman, who radioed the rough and tumble from the ringside, just as he was called to the center of the ring for instructions.

"I will not wrestle while that so and so is barking about the bout through a microphone," he informed Referee Benjamin Bortnick, pointing an accusing finger at Wakeman.

Wakeman refused to relinquish his microphone, so Baxter sat down in his own corner. After much head scratching, Bortnick finally gave the official "commence firing" signal, and Hader dragged Laverne from his corner by the feet, starting the action. After that it was every man for himself, with Bortnick in the middle.

Baxter had a rough bandage on his knee, which he persisted in rubbing across Hader's face. It was finally removed, but only after Bortnick and Jack had ganged up on the evil one.

Having lost several shirts to Baxter, Bortnick removed that garment early in the match, sticking out his tongue in derision at Baxter as he did so. This so enraged Laverne that he stripped Benjamin of his undershirt, leaving the portly little arbiter looking like a well-fed and active Billiken.

Baxter did everything unexpected. He even bled, which is against the principles of the better grapplers. At one point he tried to bite Hader, but he has no teeeh so no damage was inflicted.

The finish came as Baxter was out of the ring and Hader reached over to slam him back on the mat, instead of submitting to the slamming, Baxter kicked Hader, who dove head-first into the billowy midsection of Bortnick. The impact felled Hader, and also Bortnick, who was unable to get up to count out Jack for several minutes.

Hader's prostrate form was removed from the ring by the Fuller Construction Co.

In a semifinal scheduled for 30 minutes, Ed Meske won on a disqualification from We Willie Davis after 27 minutes of rough house. In other scheduled 30-minute contests, Gus Sonnenberg tossed Floyd Marshall, Hank Barber downed Scotty McDougall, and Jim Coffield bested Charley Allen.

Woodsia Upsets Rich Cream at Tropical, Pays $93.50 Mutuel

Carried Rich Cream and Others Wide; Mixwell Defeated.

By the Associated Press.

Tropical Park, Fla., March 11.—Empty Bottle, making his first public appearance since trailing the big field that contested the Hialeah Inaugural Handicap, turned up in top form and won the Orange Blossom Special, a six-furlong dash that occupied the honored position on today's program. The Mrs. E. B. Carpenter colorbearer, lightly campaigned this winter, won by two lengths, easily, in the sparkling time of 1:11 4-5, and paid $10.70.

Mixwell, in the silks of Mrs. F. Langebartels, gained the place by a half length over I. J. Collins' Debate. Mrs. Emil Denemark's Sir Quest, favorite in the field of six sprinters, finished fourth after being outrun all the way.

Goldey F., the $150 yearling that began her career in Florida last year, winning eight straight races, including the Hialeah Juvenile Championship and other stakes in the North before tasting defeat, again demonstrated that she is not the filly she used to be. Winner of 11 of her 14 starts and of $17,470 as a juvenile, Mrs. W. A. Bridges' 3-year-old ran another disappointing race in the role of second choice.

She appeared sore going postward, but showed speed enough to run along with Empty Bottle almost to the stretch before retiring to finish fifth. Empty Bottle never faltered, holding Mixwell and Debate safe through the stretch.

Melody Maid, a daughter of Caruso that seems at home in any going, showed a smart performance to lead home a field of platers in the second event. Although next to last at the break, the filly picked up horses steadily, reached contention while racing on the inside, then wore down Emir in the last furlong, to score by a half-length, at $15.40 for $2.

Alice Highland, the $7.80 favorite, spread-eagled a field of ordinary 3-year-olds in the 6-furlong curtain raiser here today. Breaking away from her opposition just after the break, the Kai-Sang filly increased her advantage so fast that nothing could threaten her chances after the first furlong. She galloped home by six lengths, with Hubert LeBlanc sitting tight. Romney Royal gave chase all the way and was an easy second over Madonna. The time was 1:13 flat.

By saving many lengths on the inside while several contenders were carried out by Rich Cream at the home turn, Woodsia, with Bobby Merritt up, won the Half-mile test for maiden 2-year-old fillies at odds of $93.50 for a $2 straight ticket. Place tickets called for $40.90, and the show, $14.40. Oddesa Lady, which probably was best, was beaten a half-length while taking the place by a like margin from Rich Cream.

Wall Is Suspended.

Nick Wall, who rode Rich Cream, drew a suspension of ten days from the stewards for carrying out horses.

Kindred Spirit, a plater that always rewards well when he wins, was in a running mood for the mile and a sixteenth fourth contest. The 5-year-old gelding, paying $24.10, just lasted to beat the heavily supported Hot Cake, winner of his last two, by a half length. Top High made up a world of ground and finished third, two lengths behind.

Form players availed themselves of one of their rare opportunities to cash a bet when they backed Admite down to slightly better than 2 to 1 in the sixth race. Well handled by Johnny Longden, the veteran plater was kept on the trail of the fast-stepping longshot. Monks Gold, and ran that fellow into defeat in the last furlong.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MELODY MAID, $15.40, $10.90, $6.90; EMIR, $5.40, $4.00; NARISE, $5.30.

MELODY MAID broke a bit slow, moved up with a rush on inside, got through entering stretch and drew out, but was driving hard to stall off the determined bid of EMIR. Latter took lead around turn and held on gamely. NARISE, well up all the way, was next best. JILDAC ROSE had no mishap. INSCONA broke fast, showed speed for quarter mile, then quit. REAL JAM was poorly handled.

$2.00 DAILY DOUBLE, FIRST AND SECOND RACES, PAID $95.90.

THIRD RACE—Four furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For maiden fillies, 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:08. Off at 3:11. Winner, Mrs. W. Parrish's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WOODSIA, $93.50, $40.90, $14.40; ODDESA LADY, $7.80, $5.30; RICH CREAM, $4.30.

WOODSIA scored a very lucky victory. She saved many lengths on turn when RICH CREAM carried the field out entering stretch. ODDESA LADY was pounds the best and would have won but for being carried to the outside fence. RICH CREAM had plenty of speed. SCOUT GIRL closed some ground. BESTEST stopped badly after showing early speed. MISS COLLINS saved many lengths on turn.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:43. Off at 3:44. Winner, Mrs. E. Gilkes' ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—KINDRED SPIRIT, $24.10, $8.40, $5.00; HOT CAKE, $3.70, $2.80; TOP HIGH, $3.90.

KINDRED SPIRIT, running in best form, raced MAID OF ARCHES into defeat, took lead around turn and gamely stood long drive. HOT CAKE moved up very fast on inside, then came to the outside, closing gamely. TOP HIGH trailed far back as usual, came through on inside and finished with a rush. MINSTRELETTE ran a very poor race, being upable to keep up at any part of the race. BRINY DEEP stopped badly.

WEATHER, CLOUDY. TRACK, GOOD.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. The Orange Blossom Special. For 3-year-olds and upward which have not won since January 12, maiden races excepted. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Two-dollar mutuels paid—EMPTY BOTTLE, $10.70, $6.00, $5.00; MIXWELL, $12.30, $8.10; DEBATE, $5.30.

EMPTY BOTTLE broke alertly, raced GOLDEY F. into defeat, drew away around turn and won nicely in hand. MIXWELL quickly ran into a contending position, came around field entering stretch and finished fast. DEBATE slipped through on inside and gamely stalled off the challenge of SIR QUEST. Latter was hard ridden and had no excuse. GOLDEY F. appeared sore. MISS DIGNITY was outrun.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward which have not won since December 12. Start good. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 4:43. Off at 4:44½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ADAMITE, $6.10, $4.20, $2.90; MONK'S GOLD, $13.20, $7.20; BOUNDING COUNT, $3.40.

ADAMITE rated along behind pace to the final furlong, then shot to the front and won going away. MONK'S GOLD opened wide gap going into first turn, showed good speed, but weakened suddenly. BOUNDING COUNT closed some ground. SOCK DOLOGER had plenty of speed for six furlongs, then tired. SCOTCH PEPPER ran well.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward which have not won since December 12. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 5:13. Two-dollar mutuels paid—THISWAY, $93.80, $32.70, $12.10; TRANSIT LADY, $4.50, $3.10; MISS TWINKLE, $3.50.

THISWAY, suddenly finding his racing legs, began to move up in run down backstretch, slipped through on inside, took lead entering stretch and won going away. TRANSIT LADY got away fast, was rated along and had no mishap. MISS TWINKLE had speed for half a mile, then tired. UBALD G. had no excuse. MADDENING closed some ground.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward which have not won since December 12. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:43. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BAYDROP, $27.40, $11.80, $6.60; LANGUOROUS, $6.40, $4.10; ARGOAN, $6.50.

BAYDROP, hustled into a contending position, began to close ground entering stretch, came to outside and won going away. LANGUOROUS was hard ridden and held on well. ARGOAN had plenty of speed, set pace and held on gamely. BERRY PATCH slipped through on inside and ran good race. BRUSH PAST closed a big gap.

Bob Turner to Tangle With Jones at Arena

Bob Turner, Newport News knockerout, will tangle with Jimmy Jones, Baltimore middleweight, in a six-round preliminary to the Danny London-Ray Ingram feature bout at Turner's Arena next Monday night. Turner boasts a good record in the division and Jones is a brother of Ivan Nedomatsky, Southern Conference champion.

At the Post . . .

with Bill Bennings.

First Race—Our Crest gets the call in the day's opening event. Needs only the right handling. Tramway is a fair sort and figures to chase the top one to the wire. Jack Snipe to take care of the others.

Second Race—Many Moons and Epitaph should battle it out for the chief award in this field. Both are fit and ready. Good Dame should be no worse than third.

Third Race—Westys Hero seems to have found a field that serves purposes. This one has plenty of speed and I see no reason for mistakes. Maemute and Darby Delt to battle it out for the place money.

Fourth Race—This is a rather open event and I'm forced to string along with Ipso Facto. This one will have Square and Joan Asbestos to take care of.

Fifth Race—Yetive is nicely placed in this field and is deserving of backing. Jub Jub will be ready if the top one makes mistakes. Phlox for the minor award.

Sixth Race—Starwick promises to do a lot of running in this company and gets the call. Slippery Jim for the place and Touche to show.

Seventh Race—Espinaca should go well in this company and needs only good handling. Westys Duchess figures close to the first named. Continuity should take a pay-off position.

Eighth Race—Move Faster, Keep Out and Durwrack is the way I prefer them in the day's finale.

Best Best—Starwick.

Catholic, American U. Teams Try New Rules in Game Tonight

Center Jump Out, to Use Smaller Ball

Game Marks Resumption of Series After 5-Year Intermission.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

What may be the beginning of a new era in basketball will mark the end of two college campaigns tonight when Catholic University and American University get together for their first party in five years at Brookland. The game, scheduled for 8:30 o'clock, will be ultra-modern in every respect, although the schools are expected to use the same old players.

A new rule calling for elimination of the center-jump, except when putting the ball in play at the start of each period, will be employed along with a new type ball. The latter is a super-super stream-lined affair with less seams than a billiard ball, and much smaller than the ball now used. Its resiliency is expected to cause quite a furore, among the players as well as rule-makers.

American comes up to the game with a record of nine victories against as many defeats under two coaches. Catholic, although andowed with only one coach, has won the majority of its games and will call it a successful year regardless of the outcome of tonight's struggle.

The game will be the first between the schools since an outburst of fisticuffing between a few absent-minded boys in their last game in 1932. School officials couldn't see the advantage of wasting good matches on 40-cent basketball customers, so they terminated the series with the idea of resuming relations in bigger and more profitable surroundings. Somehow or another they never got around to it, so business will be resumed at the old stand.

The game also marks the close of Hermie Schmarr's brilliant career at Catholic. Zeke Brown, a teammate, Syd Fink of American also reach the end of the trail.

Point-to-Point Event Is Set at Middleburg

Middleburg, Va., March 11.—A hunter point-to-point and a team race, combination of the annual hunter trials and the old-fashioned point-to-point race, will be held Saturday, March 20, at 1 p. m. under the auspices of the Middleburg Hunt. The start and finish will be at the same place and may be learned from the Middleburg Central not earlier than 6 p. m., Friday the 19th. Entries will close Saturday, March 13. The fee is $5 and post entries will be accepted at $10.

What Have You Is 50-1 For the Grand National

London, March 11 (U.P.).—Latest call for odds of 50 to 1 against Frank Gould's What Have You to win the Grand National Steeplechase at Aintree next Friday brought a bet of $15,000 on the American bred horse, the Victoria Club announced today.

Golden Miller, owned by Dorothy Paget, of England, was installed as favorite at 100 to 12, succeeding Vivian Smith's Ready Cash, which now is rated at 50 to 1.

Petersen Leads Maroon.

Chicago, March 11 (AP).—Kendall Petersen, of Long Beach, Calif., junior guard on the University of Chicago basketball team, was elected captain of the 1938 Maroon squad today.

Time Out! . . . . By Chet Smith

I told 'em they shouldn't have hired that fullback from America.

Yanks Still Murderers Row; Grove in Best Condition Ever

Tampa, Fla., March 11 (AP).—The "Kellys" beat the "Sheehans" 1 to 0 today in the first practice game of the Cincinnati Reds' spring training camp.

Coach George Kelly's team got their run in the second inning on a ringing double by Rookie First Baseman Frank McCormick, a passed ball and a putout at first. The hit was the only one allowed during three innings by Lee Grissom, southpaw hopeful.

Saratoga, Fla., March 11 (AP).—Bob (Lefty) Grove, Red Sox southpaw star who maps out his own training program, gave himself an oversized dose of work during today's two-hour drill under a blistering sun.

Grove took a much longer warm-up than Manager Joe Croning prescribed for his other hurlers and then tampered off by cutting loose in a long bunting drill. Lefty boasts he is in better condition than he has been since he left the Athletics.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 11 (AP). The Boston Bees' regulars pounded Vic Frasier, Dallas pitching rookie, for four hits and five runs in the sixth inning today to defeat the Yannigans, 5-3, and even the intra-club practice series.

Pasadena, Calif., March 11 (AP).—Manager Jimmy Dykes, touring a movie lot with his Chicago White Sox as guests of Comedian Joe E. Brown, hinted today his 1937 outfield will be composed of Rip Radcliff, Larry Rosenthal, and either Dixie Walker or Mike Kreevich. If Walker gets the call it will be an all left-handed-hitting outfield, which Dykes said would be balanced by the numerous right-handed hitters among the infielders and catchers.

St. Petersburg.—The New York Yankees are still murderers' row. In the season's first intra-camp game today, the Regulars landed on three pitchers for 13 hits and an 8-0 victory over the Yannigans, with Red Rolfe and second-string catcher Dick Glenn belting homers. Seven of the runs came off Bump Hadley and Lefty Gomez, who pitched six innings for the Yannigans.

New Orleans, La., March 11 (AP).—Manager Steve O'Neill asserted today after coaching the offerings of Bob Feller, the Cleveland Indians' youthful strikeout artist: "I've been around baseball nearly 30 years and I've never seen a better change of pace."

"I've seen pitchers work a baseball lifetime on a change of pace," O'Neill continued, "without ever perfecting it to the point this kid has reached already. He's just a freak. That kind comes along once in 50 years."

Clearwater, Fla., March 11 (AP).—Van Lingle Mungo, fireball right-hand pitcher of the Brooklyn Dodgers, ended his holdout today by signing for 1937 at a salary believed to be $15,000.

San Antonio, Tex., March 11 (AP).—Manager Rogers Hornsby's ax fell today for the first time of the training season at the Browns' camp, severing eight hopefuls from the roster. They were routed to Laredo, Tex., camp of the San Antonio Missions.

The boys not yet ripe in the Rajah's opinion included five young pitchers, Nick Martinocich, of Detroit; Darrel Jackson, Superior, Wis.; Russel Mason, Bob Helder, the biggest boy in camp, and Joe Boyd, Elmira, N. Y. Others released are John M. Stanley, outfielder from Detroit; Harold Snyder, catcher, St. Louis, and Conley Fox, infielder.

Lon Warneke has been picked to open Saturday's game with the National League champions. The starting line-up and batting order was announced today as Gutteridge, third base; Pepper Martin, right field; Padgett, centerfield; Padgett, centerfield; Medwick, leftfield; Mise, first base; Cuccinello, second base; Durocher, shortstop; Owen, catcher, and Warneke.

Lakeland—The Detroit Tigers played their first intrasquad game of the 1937 baseball season today, Coach Cy Perkins' nine defeating Manager Mickey Cochrane's, 4 to 3. The game lasted four innings and was marked by the victors' heavy hitting.

Winter Haven—A rigid physical examination for all players has been added to the spring training routine of the Philadelphia National League baseball team.

Dr. Cotter Boyle examined eight players today and will continue to give the physical tests daily until every member of the squad has been examined.

Western Bows To Georgians In Court Play

Staunton, Massanutten Win in South Atlantic Basket Tourney.

Western was still very much in the ball game and led the giant Georgians, 22-20, with four minutes and a half to play. The lead exchanged hands seven times in all and the score was tied four times.

Monroe, with a 6-foot 7-inch center and averaging well over 6 feet per man, appeared fading a bit early in the last period, which opened with the Georgia team leading, 20 to 18. Capt. Gerald Burns then put Western ahead of Georgia's Prep School champions, 22 to 20, when he broke through for two baskets in a row.

The 6-foot 7-inch center, Parker Garner, then took a hand in the scoring and sank a pot shot to give Monroe the lead. Two minutes and 15 seconds to go. Western was getting the ball and sailing down court but was bungling its passes under the baskets, and Ralph Ryder, Monroe captain, took advantage of this rather ragged display to come through from a scrimmage under the net to build the lead up to 26 to 22 with a minute to play.

Western's offensive sallies failed to register anything in the way of points but considerable in the way of muffed passes, and the game ended forthwhile.

Looking very much overrated in view of its No. 2, seeded post of honor, Western started off by yielding a 6-4 lead in the first period. Lamar Murphy, who averaged 20 points per game for the gents from Georgia was leading the Monroe offensive and his two baskets in the second period jumped the Georgia lead to 12-7.

Paul Heil, dogged Western guard, sank two shots in a row, however, and the half ended with Western trailing 16-11. In the second minute of the second half, Western went into the lead for the first time, 13-12, when Burns, high scorer for Western with 10 points, sank one of his four baskets.

He followed with another and Western had its biggest lead of the game, 15-12, but Farmer, Murphy, Gaston and Hyder scored and the third period ended with the score 20-18. Then it was that Burns shot the Georgetowners back in the lead with two stright double-deckers as Western's offensive flashed brilliantly for a brief period.

and Davis of the eventual winners tied the score at 22 all with a sensational basket. Gabe put the Aggies ahead with less than a minute to play with a one-hand basket, traveling at full speed. A futile foul shot by Hunter ended the losers scoring with 8 seconds to play.

The unlimited clash was one-sided in the first half, WPA leading by 28-6. The Y. M. C. A. five amazed the crowd in the second half with a rally that pulled the score to 22-30 before Bill Noonan regained his eye to send his team ahead with a final 18 point margin of victory. John Eaton, of the "Y" five, with 17 points was second to Noonan in scoring.

Members of winning Merrick five: Franklin Smith, Philip Friedman, Harold Katz, Marshall Dellinger, Duke Coppage, Babe Holland. William Works, Robert Poston, Richard Poston, Audrey Estep.

Members of Y. M. C. A. five: Francis Councelman, Jack Frost, Davis Davis, John Honaker, Jack Leach, John Murphy, Wilford Hayes, Swanson Moore, Wilbert Imlay, James Mahoney.

The United Typewriter Greys will attempt to halt the determined bid of the Rockville girls' sextet for The Post's A. A. U. crown in the feature game of a triple-header bill in Heurich's gymnasium tonight.

Other contests include the 115-pound class finals between the Y. M. C. A. five and the Langley Athletic Club, and a banner unlimited clash between the George Washington Freshmen, defending champions, and the Sterling Restauranters.

Only Nats, Tigers, Giants Are Free of the Holdout Epidemic

New York, March 11.—The American League, traditionally the timid Tory of the baseball world, has 13 rebel holdouts to the National's 9, an Associated Press survey revealed today.

Every club in the majors, except the New York Giants, Detroit Tigers and Washington Senators has at least one belligerent, and the wealthy Boston Red Sox have more than anybody else with four.

The two most serious holdouts are, of course, Jerome Herman Dean, of the Cards, who is the loudest, and Lou Gehrig, of the New York Yankees, who is the quietest. Dean, the only Cardinal not signed, is financially farther away from signing than anybody else. He has demanded $50,000 and has been offered $22,500 plus a bonus.

One new revelation was made in the Yankee situation today. Owner Jacob Ruppert said Pitcher Red Ruffing had lowered his demands from $30,000 to $18,000. He was offered $15,000. The other squealing Yankee is Joe DiMaggio, who is said to have been offered $15,000, which is $6,500 more than he got last year. He wants $17,500. Gehrig is asking $50,000; has been offered $36,000.

Four Red Sox Belligerents.

The four Red Sox holdouts are Eric McNair, who was given a slight increase over last year's salary; Roger Cramer, who was asked to take a slight cut, and Johnny Kroner and Jack Russell, both slashed badly.

The Cleveland Indians are the only other American League team with more than one holdout. They have three: Earl Averill, who thinks his 1936 batting record of .378 entitles him to $17,500; Pitcher Johnny Allen and Catcher Billy Sullivan.

Young Sullivan hit .351 in 93 games last year, but his receiving was ninth among the 12 regular catchers in the league. This, reasons Boss Cy Slapnicka, scarcely entitles the lad to the 100 per cent increase he is said to be asking. Averill and the club are so far apart he has been told he can make a deal with any other club to trade himself.

The St. Louis Browns, Philadelphia Athletics and Chicago White Sox each have a single headache. Beau Bell wants the Browns to pay him $15,000 and they have offered him exactly half that much. Merritt (Sugar) Cain has asked the White Sox for $8,000, and they have countered with $6,000. And Wally Moses, of the Athletics, wants $10,000, which is $2,000 more than Connie Mack says he'll pay.

In the National, practically all the holdouts are stars. The Dodgers, with Pitcher Van Lingle Mungo and First Baseman Buddy Hassett out, seem to be having more trouble with less reason than anybody else.

Brooklyn officials are only $500 apart with both players. Van Mungo has asked for $15,000 and has been offered $14,500. Hassett wants $8,000 and the Dodgers insist on $7,500. This situation is expected to be cleared up soon, even if the Dodger fans have to take up a collection.

More of the Same.

Another strange situation exists in Cincinnati where the only holdouts are the irrepressible Floyd (Babe) Herman and Pitcher Don Brennan. A high salaried player for years, Herman was asked to take an amputation, and refused. General Manager Warren Giles has announced, however, that the Reds will be able to open in spite of Herman and high water.

Elsewhere in the senior loop the situation is more serious. Paul Waner, Pittsburgh's batting champion, is the only holdout on his club. President Bill Benswanger said once Paul agreed to terms, but when the contract arrived Waner refused to sign, contending he understood the figure Benswanger mentioned was higher.

The Chicago Cubs' star outfielder, Frank Demaree, is also out. Reliable figures on his wants are not available, but Demaree refuses to "split the difference" with the Cubs.

This Morning . . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Orlando, Fla., March 11.

There's no rancor in the heart of Old Alec McColl as he takes his leave of the Southern League and carries his ancient pitching arm to Jacksonville in the leaky-roof Southeastern circuit. Old Alec never did get much of a deal from organized baseball and, at his age, isn't expecting much.

POVICH.

It's a kind of promotion, at that, for Alec. At Jacksonville, the Methuselah of the mound will be the manager of the Washington-controlled franchise. He'll be charged with developing young talent for the Nats and on his recommendations will depend the future of the Jacksonville ball players.

But old Alec's situation at Jacksonville will be knee-deep in irony. Alec's going to pitch for the club as well as manage it. And when he stopped off at Orlando today to discuss arrangements with Clark Griffith, the Nats' owner asked old Alec to be on the watch for pitching talent, especially. The Nats could use pitchers.

That was the irony of it. Old Alec could name one pitcher, right now, who, he is positive, could win in the big leagues. That pitcher is Alec McColl, and the old fellow was half tempted to tell Griffith as much but his native shyness restrained him. He'd go along at Jacksonville, recommending young fellows who probably couldn't touch him as a pitcher, yet who had that desired commodity—youth—in their favor.

Old Alec's about 45 now. Nobody ever pinned him down to his exact age. Everybody likes Old Alec and simply don't bother about putting the question. They kinda feel he's had it pretty tough during his baseball career—a swell pitcher, who was buried in the bush leagues because his age was always against him.

Alec was something of a veteran in the American Association and Southern when the mighty pitching trio of the American League was Walter Johnson, Eddie Cicotte and the late Urban Shocker. That was around 1915, and it wasn't until 19 years after he started pitching in organized ball that Alec got his own chance for a big-league tryout.

That was in '33, when Joe Cronin was leading a staggering band of Nats into the American League pennant. He needed pitching help in those last, trying weeks of the season, and Joe Engel, down in Chattanooga, promised that a near-bald old fellow named Alec McColl was the man they wanted.

McColl was bordering on 40 then, but Cronin gambled, sent for the oldster. The Nats started him against the White Sox the day after he reported, and the old guy who had waited 19 years for the chance that came to many in their first three years of organized baseball, didn't fail. Into the record books went a 2-to-1 victory for McColl, who held the White Sox to four hits.

It was in something of a dream world that Old Alec found himself in September and October of 1933. He was in the big time, at last, and there was just a trace of giddiness in his carriage on that world series afternoon at the Polo Grounds as he was given the call to relieve Al Thomas, who had relieved Al Crowder.

But as Old Alec toed the rubber and flung the usual half-dozen warm-up pitches across the plate, you saw coolness and determination personified. Two innings he pitched—the seventh and eighth—and the Giants didn't get a hit off him. He set something of a record by getting the Giants out with nine pitches in those two innings.

Youth was the keynote of the Nats the next season, and after the 1934 training season, Old Alec who had spent his first spring in the camp of a big league team, was shunted back to Chattanooga. They brought him back again to Biloxi in '35, after a superb season at Chattanooga, but his tough old hide absorbed another wound when his name was omitted from the list that would be taken North.

Today, at Tinker Field, Alec knew his big league dreams were over. There wasn't any bitterness, just a kind of regret.

"Ya know," he said, "I sorta wish'd they'd keep me with Washington in '34. I might have stayed on. That season, I wasted a lot of good pitching down in the Southern League. With the Senators' staff all shot by injuries, there were a lot of young fellows getting a chance to pitch, but I guess they forgot about me. Yeah, I guess that's it."

Alec let his eye rove over the scene the Nats presented in practice.

"Not many of that old '33 bunch left," he mused. "There's Joe Kuhel and Buddy Myer and Cliff Bolton—and I guess that about washes 'em up. This game changes," and the old fellow stopped suddenly to reflect, perhaps that it hadn't changed much for him in those 19 years he spent in the minors.

The failure of the Nats to retain Old Alec in '34 must have been the unkindest of the bumps the old fellow had taken. It was during the winter of '33-'34 that he had swapped his world series money for an appendix operation and hoped to set out a-fresh to carve himself a niche in the big leagues. But Alec didn't talk of that.

"We were a better ball club than the Giants in that '33 series, but we didn't show it. 'Member what a tough time we had winning that last game to clinch the pennant. Walter Stewart just barely beat the Browns, 3 to 2, and Heinie Manush had to make a whale of a catch to save the game in the ninth. 'Member how he caught that ball in deep left center. He lost his cap and his glasses. Everything dropped but the ball."

Old Alec remembers his brief big league career, pitch by pitch. He ought to. He lived for it.

He wouldn't be surprised if he could still win in the big leagues. Had a nice season with Chattanooga last year. Managed the team one day when Clyde Milan was taken sick. Gave himself the pitching assignment that day and beat the second-place Memphis club, 1 to 0, with three hits.

Too bad Clark Griffith said he on the watch for young pitchers over there as Jacksonville.

Harris Predicts Close Title Race

ish made by Detroit last season and truly the Tigers were a cinch to be tough.

"From all I hear," said Bucky, "Hank Greenberg is in fine fettle. He's a truly remarkable hitter. With the terrific power he has he means a lot of ball games to a club.

Tribe Dangerous.

"I think Chicago will have a hard time doing as well as it did last year, but don't forget Cleveland. For several years, everyone has figured Cleveland a dangerous contender. Yet something always happened to the Indians. A spark was missing. Maybe that Bob Feller will give 'em that spark.

"Another reason why the race can't help but be closer is Boston. Gosh, the Red Sox can't do as badly as they did last year. A team with all that power and class can slump one year but not two years in succession. Don't overlook them."

School Links Meeting Is Set For Tonight

Schedules for Dawes Cup Play Will Be Drawn Up; Movies on Card.

The biggest get-together to date of the District of Columbia Scholastic Gold Association is scheduled tonight at the Washington Hotel, at 8 p. m., where Frank Emmet, of Georgetown Prep School, will gather all interested, including Birch E. Bay, Dr. W. C. Barr, George Diffenbaugh and others.

All students within a 15-mile radius of the city attending private or prep school are invited to attend and become members of the association. Schedules for the Dawes Cup among the public schools and for the private school league will be drawn up. Plans for the Metropolitan Tourney will be discussed, the course will be selected and officers and committees will be elected.

Motion pictures of the Horton Smith Lawson Little and Jimmy Thomson tour will be shown for the first time in Washington.

Tri-State Wins.

Cumberland, Md., March 11.—The Tri-State Mill and Mine Supply scored its sixth victory in seven Tri-State League second half starts by downing the Cumberland Dragons.

Out Fishing . . .

By Bill Ackerman.

OF MORE than passing interest are the rules and regulations for fishing in Shenandoah National Park. Approved by the Secretary of Interior and Arno B. Camerer, director, National Park Service, they are in effect immediately.

All waters on the western slope of the Blue Ridge Mountains are closed to fishing.

Open season on eastern slope is from April 15 to June 30, both dates inclusive. Fishing is prohibited between sunset and sunrise.

Other than artificial lures prohibited.

Artificial lures to have but one hook.

Size limit same as provided by Virginia law.

Creel limit in one day and maximum in possession one person is 20 fish of all species, including undersized fish retained because seriously injured.

There is no charge for fishing in the park beyond the regular Virginia State license.

Gratifying to all followers of Virginia streams, with but one exception, that of creeling injured, undersized fish. It is thought by many that poor fishermen and poor sportsmen will take advantage of this loophole.

The ban on the hours just before sunrise and after sunset, as well as compulsory use of artificial lures make for a far better sporting proposition.

By Bill Ackerman.

DURING the year 1933 anglers spent more than $115,000,000 in pursuit of their sport. In the same period of time the commercial fisheries of the Atlantic Coast grossed but $100,000,000.

The year 1935 saw the salt-water anglers of the Atlantic pay the sum of $20,000,000 in the direct furtherance of their fun, with another $20,000,000 for incidentals closely related to it. Their annual cost for the replacement of their tackle is over $10,000,000—their total investment close to $50,000,000. In the New York area alone, they spend $2,000,000 for it each year.

Six thousand, eight hundred sport fishing boats employing 14,000 persons cater to the estimated 5,000,000 anglers.

Frank T. Bell, Commissioner of Fisheries, Department of Commerce, estimates that during the year just past, the anglers of the country put into circulation $500,000,000, and in addition to buying more and better equipment, have vastly improved their seacraft.

Their average cost for licenses was but 3 per cent of the total; the balance being shared by outfitters, transportation companies, hotels, tackle dealers and gasoline, oil and motor distributors.

California sportsmen spent an average of $116.80 for a total of $63,000,000. New York adherents of the rod and reel spent $47,000,000, while New Hampshire garnered from visitors fishing her streams $6,000,000. Angling, rated by Michigan as her third largest industry, returns each year to the State of Utah $3,000,000.

ENTIRELY different conditions, due to the mildness of the past winter, will probably be the lot of the stream fisherman as he goes forth to whip favorite waters on April 1.

In spite of the fact that the Potomac is carrying a small volume of snow water, most of the watershed has had very little snow on it for several weeks. Streams in this section should, therefore, open in a condition not generally attained until about the middle of April, provided, of course, that the weather man doesn't decide on some last-minute tantrum to show what he can dish out to be contrary.

They should be well within their banks and on beds that haven't been scarred or ground to pieces from rolling rocks and tumbling ice.

The trout should be in better condition, from an early supply of food, that easily might be advanced beyond the usual initial course of earthworms, so that a wet fly would eagerly be accepted.

Mountain roads, not much at their best, and usually abominable in spring, are in better condition than they have been for several years. Those that might be classed as the cowpath variety are always to be shunned until mid-May, but the ones that have been laid with rock by the CCC boys are in excellent shape.

Exploration of these roads is always a lot of fun, and in good fishing country you are liable to strike many entrancing stretches of water that will prove far more productive than the close-to-the-highway streams.

After chipping in for an eagle 3 on the first hole, she went down 1 by losing the second and third. She quickly squared the match at the fifth and won the seventh and ninth holes, to turn 2 up.

Two brilliant recoveries on the short twelfth and fifteenth holes were all that saved Miss Bateson from a more decisive defeat. She chipped out of a trap on the twelfth and got her 3, and almost holed out on a chip from a trap on the fifteenth.

As for the Senators, they are out to get some revenge on the Chicago White Sox and Cleveland Indians, in particular, this year.

"We whipped the Yanks 9 times out of 22 games, a darned good showing, and we split even with the Tigers but the White Sox and Indians kicked us out of town every time we played them, so it seemed."

Newsom Starts; Slugging Halts

impressed Harris to the extent that he might give Wasdell a fling at an outfield job. With Nashville last year, Wasdell played the outfield in 15 games.

Buck Newson, upholding the class of Hartsville, S. C., pool rooms in a pocket billard battle with Jimmy DeShong, pride of Harrisburg's billiard parlors, lost a close decision to DeShong today in the Nats' hotel. Newson, on the verge of victory, scratched three times in succession and was forced to check off 15 points on his score.

Some practical joker created a furore among the Washington baseball correspondents at Tinker Field this morning by causing to be circulated the report that the Brady kid, from Washington, had run away again and was back in town.

Mt. Rainier Five Drubs Annapolis, 30-18, to Enter Court Finals

Shinn Star As Mounts Annex 22d

Allegany, Victor Over Frederick to Meet Them in Final.

Mount Rainier High School, Prince Georges County titleholder, advanced to the final round of the Western Shore bracket in its quest for the Maryland State scholastic title yesterday by defeating Annapolis High, 30 to 18, in the Ritchie Coliseum. It was the Mounts' twenty-second consecutive victory of the season and third straight in State play.

Coach Perry Wilkinson started a second team and for six minutes watched the Anne Arundel champs take a 6 to 2 lead. The victors' varsity five entered the contest at this point and ran the score to 14-6 at half time, dominating the play with 12 successive points.

The next two quarters were a duplication of the second with second and third stringers running up a 28 to 12 lead for the eventual winners. The visitors scored three baskets at this point to bring the final gap to a 12-point margin for the locals.

Allegany High of Cumberland, meets Frederick High today and the winner will meet Mount Rainier in the Western Shore finals in the Frederick Armory Monday afternoon. The winner of that game will meet the Eastern Shore victors for the State title later in the week.

Edgar Shinn, high-scoring guard of the Mounts, led the scoring again yesterday with 10 points, while O'Connor at center scored 6. The Mounts failed to tally from the foul line. Darden, of the losers, starred with 7 points.

Allegany Wins Over Frederick; Is in Finals

Hagerstown, Md., March 11.—Allegany High of Cumberland tonight won its way to the Western Shore finals in the State-wide basketball series by defeating Frederick High here, 32 to 8. The Frederick County champions were hopelessly outclassed. Allegany High, by virtue of tonight's victory, won the right to meet the winner of the Mount Rainier-Annapolis game. The finals for the Western Shore title will be played here Monday, with the winner meeting the Eastern Shore champions in Baltimore next Thursday.

At all stages of tonight's game Allegany was the master. The first quarter ended, 12 to 4; half, 24 to 4, and the third quarter, 30 to 6.

Frederick High Girls Win, Enter Semifinals

Frederick, Md., March 11.—Frederick High School's feminine basketball team advanced into the semifinal round of the Western Shore Elimination Tournament today by repulsing Hagerstown High School, 15-13, at Middletown. The local sextet, which trailed 10-5 in the first half, came back strong in the third and fourth periods to hold the taller Hagerstown team without a field goal.

Caseys Rally to Down FAA for Crown, 35-22

Scoring 12 points in the first three minutes of the second half, the Knights of Columbus courtmen broke an 11-to-11 half-time tie and went on to a 35-to-22 victory over FAA at Roosevelt High School last night. The victory placed the Caseys in the Community Center round-robin city-wide championship opening tomorrow night.

Blackwell and Crimmin led the winners' attack while "Chissie" Caspar's floor game was above par. Silverman starred for FAA.

Dean Again Quits for Good As $50,000 Demand Is Spurned

By the United Press.

Daytona Beach, Fla., March 11.—Dizzy Dean today again "quit baseball for all time."

He refused to accept a penny less than $50,000 to pitch for the St. Louis Cardinals and announced his "retirement" after two conferences with Presiden Sam Breadon.

Breadon offered Dizzy $22,500. Diz spurned the offer and reiterated his demands for $50,000 or else."

"Ole Diz is through with baseball," he announced.

He took a deep breath, and then launched into his annual tirade against Breadon and the Cardinals.

"Breadon keeps offering me $22,500," he said. "I want $50,000. And I ain't a-comin' down a cent. Not Ole Diz. Breadon said he was offering me more than Carl Hubbell of the Giants.

"Shucks, who's Hubbell? He don't put 'em in the cash register like Diz. Bill Terry and everyone in New York'll tell you that.

"I can quit baseball with no regret. I got a lot o' dough rolling in the till. Just signed a new radio contract to work three minutes twice a week. Anyway, tell the fans Dizzy won't have to worry about how he's going to get along. He'll make it all right. He'll make it better'n the Cards will without him.

"I'll tell you about the Cardinals. They'll probably win the first game of the season with Lon Warneke pitching against the Reds. Then they'll go down and down and down. Why they might even finish below the Phillies."

To emphasize that he is "through," Dizzy swung aboard a train for Jacksonville tonight, en route back to his home at Bradenton. As the train rolled out of the station, he thrust his head out a window and shouted to crowds around the platform:

"I'm through with the Cardinals and with Daytona Beach—and you can tell that to Sam Breadon."

A few minutes before he departed, Breadon summoned him to a hotel room for an eleventh-hour conference.

"Well, Dizzy," Breadon asked, "what about it?"

"Fifty thousand or nothing," said Diz.

Breadon said:

"Dizzy's unreasonable. He thinks he's a one-man team and that we can't win a pennant without him. Well, we won four in six years before he joined the club and only one in six years since he's been with us. If we allow Diz to run our organization, then I might as well get out of the business.

"I've enjoyed having Dizzy with us, but if he's decided to quit baseball I can't get him to change his mind. My top figure remains $22,500. He wants $50,000. We can't agree. That's all."

Baseball experts predicted Diz would sign soon.

Hoyas to Face Clever Court Rival Tonight

Penn State Game Will End Season for Hilltop Cagers at Tech.

Georgetown's courtmen will end their season against a clever brand of strategy as well as formidable opponents tomorrow night when they engage Penn State at Tech High School, for Head Coach John D. Lawler, of the Nittany Lions, is a past master at outsmarting opponents.

The game is the last of the Eastern Conference schedule and will have no bearing on the championship, although the Hoyas can tie for fourth by winning. It is scheduled for 8:30 o'clock, following a preliminary booked for 7 o'clock.

Working with a team of young giants, all over 6 feet tall with one exception, Lawler has a team on its hands whose record belies its ability. State knocked over Pitt once, West Virginia and Carnegie Tech, twice, and Georgetown once, only to have its title-drive interrupted by a 2-point defeat at Temple's hands. It bowed to Pennsylvania, Eastern League champion, by 8 points.

Lawler-coached teams have never lost more than six games in any season, and at Westminster in 1930 his boys dropped only one in 14. His all-time coaching record shows 152 victories against 33 defeats for an average of .821.

A. A. U. Ring Tourney Schedule is Revised

A change in the dates for the District of Columbia Amateur Athletic Union boxing championships was announced yesterday by Dr. O. U. Singer, chairman of the boxing committee.

The opening preliminary round will be held at Turner's Arena on Saturday night, March 20, with the semifinals scheduled for March 24. The finals were originally scheduled to take place Saturday night, March 20, but have been pushed back to March 27.

Mike Jacobs Arranges London Bout for Louis

New York, March 11 (AP).—Mike Jacobs, president and promoter of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club, today announced a working agreement with Brig. General Alfred Cecil Critchley, London sports promoter, and said that Joe Louis will engage in a fight in London early in the summer.

Jacobs' part of the agreement is to furnish American talent for Critchley's shows in the White City Stadium and Harangay Arena. Whenever an American appears on a card, Jacobs will have a half interest in the promotion.

Occidental Pin Team Leading District Loop

Bill Krauss Shoots a 401 Set; Other Bowling News of City.

The start of the fourth and final series of the District League, the city's major duckpin loop, resulted in a new leader adorning the much-coveted No. 1 position, Occidental Restaurant gaining command by virtue of a greater total pinfall than the champion Heurich Brewers could muster. The new leaders' rise to the top came with a smashing three-game victory over Georgetown on the latter's home alleys. Bill Krauss, making a serious bid for high individual average honors, featured Occidental's attack with a 401 set.

The Heurich Brewers, tied with Occidental in number of games won and lost, downed Lucky Strike the odd game, but was forced to accept the runner-up position, lacking the pin-spilling qualities of the pace-setters.

Rose Liquor, very much in the penant race, refused to be shaken, taking Convention Hall over the hurdles in three straight games to stay within a single game from the lead. Johnny Anderson paved the way for the Liquormen, sewing up the initial encounter with a double-header strike in its last box and totaling 420 for the set. Espey's 165 game was tops for the night.

High team honors were taken by the Brewers with a 679 game and a 1,906 set.

S. Kanns & Sons boosted its advantage to four games in the Department Store League last night at the Recreation drives in humbling Palais Royal, its closest rival, three games. Lansburghs moved into second place with an odd-game decision over Credit Bureau. Sid Solem, of Palais Royal, turned in the best individual effort, a 372 set.

Catherine Burrows, benefiting from the instructions she is receiving from her brother, Red Rhodes, Cools Fountain, ace of the Columbia Heights League, showed the way to the ladies in the C. & P. Telephone League last night at Arcadia, with a 119 game and 326 set.

The Hagerstown Brethren Christian Endeavors and the First Brethren C. E. will roll their third annual home-and-home match tonight at the Queen Pin alleys. Each group will be represented with two women's teams and three men's teams.

15-Mile Title Grind Scheduled Sunday

With 18 entries already no hand, officials in charge of the second annual District A. A. U. 15-mile championship run scheduled Sunday expect to have a banner field in line when the starter's run signals the start of the grind.

The list includes George Dickson, Jean Berthelot, Mellrose Athletic Association star and national 20-kilometer champion; Joe Kleinerman, St. Anselm's Athletic Club; Dave Kantrowitz, Mike O'Hara, French Sporting Club, all of New York; E. Wilson Rich, Cross Country Club, Baltimore; Jerry Looney, B. G. Chitwood, M. Coven, Bus Nicholson and George Shorb, Washington Track and Field Club.

W. Rittler, Dr. George E. Lieberman, Frank Worthington, George Casper and Johnny Clark, of the Passon Athletic Association, will represent Philadelphia.

Deutschland Promoter Would Close Title Bout

Berlin, March 11 (AP).—Walter Rothenburg, promoter for the Deutschland Halle A. C., today confirmed Max Schmeling's announcement in New York that a $250,000 guarantee was awaiting Heavyweight Champion Jimmy Braddock if he accepts an offer to defend the title against Schmeling in the Olympic Stadium, Berlin, this summer.

Rothenburg said he was holding himself ready to sail for the United States if Braddock manifests sufficient interest in the proposal.

Under tentative plans already drawn up, the seating capacity of the Olympic Stadium would be increased from 120,000 to 150,000.

Four Ball Gold Match Halted by Heavy Rain

Miami, Fla., March 11 (AP).—A steady rain today caused postponement until tomorrow of the match between Henry Picard and Johnny Revolta and Lawson Little and Tony Manero in the final of the international four-ball golf tournament.

It was the second postponement of the tournament. Rain caused part of the second round Monday to be put over to Tuesday.

Unattached Boxer Attaches Himself to a Title for Once

Eugene McGuiness, left, who set somewhat of a record for an unattached boxer in the recent Junior Golden Gloves tournament, receives the Loew's Capitol Theater Trophy for showing the greatest promise from Master of Ceremonies Red Skelton.

Officially, unattached amateur boxers are young punch pushers not affiliated with any club or organization.

Actually, the designation "unattached" means more than that. Unattached boxers seldom have the benefit of the good coaching necessary to develop a fighter. They enter the ring without the words of encouragement from team mates or rooters for certain clubs which spur on others.

Handicapped as they are by lack of connections, unattached boxers are usually the guys who are belted out in the first round of a tournament. All in all, they are almost always very forlorn figures. For one of them to win a tournament is almost unheard of.

Which makes the case of Eugene McGuinness the more remarkable.

McGuiness not only won the 100-pound championship in the recent District Junior Golden Glove tournament, but at the finish he was voted the Loew's Capitol Theater award for the boxer displaying the most promise in the entire competition!

Behind the performance lies a story which might just as well be recorded now just in case Eugene lives up to his possibilities and some day becomes a big time champion.

Back in 1935 and 1936, Carl Fontani was in charge of physical instruction at the Southeast Community Center. The Southeast Community Center is at Thirteenth and D streets. A little 80-pound kid started drifting over from the vicinity of Twelfth and Newton streets northeast, a distance of almost 2 miles—just to put on the boxing gloves.

The kid didn't show much promise, so Eugene McGuiness—for what was he—decided the daily walk to the gymnasium was not worth his while.

Came an announcement of the junior golden gloves and Eugene again looked up Fontanini, who no longer is associated with athletics.

"I think I can make a fighter now," he told Carl.

Sure enough, he had become a pretty fair boxer just from watching others, but he still couldn't punch. Fontanini took a tip from Maj. Harvey L. Miller, whose tactics revolutionized the Maryland University squad, and soon had Eugene punching like a champion. Which is just exactly what he did in the tournament in which he became one of the few unattached boxers ever to win a title.

Bank Clearings Recede From 10-Week High

Total for 22 Leading Cities Declines 1.1 Per Cent for March 10 Week.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 11.—After touching a ten-week high, bank clearings in the United States during the latest period declined. The total for 22 leading cities, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., for the week ended Wednesday, March 10, was $5,950,467,000, against $6,015,502,000 in the similar 1936 period, a loss of 1.1 per cent. This contrasted, with an increase of 17.2 per cent in a similar comparison a week earlier.

The volume at New York City of $3,815,767,000, compared with $4,207,506,000 of the year before, a decline of 9.3 per cent. Outside centers aggregated $2,134,700,000, which was 18.1 per cent higher than the $1,807,996,000 recorded in the corresponding week of 1936.

The week's clearings were lower than those of the preceding period by $1,159,156,000. Between the two similar weeks of 1936 there was a decrease of $49,156,000.

Figures at leading cities, together with percentage increases and decreases, compared with those of 1936, follow:

Idle Funds Up $70,000,000 For Past Week

Gold Reserves Climb to All-Time Peak of 11.484 Billion.

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board estimated last evening excess bank reserves totaled $1,380,000,000 on March 10, an increase of $70,000,000 for the week.

The rise in the supply of idle funds available for credit expansion was traceable partly to a $31,000,000 drop in money in circulation, bringing a back-flow to the banks of this amount, and a $30,000,000 decline in Treasury deposits with Federal reserve banks.

When the Treasury withdraws funds from reserve banks, they are disbursed into business and trade channels and thus flow into the commercial banking system to finally bring an increase in excess reserves.

The reserve board effected a 16 2-3 per cent increase in deposit reserve requirements March 1, and a similar increase will go into effect May 1.

When the higher requirements are fully effective, they are expected to "freeze" about $1,500,000,000 of idle bank funds. The increases were ordered to prevent a possibly injurious credit expansion.

The statement also recorded a $41,000,000 increase in gold holdings during the week ended March 10, lifting stock to a new all time peak of $11,484,000,000.

Wheat Prices Decline With Lull in Buying

Holders of Contracts for March in Liverpool Take Profits.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 11.—Nearly two cents setback of Chicago wheat prices today went hand in hand with a lull in buying demand that followed yesterday's immense European purchases.

Cables said navigation would soon re-open on the Danube, and release substantial quantities of wheat. Moreover, Liverpool reported that tenders of wheat today on March contracts there were larger than yesterday, and that the Liverpool market was affected by profit-taking operations of holders.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ⅝ to 1⅝ under yesterday's finish: May, 1.37⅛@1.37¼; July, 1.20⅝@1.20¾; September, 1.18⅛@1.18¼. Corn unchanged to ⅞ lower; May, 1.09⅝; July, 1.0⅞@1.05; September, 99¼. Oats, ½ to ¾ off; May, 47¾@47⅞, and rye unchanged to ⅛ down, May, 1.08⅝. In provisions, the outcome was unchanged to 20 cents decline.

Brokers' Loans Rise $87,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $1,147,000,000 for the week ended Wednesday.

The total represented an increase of $87,000,000 when compared with the previous week.

The Market

Stocks Go Through Profit-Taking Recession as Metal Rise Halts; Francs Gain.

New York, March 11.—March weather ruled in the securities markets. Stocks recovered slightly before the close of trading after rather general declines in the afternoon and a good start. Trading volume slipped on the lowering of prices, which the bulls regarded as a favorable sign and on the whole no great damage was done to the price structure. Commodities also settled after early strength. May wheat closed half a cent lower at 137¼ cents a bushel.

The profit-taking decline in stocks in the afternoon came after moderate advances in most sections had brought new high prices for numerous stocks. Rails had a brief run of strength and the leather shares were buoyant on the advance in hide prices. Oil stocks were favored and the metals began with a good deal of confidence. The market, nevertheless, lacked the extreme enthusiasm of recent sessions and blocks of thousands of shares were uncommon in the opening dealings. The ticker was able to keep up pretty well with the run of business.

All that seemed to indicate fatigue, and selling probably was encouraged when toward the close of the London market a sell-off developed in the metal markets, said to have been caused by fears of official intervention. When stocks have gone ahead too rapidly the market rarely has difficulty in finding an excuse for a change in direction.

It was natural that the most severe losses on the decline should be suffered by the stocks which have gone up with the most abandon. Chrysler fell about 3 points. Its strength yesterday may have come from too much confidence in reports of an early abandonment of the strike and today's contribution was the decision of the management to hire new quarters for its officers. It might not be a bad idea, as some regarded it, for a change of climate to be sought for the motor works as well.

Steel Sells Off.

Steel was another stock to sell off quickly, once the motors began to sputter. The stock looked unfamiliar around 122 to 123. Western Union dropped sharply. The rise in the can stocks was halted, and the oils lost their momentum for a while, but a few continued strong. Ohio Oil was particularly active, moving to a new high price. Republic Steel was an early sensation, but its rise was too rapid to hold. Coca-Cola, selling ex-dividend, climbed 2 or 3 points.

Tobacco stocks gave a steadier performance. Store stocks softened a point or so. A number of preferred issues uncovered thin markets and dropped 2 to 6 points on a few sales. In the list were Smelters, Cuban American, Harbison Walker, Lorillard, McCrory and Remington Rand. Strength was most pronounced in Vulcan Detinning, Simmons, McGraw Electric, International Paper, Hercules Powder, Atlas Powder, Coca-Cola, Crown Zellerbach and Borg-Warner.

Money markets were unchanged and Government bonds were almost stationary. High grade corporation bonds, on the other hand, weakened. Others followed stocks. Foreign exchanges looked to be under good control. Francs rallied with their official support necessary in order to give a good launching to the Government's new internal loan; but in any event it is expected that the issue will be well received and might draw out of London some additional hot money that had gone there from Paris. The supply of money here that possibly could be dislodged is not believed to be of any great importance. Sterling weakened, less because of any connection with dollars than because of French withdrawals, or the fear of them.

Stops.

One of these days, observed a boardroom loafer, the market will go hog-wild and Radio will sell at 12¾ . . . That just goes to show that optimism always rises in the spring . . . What an old familiar ring: Steel melting scrap advances again, for fourth time in two weeks, bringing price to new top of $23 a ton; rubber lifted to 24 cents a pound, the highest in seven years, or since former boom times; copper about to jump again to highest price since the 1929 boom, showing rise of approximately 50 per cent in past two or three months; lead, zinc and tin prices soar to highest since former inflation days; wheat pushed to highest price in eight years; meat prices quoted at highest in awful long time and vegetables of all sorts are mounting . . . Great Northern, as many see it, has a bit of an edge over Northern Pacific, but few would maintain that the edge is anywhere nearly so wide as 20 points. For years the stocks have run in the same block on parallel tracks, but Nipper now seems to be suffering from an inferiority complex . . . Slowly but surely Coca Cola is rising to another 200 price and another split in the shares.

Moonshine in Copper? Yes.

Some headlines from a recent article on copper published in the London Financial News: "Moonshine in the Copper Market? Groundless Fears of a Shortage. Arms Demand Overstressed. Increasing Supplies." Profits for the copper companies, it would appear are just now a little too good to last. Another price rise in domestic markets is anticipated, but that may well prove to be the peak, and considerable difficulty could follow, once the speculation begins to break.

That's Just Too Bad.

San Francisco has voted down a proposal to go into the electric lighting business. Perhaps too many 70-year-old voters went to the polls. At any rate spokesman Ickes cries out: "I still believe that the citizens of San Francisco, except those who are concerned only with their own selfish, personal interests, want to obey the law. However, it is not surprising that with a certain section of the press in San Francisco deliberately misrepresenting and suppressing the facts, the voters did not have presented to them information on the issue that they were entitled to have, if they were to vote intelligently." It may be wondered what was the matter with the radio that time.

N. Y. Bank Resources Reach All-Time Top

New York, March 11.—For the first time in history, resources of New York City banks crossed $20,000,000,000 at the last year end, it is shown by totals just compiled by the American Banker for all banks in the metropolis. On December 31, 1936, there were a total of 149 commercial banks, trust companies, private banks, industrial banks, and savings banks in New York City. They reported total resources of $20,013,228,300, a gain of more than $600,000,000 since last June 30, and of over $1,200,000,000 since December 31 a year ago.

Deposits also are at a record figure, standing at $17,105,816,000 on December 31, 1936, as compared with $16,016,015,400 at the end of 1935, and $11,637,178,700 for the city's reporting banks at the end of 1933.

Banking Group Will Debate Business Loans

Local A. I. B. Contest to Be Held on Evening of April 12.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

This year's public-speaking contest for members of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, will be held at 8 o'clock on the evening of April 12, at the chapter's headquarters in the Bond Building. Speeches will be made this year on the subject, "Is the decline in the proportion of commercial loans to deposits a permanent condition, and why?"

The winner of the local contest will receive the bank president's trophy which he, or she, will hold a year. The highest ranking speaker who meets eligibility requirements will also enter the national contest for the prizes awarded by A. P. Giannini, California banker. The first stage in this is a competition for speakers in district No. 2 of the institute where they will vie with winners from its component States, Pennsylvania, Delaware, New Jersey, Maryland and West Virginia. This meeting will be held at Charleston, W. Va., at a date to be announced later.

The district contest victor will be one of nine to compete in the final contest to be held in connection with this year's national convention of the institute at St. Paul, Minn. There are four prizes totaling $1,100 distributed to winners in this final competition. Entries for the local contest must be made with E. Wallace Schreiner, First National Bank of Alexandria, Va., who is local chairman, or J. Earle McGeary, of W. B. Hibbs & Co., district chairman.

Stone Appointment.

Warren S. Stone, actively identified with the Washington Junior Board of Commerce, has been appointed secretary of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association. Mr. Stone has been with the New York Life Insurance Co. for the past five years and has been associated with the Life Underwriters organization during that period. He became a chartered Life Underwriter in 1935, accomplishing the most unusual feat of passing all his examinations for the C. L. U. degree in one year—1933. It was necessary for him to wait two more years for the degree to comply with provisions requiring three years in the life insurance business before it is awarded.

N. Y. Life Report.

Assets of New York Life Insurance Co. on December 31, 1936, amounted to $2,404,236,413. According to the company's annual statement, 18.31 per cent of assets were in United States Government direct, or fully guaranteed, bonds; 16.81 per cent in first mortgages on city properties, 15.02 per cent in policy loans, and 13.62 per cent in railroad bonds. State, county and municipal bonds aggregated 9.49 per cent of total assets, and public utility bonds 8.98 per cent, while real estate, including the company's home office building at 51 Madison avenue, New York City, amounted to 5.27 per cent.

Banking Group Will Debate Business Loans

Local A. I. B. Contest to Be Held on Evening of April 12.

The principal item in the company's liabilities is the insurance and annuity reserve which amounts to over $1,957,000,000. Dividends left with the company at interest exceed $100,000,000 and the present value of future instalment payments is shown at over $97,000,000.

The company has a reserve for dividends payable to policyholders amounting to over $38,000,000, a special investment reserve of $50,000,000 and surplus funds reserved for general contingencies exceeding $123,000,000.

Building Boom in South.

A widespread revival in building and business in the South is reported by William Niller, Washington control manager for Brown, Harriman & Co., Inc., who, with Robert F. Maddox, jr., of the corporation's Atlanta office, has just completed a journey calling on clients throughout that section.

Mr. Niller said there is a marked upturn in agriculture and industry; cottom mills are operating on three shifts daily and residential building is showing great activity. The tourist trade is very large and, in some instances, are doubling their capacity. His business trip included all of Florida, Atlanta and Savannah, Ga., New Orleans, La., Mobile and Montgomery, Ala.

Fenner & Beane Sugar Survey.

Concerted action by world sugar producers to control the production and marketing of sugar is highly probable as the result of the coming world sugar conference to be held in London, April 5, in the opinion of an analysis of "The World Sugar Situation," prepared by Fenner & Beane, New York Stock Exchange and commodity firm.

"International agreement on the part of producers of other commodities, particularly copper, rubber and tin, has improved marketing conditions of these commodities and bettered prices materially. It seems probable that similar agreements can be established in the case of sugar," the study believes. "There is a strong probability of a new era developing in sugar through the concerted efforts of world producers.

Banking Notes.

At a regular meeting of the board of directors of Security Savings & Commercial Bank held this week, a semi-annual dividend of 3 per cent was declared payable March 31 to stockholders of record March 25.

Charles Delmar, president of Lincoln Service Corporation, industrial bankers of Washington, with a chain of operating offices in Maryland, Pennsylvania and Virginia, announced yesterday that all the present issue of stock, consisting of 10,000 shares of 7 per cent cumulative preferred and 30,000 shares of common, had been sold.

Robert C. Jones, head of the firm of Robert C. Jones & Co., investment bankers, is in Florida on a vacation.

J. Thilman Hendrick, partner in W. B. Hibbs & Co., and chairman of the board of Lanston Monotype Machine Co., has returned to Washington after a month's visit in Miami, Fla.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

A sharp gain by the French franc, following announcement of the terms of a new national defense loan, was accompanied yesterday by moderate declines in other active European currencies.

The franc in New York advanced .01⅛ of a cent to a quotation of 4.58 cents. The pound sterling, after an early movement upward, yielded its gains and was off ⅛ of a cent at $4.88⅜. Swiss francs were down .00½ of a cent at 22.81¼ cents and the Netherlands guilder, at 54.69 cents, was .03 of a cent lower. Canadian dollars remained unchanged at 100.00 cents.

In Paris the dollar was off, closing at the equivalent of 4.584 cents to the franc against the New York overnight rate of 4.569 cents. In London it advanced ⅛ of a cent to finish at 4.88⅜ to the pound, which compared with the New York overnight rate of $4.88⅛.

LOOK PRETTY, PLEASE!

. . . skirts are shorter! Glorify your legs with lovelier, sheerer

Myth Chiffons

by Van Raalte

It's a season of feminine prettiness—and lovely stockings play a major fashion role! Smart skirts are fourteen inches from the ground—that means that fourteen inches of stockings are apparent to the critical eye. Your stockings should say, "look pretty, please"—and here's the way to do it. The sheerer the stocking, the slimmer and more graceful legs and ankles look! Color has a lot to do with it, too, and the clear, true beiges that are in vogue for spring are very flattering! At The Hecht Co. you'll find the newest colors, the fashion right weights for every costume—with prices that have eye-appeal, too!
